Congressmen seek to delay Meskill vote

HARTFORD (UPI) — Liberal members of the Senate Judiciary Committee are seeking to delay the vote on the nomination of Gov. Meskill to the federal bench, according to published reports.

Some senators want clarification on two points raised Tuesday in testimony on the nomination to the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

One of the matters discussed was the state leasing program, currently under investigation for possible abuses. They also reportedly want to clear up a conflict between testimony from Judge William H. Timbers, a member of the appeals court, and Albert R. Connelly, a spokesman for the American Bar Association.

Sen. George L. Gunther, R-Stratford, deputy majority leader, has written a second letter to Judiciary Committee Chairman James O. Eastland, D-Miss.

The letter questioned possible involvement by Meskill in state leasing abuses and asked the committee to investigate further, although it did not elaborate on the issue.

The conflict between testimony by Timbers and Connelly is over whether other judges on the court favor or oppose the nomination.

Timbers, who favors the nomination, testified that at least 13 of the 16 active and senior judges on the court either favor the nomination or do not oppose it.

But Connelly, speaking for the ABA in opposition, questioned Timbers' statement saying he had interviewed a number of judges himself. He invited committee members to check with the judges personally.

Contract plan may aid entry into vet school

By LARRY KING

To make veterinary medicine education more available to New England students, the University of Connecticut and the five other New England land grant institutions are investigating the possibility of establishing contracts with existing veterinary schools to accept a certain number of New England students each year.

A university spokesman said contracting is a more reasonable course to follow at this time than establishing a new veterinary school because it would take five to six years to organize and construct a new facility.

While contracting is being considered, the New England Board of Higher Education is awaiting a revised report on a proposed New England regional veterinary school. The school probably would be located on a former state hospital site in Grafton, Mass. and financed by the states involved.

There is no indication concerning the likelihood of the Grafton site being accepted or how soon a veterinary school could be built, Ferguson said. However, he said contracts with existing schools should be pursued as a temporary solution until the problem is resolved.

The spokesman said Cornell University and the University of Pennsylvania are the two institutions closest to coming to an agreement on contracts, but he added, "None of the schools are seriously committed yet."

The Massachusetts legislature has agreed to appropriate funds for the regional school if at least two other states participate.

Only one out of 20 or 25 UConn graduates who applied to veterinary schools last year were accepted, in spite of a high quality preveterinary program, Ferguson said.

There is no veterinary school in New England and other states give admission priority to their own students, Ferguson told the Board of trustees last week. He said only 28 New England students were accepted to the nation's 19 veterinary schools in the fall of 1972, and only eight were from Connecticut.

Ferguson will meet Monday with the presidents of the other land grant universities to discuss contracting as an "interim measure," the spokesman said.

Nixon receives two subpoenas

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Special Prosecutor Leon Jaworski officially summoned private citizen Richard M. Nixon Thursday to testify as a government witness in the Watergate cover-up trial beginning Oct. 1.

Jaworski's office said he issued a subpoena Wednesday night for the former President to appear in the trial of six of his former White House and reelection campaign aides on charges of conspiracy and obstructing justice.

Meanwhile, a Senate committee postponed until Friday action on a resolution by Mike Mansfield to take public custody of Nixon's tapes and documents and prevent destruction of any Watergate tapes. A vote on the resolution had been scheduled Thursday but an insufficient number of committee members attended.

Nixon had previously been subpoenaed as a defense witness by his former No. 2 aide John Ehrlichman. But the government's cross examination, in that case, would have been limited to subjects introduced by the defense lawyer.

In another Watergate development Thursday, Nixon's lawyers moved to quash two subpoenas for taped conversations issued in civil suits arising from the Watergate burglary. The lawyers contended the tapes were covered by the claim of executive privilege since they were made while Nixon was still in office.

One of the tape subpoenas was issued in the case of R. Spencer Oliver, a former director of the Association of Democratic State Chairmen, who was bugged at Democratic national headquarters in the Watergate.

The second was issued at the request of James W. McCord Jr., a defendant in a case sought by the Democratic National Committee. McCord was one of those who broke into the Watergate in June, 1972.

U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica set a hearing on the motions to quash for 11 a.m. EDT Monday.

Another defendant in the upcoming Watergate cover-up trial, meanwhile, filed a motion in federal court seeking dismissal of the charges against him based on President Ford's pardon of Nixon.

Kenneth Wells Parkinson, a former lawyer for Nixon's reelection committee, argued in his brief motion that a pardon of one co-conspirator must, "both in law and equity," be construed as a pardon for all charged with the same conspiracy.

Another cover-up defendant, former White House aide Gordon Strachan, entered a dismissal motion Wednesday on the same ground. Nixon was named an unindicted co-conspirator in the cover-up.

As a witness for both the defense and the prosecution, Nixon can be questioned on any phase of the Watergate burglary and cover-up.

"He has been subpoenaed to testify. We expect him to be a witness," a spokesman for the prosecutor told reporters. He did not discuss the current speculation that Nixon may invoke medical reasons to avoid testifying.

Nixon is suffering from an occurrence of phlebitis, a vein inflammation complicated by blood clots in his left leg, and former White House physician Walter Tkach said after examining him last week that he had recommended hospitalization.

OPINION

Wrong numbers

In the Sept. 16 issue of The Chronicle of Higher Education, an article on FBI figures compiled at 35 college campuses showed that there was a seven per cent overall decrease in serious crimes between 1972 and 1973.

The statistics, included in the agency's Uniform Crime Reports, ran counter to the national trend. The country, as a whole, experienced an increase of six per cent in the serious crime category.

The serious crimes listed were: homicide, forcible rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, larceny and auto theft.

But there are many flaws in such a report.

Firstly, the 35 college campuses that were evaluated in the FBI tally volunteered their statistics. A school with an acute serious crime problem would more likely than not refrain from submitting such unattractive data. Because the information was volunteered, schools could not be selected either for geographic location or student enrollment. Of the 35 schools, not one was in New England and only Slippery Rock State College in Pennsylvania represented the Northeast. Such a report cannot be considered nearly accurate until schools from Boston and New York as well as those from Storrs and Kingston, R.I. can be added to the figures. Crime figures for UConn are expected to be issued in the near future.

But even if the 35 campuses were from diverse areas, what guarantees the FBI, or the interested reader that the figures reported were correct?

For example, the FBI reports that the amount of forcible rapes on the 35 campuses increased from 59 to 66 for the year. A school such as Michigan State alone has to have at least that amount of forcible rapes in a calendar year. Add schools such as the University of California at Berkeley, Davis, Irvine, and Santa Barbara and one is probably talking in the hundreds with the 30 other schools in the report still not tallied.

This leads us to the problem of statistics in general. In an instance like rape, there are hundreds of victims who out of fear and embarrassment would never report such an experience to the police. The same can hold true for the person who has been assaulted or robbed.

About the only accurate category reported by the FBI in this report would be homicides, for at least a corpse can be offered as proof.

Statistics, especially those compiled in a voluntary manner, are far from accurate and are always misleading. The FBI report on serious crime on 35 college campuses is both misleading and inaccurate.

PERSPECTIVE

Keeping ahead of bureaucracy

—BY MARK FRANKLIN

It gets harder and harder to survive here. This year may be the toughest yet for University of Connecticut students.

In days gone by it was hard enough to survive at the University for academic reasons. That's the way it should have been. Nobody should pretend meaningful learning can be done with your eyes closed.

Now, learning has become secondary. The big test for a UConn student is going through four or five years and not succumbing to bureaucracy.

At UConn bureaucracy has come to full development and reached classic form. In many ways, bureaucracy has become the most significant fact of life at Storrs.

As early as last year it was possible to fight and win, but now only the most seasoned veterans can survive. Charles Darwin would be happy; survival of the fittest has become a reality here.

The climax came in a beautiful double sequence. Tripling and bus route reform both arrived at the same time. Students have been hit where it hurts.

It's a privilege to sleep in a UConn dormitory, no matter how crowded. Of course it has always been a privilege to sleep in a dormitory and even tripling might be tolerable if it wasn't for the high-handed treatment of the situation by the bureaucracy.

The notice of tripling came as little as one week before the beginning of the semester. For tripled students getting separated is in the domain of a brand new branch of the bureaucracy, the "detrupling" machinery, which works in ways too strange and intricate to be discussed here.

The second act of the bureaucracy came close to being a work of art. The shuttle bus system has become unusable.

There are up to six buses traversing the campus in the daytime, but they are spread so thin that buses have become a rarity.

If by chance one boards a bus, it won't take you where you want to go anyway. Instead, the rider is treated for a ride through the northwestern Connecticut countryside along country roads past cows, cornfields, and apple orchards.

It's a pleasant ride, but not very useful if you need to travel from the fine arts building to the physics building.

The true joy of the bus routes is that they affect even more people than the mere 1,200 students living in over-crowded rooms. Now, no one at Storrs, with a few exceptions such as mounted police and firemen, can travel on campus except by foot.

The top administrators hope to end the golden age of the bureaucracy with administration reforms, but it is questionable if they really can. Even with the most sincere efforts to cut through the mess, the bureaucracy will resist far more than can be imagined.

Crisis center organizes to help area rape victims

A University Rape Crisis Center, that would provide help for rape victims on campus, was discussed here yesterday at a first organizational meeting sponsored by the Women's Center.

Betsy Karl, director of the Capital Region Rape Crisis Center in Hartford told the group of 10 persons that the main objective of the Hartford program "is to intervene and help get the rape victim through the emotional crisis."

Karl said the program works closely with other community facilities, "especially the police department, who handles the legal aspect," she said.

The Women's Center plans to have its second meeting next Tuesday, to discuss further organizational plans.

Kathy Brown of the Women's Center said the UConn crisis center will be dealing with a range of issues, including rape prevention.

Brown said a major consideration would be deciding if the center will be open throughout the night and how the center will be staffed.

Today's Weather

Today will be partly sunny and mild, with high temperatures in the low 80's. Tonight the low temperatures will be in the upper 50's.

Chance of precipitation is 20 per cent today and 50 per cent tonight.

Saturday is expected to be partly sunny with high temperatures in the middle 70's. The forecast for Sunday through Hampstead, Long Island, and Tuesday calls for generally fair weather with high temperatures yesterday on the WHUS weekly in the upper 60's to low 70's. program "Up Front."

Baird reiterates abortion stand

The "father of the abortion movement," William Baird, said Wednesday he is a pro-abortion lecturer as "an outcry against male chauvinists denying women the right to abortion."

President and founder of the Parent's Aid Society of The forecast for Sunday through Hampstead, Long Island, and Tuesday calls for generally fair weather with high temperatures yesterday on the WHUS weekly in the upper 60's to low 70's. program "Up Front."

Baird is over-all director of the birth control and abortion clinics of the Parents' Aid Society. He said the clinics give abortions on request regardless of age or consent of spouse or parents.

He said if a minor requests an abortion, an attempt is made to inform the parents. However, 92 per cent of the women treated cannot tell their parents of their pregnancy because of "emotional reasons," he said.

Baird said abortions at the clinic cost between $100 and $150, but financial help was available to those who could not afford this fee.

Since Baird began lecturing on birth control across the country, he has been arrested and jailed eight times in five states.

When Baird was jailed in the summer of 1971 for displaying a diaphragm at a birth control lecture in Freehold, New Jersey, he said he received so many threatening phone calls that he sought protection for his family from the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Unable to attain this protection for his family, Baird moved them out of New Jersey.

Sen. Kennedy will deliver annual lecture

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., will deliver the annual Brien McMahon Lecture here Dec. 2.

The Senator also has expressed an interest in meeting informally with students during his visit to campus, according to John Plank, professor of political science and coordinator of the McMahon lecture.

Though he has not indicated a specific topic for his talk here, the Senator is expected to discuss the role of the Central Intelligence Agency and the U.S. government in the overthrow of President Salvatore Allende of Chile.

The McMahon Lectureship was established in 1957 by the late Sen. William S. Benton, D-Conn., a long-time UConn trustee and close friend of McMahon, the late Senator from Connecticut.

As a McMahon lecturer, Kennedy will join a select list of national and international figures who have given the traditional talks here. Among them are Henry Kissinger, Abba Eban, the late Dean Acheson, and former Venezuela President Romulo Betancourt.

A member of the Senate since 1962, Kennedy is the fifth ranking Democrat on the Senate's Judiciary Committee. His current term ends in 1976.

He also serves on the Senate's Labor and Public Welfare Committee, the Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs, and the Special Committee on Aging. The Massachusetts Democrat also is chairman of the Judiciary sub-committee on administrative practice and procedures.

He also is president of the Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. Foundation.

Dancer to speak to wives club

The meeting will be held Tuesday, Sept. 24 in the Student Union, room 271, at 8 p.m.

Towers dorm will initiate monthly journal

By HARRY CARRUBBA

"The Rolling Paper," a new monthly newspaper established by the Living and Learning Center in Towers, will begin publication Oct. 6.

The Living and Learning Center is an experimental dorm begun this year and coordinated by John Tanaka, director of the UConn Honors program. It is a coed dorm which stresses academic opportunity, according to Tanaka.

The objectives of the newspaper will be to promote communication among Towers dorms and to provide a forum for creative writing, poetry, and art work, according to Sandy Shea, a fifth semester student and editor of "The Rolling Paper."

The paper will be published on the first Sunday of each month and circulated to all Towers residents. Shea said the paper hopes to be funded by United Towers Organization.

Each edition will include features such as a ride exchange for Towers, original "Sunday comics," Towers' news, interviews, and editorial comments, Shea said.

In brief Exiles seeking amnesty must surrender rights

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Draft evaders seeking amnesty must waive several of their constitutional rights and give up the protection from prosecution normally afforded by the statute of limitations, the Justice Department said Thursday.

Those who fail to satisfy the amnesty program's requirement that they spend up to 24 months in alternate public service will face possible prosecution for their original draft law violations, a department official said.

Rockefeller sets worth at $182.5 million

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Vice presidential nominee Nelson Rockefeller said Thursday he is worth about $182.5 million, including $20 million worth of art and land he will turn over to the public after his death.

The former New York governor, one of the country's richest men, said the bulk of his assets are in two trusts valued at a total of $120 million. He did not say so, but the trusts were believed left to him by his father, John D. Rockefeller Jr.

House to vote on data bill

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House committee tentatively approved a bill Thursday which could allow a person to find out what information about him the federal government has included in its computerized files.

"This is very significant legislation in the field of privacy which I think is long overdue," said Rep. Bella Abzug, D-N. Y., one of the Government Operations Committee members who pushed the measure.

President to name reporter as aide

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Ford will name Ronald Nessen, NBC-TV White House correspondent, as his press secretary, it was learned Thursday.

Nessen, 40, would succeed J.F. terHorst, Ford's first presidential press secretary who resigned Sept. 8 in protest when Ford granted former President Nixon an unconditional pardon.

Russia deploys multiple warheads

LONDON (UPI) — Russia, in a race against the United States, has deployed more advanced and heavier rockets, is speeding the mass deployment of multiple warheads and has substantially increased its armed forces, the latest defense survey of the International Institute for Strategic Studies said Friday.

But the United States has not been idle. Its long-range missiles will carry in the next few years up to 9,000 separately targeted warheads, while a new strategic bomber is to make its first flight next year, the institute's "Military Balance 1974-75" said.

ConnPirg condemns roles

By TERRI MANGINI

A handbook designed to help parents prevent their elementary-age children from becoming "sex stereotyped" has recently been published by the Connecticut Public Interest Research Group (ConnPIRG), a state-wide student social action organization.

The handbook, which was the result of a two-month study by Martha Cohen, a fifth semester sociology student at Trinity College, Hartford, describes how children are encouraged and expected to behave according to their sexual roles in the classroom.

"Sex stereotypes which strictly define for children, on the basis of their sex, what they can do in life, are extremely harmful," Cohen said.

The handbook, which is being distributed to Parent-Teacher Associations (PTA's) and children's libraries, in the Hartford area presents examples from children's texts like mathematical word problems that revolve around "how much flour Susie needs to bake cupcakes" as well as textbook pictures where "all doctors are male, all nurses are female, and all astronauts are men."

A particularly important part of the handbook, according to Cohen, is devoted to setting up in-service teacher training programs and parents' awareness workshops.

"The handbook does more than tell people what is wrong. It suggests to people specific ways that they can help, individually and together, to change the lives of their own children," Cohen said.

Two Russian chess kings to decide Fischer's fate

By SCOTT REDFERN

It is well known that on the chess board, Bobby Fischer does not play defensively. On June 29 he also decided not to defend his World Chess Champion Title. Fischer decided he would resign when the International Chess Federation refused to agree with a Fischer demand stating that in a 10 point match (draws excluded) a 9-9 tie would go to the champion. Max Euwe, the president of the Federation, has given Fischer until April 1 to reconsider.

If Fischer does not reconsider, the winner of the Anatoly Karpov-Viktor Korchnoi match will decide the new champion. The match which began this week is being held in the House of Unions at Moscow.

Both players reached the finals by playing in an Interzonal Tournament and two play-off matches. In Karpov's semi-final match he defeated ex-World Champion Boris Spassky without any trouble.

In Korchnoi's previous match he defeated Tigran Petrosian. Korchnoi and Petrosian had met before in a candidates match, and Korchnoi was unable to conquer him.

Karpov has already taken a command over the 43 year old Russian Grandmaster Korchnoi. Karpov, only 23 years old, has a 1 to 0 lead after two games. The match is 5 points with draws excluded. If after 24 games the match is tied, the winner will be decided by the toss of a coin.

In the first game of the match Korchnoi had the white pieces and was held to a draw. In the second game (below) Karpov had white and opened P-K4 in which Korchnoi responded with the Dragon Sicilian. The game lasted only two hours, Karpov rolling over the black forces.

Reviewer buries 'Seed'

By JOHN AMATO

The principals involved in The Tamarind Seed seem to have lost the appeal that made them successes. It is clear that Julie Andrews, Omar Sharif, and Blake Edwards have seen better days and are now hurting.

—MOVIE REVIEW—

Most of Andrews' previous films, including Mary Poppins, The Sound of Music, and Thoroughly Modern Millie, have been tremendously popular; and rightfully so. They were good movies in which she was enchanting. This quality is not visible in The Tamarind Seed.

Sharif had come to be known as a 'charmer' in Dr. Zhivago and Funny Girl. Not true here.

And director Edwards had a certain knack with Breakfast at Tiffany's, Days of Wine and Roses, and The Pink Panther. Sorry, Blake, not this time.

The Tamarind Seed is a combination love story and spy thriller. The espionage end of the film really comes off — it is intriguing and fascinating, but is weighed down and almost completely destroyed by the gush which doesn't work.

The screenplay, written by Edwards, Andrews' husband, concerns Judith Farrow, an employe of the British Foreign Office, and her acquaintance with Feodor Sverdlov, who is with the Russian embassy in Paris.

In a boring first half to the movie, they roam Barbados and become good friends.

"Yes, I like you, but I won't go to bed with you," repeats Judith countless times, in a manner that isn't Julie Andrews'.

Omar Sharif and Julie Andrews fall in love, but their personal affair becomes an international issue in "The Tamarind Seed," directed by Blake Edwards.

Having been seen together, both come under suspicion of giving away intelligence secrets to the other's country. The suspense mounts, but the climax comes too far from the end of the picture. The climax also is weakened by more poor dialogue and trite sentimentalism.

There's nothing wrong with Julie Andrews trying to shed her 'Miss Goody-two-shoes' image, but it hasn't worked, and I can't see that it will work. She's just not convincing in a role that doesn't demand a constant smile.

There was a good performance given by Sylvia Syms as the wife of a British traitor. She is alive with hatred for her husband, and determined as a status-seeking social climber.

On the whole, The Tamarind Seed is too long. If half of the first hour was trimmed, the film might have been worth seeing.

Husky mascot appears at BOG activities fair

By SUSAN OKULA

Jonathon VII, the UConn Huskies mascot, was one of several hundred participants in the Activities Fair Thursday night at the ROTC hangar.

Students discovered all kinds of campus organizations as more than 60 student groups helped make the fair one of the most successful yet, according to Bob Desnoyers, assistant to the activities coordinator.

While one student said the fair was dull, many others found it helpful and informative. A first semester student said she discovered many organizations that she did not know existed.

Paula Saimond, managing editor of the Nutmeg, UConn's yearbook, said she was pleased with the fair. "Not only are we recruiting students, but the fair serves as a good source of advertisement," she said.

Organizations used slides, music, and displays to demonstrate their activities. Members of Canton of Fennbry, the medieval drama society, dressed in medieval costumes and demonstrated swords and other medieval warfare that they had made themselves to curious students.

Brian Puglisi, a graduate student, said he thought that the fair helped him to know the campus better, although he did not plan on joining any groups.

Desnoyers said he was pleased with the student attendance.

Hurricane kills hundreds; winds reach 130 m.p.h.

BELIZE CITY, Belize (UPI) — Hurricane Fifi rammed into Central America Thursday and drenched five countries, killing hundreds of persons in floods and tides whipped by winds of up to 130 miles an hour.

The storm wiped out millions of dollars of crops, particularly bananas and rice, as it tore up fertile farmland.

It left an estimated 200 persons dead in Honduras, where it was the worst storm to hit the northern part of that country in this century. Its wind and rains drenched a third of the nation and lashed neighboring Nicaragua, where authorities reported one child drowned.

Heavy rains and flood warnings were also reported in Guatemala and El Salvador.

UConn polo team hosts veteran squad Sunday

The UConn polo team will play the second game of its season this Sunday at 2 p.m. in the new arena on Horsebarn Road.

A demonstration of polo techniques will precede the game as well as explanations throughout the game for those not familiar with the sport.

The Huskies, who have won three national intercollegiate polo championships in a row, will pit their skills against a team of polo veterans. The visitors will include Ralph Carpenter who donated twelve ponies to the team, Joe Serico who played for Cornell in the 1974 finals against UConn, and Al Marenholtz who was the referee for that tournament.

Riding for the Huskies will be captain Tom Goodspeed, Lyle Graham, Kevin Woolham, and Scott Brown. UConn lost their first home game ever, 12-7 last Sunday against an All-Star team.

The pick

By BOB VACON
Sports Editor

The 1974 version of the Connecticut Husky football team will be unveiled Saturday when UConn, determined to be as good or better than the record-breaking team of a year ago takes on a confident Vermont eleven.

UConn, off to the winningest season in 75 years, when they posted an 8-2-1 record last year, is "mentally ready" for Vermont, according to second-year head coach Larry Naviaux. "We're past the tired stage, and to the point where we can finally see a football game coming," said Naviaux Tuesday.

All the grinding blocking drills, the endless wind sprints, and the brutal scrimmages will finally mean something, as the Huskies find out Saturday just who they are.

In Vermont, Connecticut will be playing probably the youngest team in the Yankee Conference. Of 72 candidates invited to fall practice, only ten were seniors, and 32 were freshmen.

Last week, against the Norwich Cadets, however, Vermont rallied from a 26-14 deficit in the final quarter to win, 28-26. And the freshmen, according to head coach Carl Falivene, played well. "We are really satisfied with the performance of the freshmen in their first collegiate game. In a pressure-packed situation like we had last Saturday, it undoubtedly helped the players' football maturity. We won't hesitate to use them this weekend at Connecticut."

Probably the biggest threat the Catamounts pose is their quarterback, who has prompted comparisons with Lehigh's quarterback last year, Kim McQuilken, who brought his team to a 22-20 victory over Connecticut. Bob Bateman, a 6'6" passer from Darien, Ct., completed 21 of 34 passes for 284 yards, and rushed for 75 more against Norwich. He runs the 40 yd. dash in 4.7 seconds, and will be tough to stop on the option plays Vermont likes to run. Falivene has called Bateman, "one of the finest passers in New England," and Naviaux said, "Our scouts tell me we are going to have to be extra careful on pass defense."

Connecticut meanwhile seems to have settled on Brad Rock as starting quarterback. Naviaux has said he will not rotate quarterbacks, instead staying with one man unless he cannot move the club. Bernie Palmer has bad legs right now, and Rock has beaten out Lou Mancari and Ramon Sanchez for the starting position.

Vermont appears weak in their ground game, as Bateman rushed for 75 yards, but after him, only 49 yards were gained in 20 attempts by four Vermont backs. Connecticut, in an attempt to stop Bateman, will probably drop off their weak-side defensive end to cover the weak-side flat, while the strong-side defensive end will defend against the run, or rush the passer.

What it appears to come down to is that Connecticut will have to stop Bob Bateman, who against Norwich, was almost the entire offense, accounting for 359 yards out of a total offense that totaled 408 yards.

But Connecticut isn't Norwich.

Morrone earns win

By WAYNE MONES

On Wednesday UConn soccer coach Joe Morrone got his 100th victory at the University, and to say he earned it would be an understatement. Morrone completely out-coached rival mentor Fran Bacon of Bridgeport in leading the Huskies to their first win in seven years over the Knights.

Morrone had his team prepared for anything the Knights could dish out. In practice he stressed one-on-one defense and UConn played excellent one-on-one defense in the game. He stressed watching for the fast-break and backing up one another defensively. Sure enough, Bridgeport tried to fast-break, but the defense stymied them completely.

McSherry Superlative

The game was fairly even, with UConn controlling the ball for the most part, but not getting off many good shots. On the other hand, Bridgeport's offense got off several shots that were turned away by goalie Ted McSherry, who was superlative in the nets.

The game was extremely physical with UConn's Tom Shepard repeatedly out-muscling All-New-England Kevin Welch, which effectively kept Welch, a speedster, away from the ball.

Even though UConn fell behind 1-0, the Huskies showed their character by not quitting. They continued to keep the pressure on Bridgeport and controlled the ball. Then Morrone made another strategic move by inserting Lloyd Grant and Tom Nevers back into the game. The result: Grant tripped in the penalty area, and a Frantz Innocent score on a penalty kick tying the game at 1-1.

Turning Point

The turning point of the game came during a second-half Bridgeport offensive barrage. The ball was cleared by the backs to Nevers on the wing. Nevers took the ball down the wing and, as he approached the end line, hit a low, hard cross to the center of the goal mouth. The cross hit a Bridgeport player in the leg and was in the goal. UConn lead 2-1.

Bridgeport's continuous pressure subsided and the momentum shifted the other way. There was still a lot of time left and Morrone had to decide how to keep the momentum. With 15 minutes left, he called for a stall.

Without a disciplined team a stall this early in a game could backfire and prove disastrous. But the offense, lead by Len Tsantires, Grant, Nevers, and Tim Hunter, kept the ball in the Knight's offensive corners, making no attempt to score. The stall, though boring, proved to be the right move.

No Greater Tribute

Morrone used eight substitutes in this 2-1 game. Playing eight substitutes is generally unheard of, and playing eight substitutes in a close game is unthought of. There can be no greater tribute to Morrone's genius than being able to beat Bridgeport 2-1, not in spite of his substitutions, but because of them.

UConn opens its Yankee Conference schedule here against Vermont on Saturday at 10 a.m. UConn should have no trouble.
