CCC Midway Feature Auction of UConn VIP's

This year as in the past, Alpha Phi Omega has tried to provide the CCC Midway with several feature events. One of these special features at this year's Midway will be a special auction for the services of four University administrators.

The four, Dr. Babbidge, Dr. Northby, Dr. Cohen, and Mr. Dunlop have volunteered to wait on tables for one meal at any Campus Living unit.

The team of men will wait on tables for the house that values their services most highly. The auction will be held Monday night in the Field House at approximately 11:00 P.M. Naturally, the highest bidder will be awarded these special administrative services. The proceeds for the auction will be donated to CCC.

Any house interested in participating in the auction is advised to appoint one individual responsible for the bidding.

It is hoped that the willingness of these four men to sacrifice their time and energy for charity will provide added impetus for student participation. The success of CCC depends both on the participation of the Campus and the Community. The Community has shown its willingness to help. The help of the student body is the next prerequisite for success.

Come to the CCC! Monday, April 27:

Dedication Of New Law School Set For May 1st

A major step in the development of the University of Connecticut's School of Law will be taken May 1, when the School's new building is dedicated on the University's new Greater Hartford campus in West Hartford.

Highlight of the program will be an address by the Hon. Raymond E. Baldwin, retired chief justice of the Connecticut Supreme Court of Errors at 3:30 p.m. The dedication is the first of a series of special events planned by UConn in observance of its quarter century as a University.

Lectures Scheduled

A score of convocations, lectures and other activities are scheduled May 1-9 in Greater Hartford and at the main campus to commemorate the passage in 1939 of the bill creating a state university in Connecticut.

Significantly, Judge Baldwin, during his second term as Governor in 1943, was ex-officio president of the UConn Board of Trustees when the old Hartford School of Law became a part of the University.

The Law Day exercise on May 1 will mark a turning point for the School of Law, giving it for the first time physical facilities designed and built for the purpose of legal education.

Among the invited guests are Gov. John Dempsey, Atty. Gen. Harold Mulvey, Chief Justice John H. King and his colleagues on the Supreme Court of Errors, Public Works Director Timothy Murphy, West Hartford Mayor Richard W. Sheehan and Town Manager Richard H. Custer, Hartford Mayor William E. Glynn, and judges of the Superior Court, the Court of Common Pleas, the Circuit Court and the Juvenile Court.

Decent Loafers:

IT DOESN'T TAKE STUDENTS LONG to make the best of a good thing. No sooner had the furniture begun to appear on the HUB patio last Thursday than it was put to use, and by the end of the afternoon the patio was filled. The first people to occupy a table were Mel Maffei, Joe Luppi, George Vicenzi, Debbie Littler, and Howie Larson. (Photo by Cumming)

And Don Quixote

Today some of the leaders of CORE in New York will take to the battlefield in what we think is one of the most foolish fights since Don Quixote charged the windmill, thinking it was an enemy's castle.

In fact, their battle seems to us to be even more foolish than that of the misguided knight. His antics were harmless, but those of CORE could do irreparable harm to the cause they espouse, the speedy passage through Congress of the civil rights bill.

The idea of any group in America subjecting the population in general to the mass discomfort and loss of time and money concomitant with a general stoppage of traffic to the World's Fair on opening day without due cause makes us shake our head in amazement. How can their leaders ever hope for the support of the general population towards their rights bill and their cause if they are so openly antagonistic to the rights of the general population itself?

Whether they feel that the bulk think this a fine way to make a massive show of strength; if they object to booths being present from what they feel are discriminatory states (e.g. the state of Alabama), or if they feel this will just make a fine forum for them to air their views to the nation, we still cannot disagree with their planned action more heartily.

If their disagreement is with the state of Alabama, Georgia or even Connecticut, all right, let them picket that booth, but they can't have disagreements with the entire world, this would seem to be what they are, in effect, demonstrating against by disrupting the entire WORLD'S Fair.

The CORE leadership, we feel is definitely misguaging the temper of the nation if they feel that they will draw support by this move. They have been told by politicians from north and south alike that this "stall in" can only do harm to the civil rights bill. They have been chastised in almost every paper in the country for the proposal. And they are antagonizing the man they must persuade to make full scale integration work in America . . . the average white man.

The results from the Wisconsin primary and the problems the Negro has run into in his efforts to put his best laid plans into operation in places like New York and Philadelphia show that the speeches of northern politicians, and northern protests against southern violence might not always be the truest indications of support for their causes. A move like the one they propose today, can in our minds do nothing but give a negative impression to people that could be swayed either way by their cause.

Harry Truman summed up our feelings when he said a "stall-in" would be "damn foolish." Wasn't that the way Don Quixote felt when he found out the fort was a windmill?

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Shopping Spree

To the Editor:

It would appear to me, that any editor worth his salt would find out the basic facts involved, before writing an editorial. It you would please examine your fee bill, you will notice that you pay a $3 Student Activities Fee and a $2 Student Union Fee. The Student Activities Fee goes to the Student Senate, while the Student Union Fee goes to the University, and is supposed to take care of the running of the Union and for the expenses involved with BOG-sponsored events. In actuality this money does not even make up one-third of the cost in running the union, let alone events sponsored by the BOG. Now Mr. Montville, I ask you to compare what the average student gets by paying the Senate $3, and what he receives for his money by paying $2 for the running of the Union and the BOG.

Quite a comparison of extremes, isn't it. Yes indeed, Mr. Montville, I would say as a personal opinion, quite a comparison of extremes.

I hope that the CDC gets all the facts involved in the matters at hand, before future editorials are published.

Arnold R. Saslow
Student Union Social Comm.

Editor's Note: The student union fee, to my knowledge, does not cover the operating expenses of the Board of Governors. This in my mind means the programs they present, not the lights, maintenance, etc. As for my own personal opinion, I would rate a student newspaper and radio station on one hand, and the Dovells on the other as "quite a comparison of extremes."

Physical Fitness

To the Editor:

Is this University interested in the physical fitness of all, or only in those who will increase its prestige? We are referring specifically to the nine tennis courts, located on the south side of the football stadium, which are closed to all except the tennis team, until May 19th. Obviously, there are not enough courts for the student body during this season, especially when those nine courts are unavailable. We understand why the tennis team should be given priority for the courts; however, when the team is not using these courts, why are they not open to the student body?

Another point of reference is the Hawley Armory Pool. This pool, which has a limit of 40 people, is open for free swims for girls two nights a week. One half of the pool may be rented during this time by organized groups, leaving the other half of the pool for the rest of the girls on the campus. It is a shame that only forty people can swim in one night, while an olympic-sized pool, in the Field House is closed for general student use.

It is admirable to have many teams on a campus, but not everyone has the time, nor ability, to be on one of these teams. Nevertheless, every student should have the opportunity to use the facilities that he or she is paying for. Why are they not available?

On Lice And Things

To the Editor:

Attention Brian Cross:

When are you, and the people like you, going to realize that our military defense expenditures are the very thing which allows "the American way of life" and crackpot, irrational organizations like the SPU to exist?

hey hey don't pay taxes
yeah yeah let's disarm

so what if we look like groveling lice.

Good show Brian, I always get a kick out of your little articles.

Guest Editorial:

Certain Atmosphere

Certain Atmosphere

The following editorial appeared in The Christian Science Monitor, April 18, 1964.

It is easy to say all the wrong things about the drunken bash at a Long Island debutante party last September which has just been excruciatingly reviewed at court.

The host wanted to be compensated for $6,000 worth of damages to a rented guesthouse. The Associated Press reported that he supplied 20 cases of champagne and 12 cases of whiskey and gin for a two-day orgy. What did he expect? The boys mostly blamed the liquor. Who but they chose to drink it?

The older generations, those who are not amused or merely frustrated, fit this into the general decline of moral standards. Many of them try to talk of the moral code, with the sinking feeling that the old powerful words don't reach those who need to be reached and often go right past their own children. They wonder what their own guilt has to do with this and it weakens their ability to help.

There was a little more insight from Eaton Brooks, one of the boys who were all ultimately acquitted of any actual crime. Obviously defensive, he was reported by the New York Herald Tribune as saying:

"I'm not ashamed of anything I did. . . . If you had been there inside the house you would have understood the spirit of that party. Consider the fact that we were drinking for two days and nights without sleeping and without eating, and we kept that up for 36 hours, out in the hot sun half the time, so when we got to the Ladd house we weren't the same people."

"There's two much drinking going on today," Brooks said. "I

That same issue of the Herald know that. Everybody knows it. But what are you going to do about it? Your own New York State allows people to start drinking at 18. They would sell me drinks when I was 14 because they are all out to make a buck. Everybody knows the morals of this country are going down the drain."

Tribune reported from Albany the final collapse of what might have been a reform of the liquor laws. A series of scandals had been followed by one effort after another to sidetrack the real issue. The liquor lobbies rode high at Albany. "Reform" finally came down to the degree of competition with which package stores were free to pursue their customers. The decision was for more.

Returning to Brooks, "A certain atmosphere," he said, "caused it all. The atmosphere prevailed." He seemed to be groping for something beyond this one small irritating incident.

We could say many things about that atmosphere. It is the enemy. It is the animal nature that humans inherit from the jungle. It brings self-indulgence and riot but much more serious than these, it is the enemy of the mind and of character in all our society, and ultimately of human life itself. We, too, would like to do battle against it, and thunder forth the moral code because we believe in it utterly and in its power to reshape society. But this may be a better time, faced with boys like Brooks who will decide for themselves, for a little humility.

We would like to ask them in all candor: What kind of society and world do they want? What effort are they willing to put forth to achieve it? This is not just a challenge. We are eager to have them talk. We would like to listen.

From The Inside:

Insight

EDITORS NOTE The following is the first in a series of articles presented by the Student Senate Public Relations Committee to acquaint the student body with the structure and activities of Associated Student Government.

This article begins a weekly column to inform the reader of the behind the scenes workings of the Student Senate. It has been expressed by many senators and students that if the student actually knew what the Senate was working on, there would be less criticism and possibly more respect.

This introductory article will give the reader an idea of the Senate committee structure and its areas of concern. In the future the emphasis of this column will be on one or two committees at a time and a detailed story about what the committee is doing will be given.

Major Purpose

The major purpose of the Senate committees is to "assist in promoting and protecting the students' interests, education, and general welfare." This purpose is divided into areas of academics, housing, community involvement, NSA, and Traffic. In order to carry out the functions of government there are Finance, Steering, Constitutions, Brancher elections, Public Relations Ring, and Alumni committees. Also a Board of Governors Liaison.

As the above states each committee deals with a specific area. The Academics committee is presently investigating the possibilities of increasing the sixty-limit quota placed on the number of graduates of the School of Elementary Education. The committee is also continuing work on a course critique to be used when selecting courses, and the present marking system is being investigated.

Readmittance into the Connecticut Intercollegiate Student Legislature is being investigated by the Community Involvement Committee. A report on the findings of at Wednesday's Senate meeting.

Parking Space

The newly formed Traffic committee is investigating the problem of a growing shortage of parking space and the increased number of cars being used on campus during the day.

Plans for a language dorm is being considered by the Housing Committee. They are also completing plans for a faculty living unit.

This will give the reader an idea of the proposals the committees are presently considering. In the next column the committees which are concerned with the function of the Senate will be discussed. Also next week a review of the procedure a bill goes through before it becomes activated by passage of the Senate will be presented.

For the committees which affect the student directly there is a need for a large membership. Although there is a large number of senators on these committees for a properly functioning committee there should be a large number of non students.

Sophomore Class Holds First Peace Seminar

EDITOR'S NOTE: The following is a review of the first Sophomore Class THINK Seminar on Peace. The purpose of the seminars is to awaken and encourage interest in this major contemporary problem through discussion with faculty and fellow students. The next Peace Seminar will be held Tuesday at 7 p.m. in HUB 301 and will be led by Dr. John Grant of the English Department.

The first meeting of the THINK Seminars on Peace, sponsored by the Sophomore class was both informative and thought-provoking.

The seminar began with a short talk by Dr. Lewis Lipsitz in which he presented his reasons why discussion on the question of peace is important and should be considered by every individual. Dr. Lipsitz stressed the fact that these past few years have witnessed a decisive change in the world situation. Basically, he was referring to the de-emphasis of the concept of the polarization of power in the world. He presented the Sino-Soviet dispute, and France's recognition of Red China as examples of this depolarization.

Dr. Lipsitz feels that the world situation can turn in either one of two ways: (1) the United States and the Soviet Union can take advantage of the cold war "throw" and begin to pave the way to a greater understanding and more co-operation between the two, or (2) both countries can continue to increase world tension through "crises-producing" demands and augmentation of the "polarization" concept. He continued to stress that this choice will probably be made in the very near future. Because of this situation, because of the direct consequences we must face no matter which choice we make, Dr. Lipsitz concluded that this is an issue that every individual should be concerned with.

CUBAN WARNING

The United States in a notice designed especially for Premier Castro has warned that interference with U.S. reconnaissance flights over Cuba would create a dangerous situation. This warning by the State Department may have been prompted by reports that the Soviet Union is expected soon to turn over control of 24 anti-aircraft missile bases to Castro.

Senator Fulbright

Dr. Lipsitz's talk led directly into a group discussion on Senator Fulbright's recent speech, in which he criticized American diplomacy, specifically the many "myths" which seem to have influenced our uncompromising stand on particular issues of foreign affairs.

The United States' refusal to recognize Red China was discussed in detail. Several members of the group were quite critical of this policy on the ground that it was impractical and prevented any chance of future co-operation and understanding between the two countries. Dr. Lipsitz reminded the group that Americans have been too quick to grasp at the hope that Communist regimes are unpopular in the countries in which they exist. He feels that we are in error if we are expecting revolution in Red China. He compared this attitude to that held by many Americans in the early 1920's who thought that the Russian Revolution was not a popular revolution and would not succeed.

He also pointed out that Red China is not a country despised throughout the world; on the contrary, many underdeveloped countries are impressed with the great progress Red China has made. Indeed, the Chinese delegations are very well received in many countries today.

Group Consensus

The general consensus of the group was in agreement with Senator Fulbright's speech and Dr. Lipsitz's elaborations on particular issues helped the group to understand and appreciate, even more, the stand the Senator had taken.

The next Peace Seminar will be held on Tuesday, April 21, at 7 p.m. in Rm. 301 of the Student Union.

The guest-moderator will be Dr. John Grant of the English Department. Specific topics to discuss will include Africa and its importance to world politics and world peace, the policy of brinkmanship, and the moral complications and contradictions involved in American foreign policies. All those interested are invited to attend.

Soviet - Chinese Strife Eases American Tension

NEW YORK (AP) — British Foreign Secretary Richard Butler predicts that while the next decade will be laden with cold air tension, the Soviet Chinese dispute will impel the Russians "to take more interest in an understanding with the West."

Butler presented his views on world affairs in an interview with AP correspondent Eddy Gilmore, filmed in London for showing today at the annual meeting of the Associated Press in New York.

The 61-year-old Foreign Secretary in a wide-ranging commentary, said he is convinced the myth of Communist world solidarity has been destroyed by the Moscow-Peking squabble. He predicted the Soviet Union and the West would find common ground in some areas, notably disarmament.

Tension Spots

Butler said that for the next ten years the main areas of tension in the world be in South Asia, South Africa and Latin America.

He declared with a broad smile that British-American relations were "very close" and that the two nations were shoulder-to-shoulder on world issues. In his words:

"We do look to the future with hope because we can work together with the United States of America, and that is what gives us our hope and our strength."

Touching on one point of irritation in U.S. British relations, Butler defended the recent sale of British buses to Communist Cuba. He said British trade with Cuba today is less than that between Americans and Cuba.

Sino-Soviet Rivalry

Butler dwelt at length on disruption of the Communist world in the wake of the Soviet-Chinese dispute which he said "in simple English means Chinese-Soviet rivalry." He said the quarrel is occupying much of Moscow's time, adding: "and that in itself is probably quite a good thing."

Butler explained: "We know there is Chinese-Russian rivalry in Asia, and now they are both choosing to extend it to Africa, and I think they are going to find a great degree of competition between them in the new African states. . . . I think it will only lead to further tension between these two nations."

Butler cautioned, however, that the Moscow-Peking battle does not mean an end to the West's troubles, since, in his words: "The Soviet Union and China can and still do pursue policies which are unfriendly to our interests, even if they do so independently."

Agreement Prospects

On prospects of East-West agreement, Butler called attention to such accords as the limited nuclear test ban, the Washington-Moscow "Hot Line" and the U.S.-Soviet agreement not to put weapons in outer space.

He stated:

"All are valuable in themselves, and they showed that the East and West can reach agreement based on common interest. We are trying to work forward from here. We have been discussing the question of the use of fissionable material for military purposes with Mr. Khrushchev, and we have many other subjects which we are discussing with him.

"I think we should find some common ground, particularly in the field of disarmament."

Rusk Pledges To Keep Support In South Viet Nam

SAIGON (AP) — Secretary of State Rusk left Saigon Monday for Washington with a parting pledge that the U.S. will continue supporting South Viet Nam until Communist aggression has been rooted out of the country.

During three day visit Rusk said he discussed with South Viet Nam's strong man, Major General Nguyen Khanh, various ways in which American aid to South Viet Nam might be strengthened.

Communist guerrillas struck within fourteen miles of Saigon during the final day of Rusk's visit. Four guerrilla companies used mortars and heavy weapons against a government outpost, apparently as part of a continuing attempt to throw the U.S.-supported government forces off balance in four provinces south of the capital.

Security Measures

Tight security covered Rusk's departure. The airport area was cleared, and no unauthorized civilians were permitted inside.

Seen off by U.S. Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge, U.S. General Paul Harkins and other high officials, Rusk called his visit "most interesting and heart-warming."

In a departure statement addressed to the Vietnamese people he said: "We shall remain at your side until the aggression from the north has been defeated, until it has been completely rooted out, and this land enjoys the peace which it deserves."

A large red and yellow banner across the airport entrance said "So long Secretary Rusk. Please tell the American people we shall not give."

Rusk flew home by way of Taipei, Formosa, and Anchorage, Alaska.

Lady Bird's Plane Struck By Lightning

Washington (AP) — Mrs. Lyndon Johnson has told 2,000 delegates to the Convention of the Young Women's Christian Association in Cleveland that women can be dedicated doers. The First Lady also visited a public housing development featuring low-cost apartments for older people. On the way to Cleveland, her plane was struck by lightning. But it was more frightening than damaging.

Problems Face Pearson As Second Term Begins

CANADA (AP) — Canadian Prime Minister Lester Pearson begins his second year in office Wednesday. It promises to be no easier than the first. And Pearson would be and last to dispute that the first year was a tough one.

Pearson has a number of things going for him. One is that relations with the United States are friendly. Relations were cool, if not frosty when Pearson succeeded Conservative John Diefengaker as Prime Minister.

Also in Pearson's favor is a booming economy. Huge sales of wheat to Communist countries are largely responsible.

Increased Funds Demanded

But Pearson's problems are many. Two, in particular, stand out. One is the demand by certain provinces for more funds for education, welfare and other key areas which are their responsibilities under Canada's constitution. The other is the deepening split between French-speaking Quebec and the rest of Canada.

The two problems are related. Quebec is in front in the demand for more funds. It needs the money to finance its ambitious plans for education and economic development.

There is considerable opposition in some provinces to Quebec's demands.

Rift Widening

There has always been friction between French-speaking Quebec & the English-speaking provinces. The rift is widening in the current situation, and Quebec continues to move away from the rest of Canada. Extremist in the province even are seeking an independent Quebec.

Pearson is determined to prevent a break-up of the Canadian Confederation. But he also recognizes Quebec's special status as the guardians of French Canada's minority rights.

Parliament Position Weak

Adding to Pearson's problems is a weak position in Parliament. His Liberals have 128 seats in the 265-seat House of Commons. That's five short of a majority. Diefengaker's Conservatives have 94. Three minor parties share 41 seats. There are two vacancies. The opposition parties could, at any time, join in a no-confidence vote and force an election.

On 23 occasions during the past year, Commons was asked to vote no-confidence in the government. Pearson's closest call came by a margin of eight votes.

Production Of Nuclear Explosive Materials Cut

NEW YORK (AP) — President Johnson announced yesterday a new cutback in the production of nuclear explosive materials. And he said Soviet Premier Khrushchev has indicated that he, too, "intends to make a move in this same direction."

The President made the announcement at the annual Associated Press luncheon in New York.

Increase in Uranium Output

He said in a prepared speech that the "substantial reduction" in the output of enriched uranium will be carried out over a four-year period. He said that together with other reductions, the new cut means "an over-all decrease in the production of plutonium by 20 per cent and of enriched uranium by 40 per cent."

Johnson said:

"By bringing production in line with need, we reduce tension while maintaining all necessary power."

Johnson added: "I am happy to say that Chairman Khrushchev has to make a move in this same direction."

In a wide-ranging foreign policy speech, Johnson said:

Try To Isolate Cuba

The U.S. policy of trying to isolate Cuba from the rest of the western hemisphere and defeat its efforts to spread Communism is working. Johnson said "We will continue this policy with every peaceful means at our command."

He said he has instructed the Central Intelligence Agency and the State and Defense Departments "to be ready to provide major candidates" in the Presidential election campaign with all possible information helpful to their discussion of now indicated to me that he intends American policy."

Johnson said such discussion must be responsible and in protecting U.S. security. "Partisan politics must yield to national need."

Non-Senators Needed

The non senator participation is needed for two reasons: 1) Since the committees work directly affect the student, his opinion is need on many subjects. 2) As the area in which the committee will concentrate, is determined by the student, so also is the amount of work done by a committee is directly proportional to the number of students participating.

Working on committees also aids the student by affording him the opportunity to work with the faculty and administrators in discovering and solving problems. In order for student government to do something for you, you must first decide what you can do for yourself, because Student government is you.

Mid-Semester Grades

Midsemester marks have been released and are now in the hands of the Academic Counselors. In making this announcement Registrar Franklin O. Fingles said while these are not a part of the permanent record they are an indication to the student of his work to date.

Although most grades were received on time there were a few that came in late. The grades in these courses will have to be obtained from the instructors. Mid-semester reports to Parents are to be mailed home later.

The "Progress Corps" comes to the Fair

General Electric men and women have been gathering at the New York World's Fair, bringing the latest developments from the wonderful world of electricity.

They've made their pavilion — Progressland — entertaining. It's a bright show, enhanced by the master showmanship of Walt Disney.

But, more than that, it's your chance to see, as in no other way, the career opportunities offered in the electrical industry. For here, under one huge dome, is assembled a full range of the electrical ideas that are helping millions of people throughout the world progress toward better lives. Ideas that come from the people at General Electric, who form a real "Progress Corps."

There are new electronic ideas for medicine that promise better patient care in our hospitals. Ideas for more efficient factories, less-congested transportation, better community lighting, increased highway safety, and more comfortable living at home. And there's the first large-scale public demonstration of nuclear fusion — the energy process of the sun.

For you, Progressland is a rare chance to see what General Electric can offer in terms of a meaningful career in engineering, finance, marketing, law, sales and many other specialties.

If this looks like your career path, talk to your placement director. He can help qualified people begin their careers at General Electric.

Latest AP

The first week of the baseball season usually is a rather hectic time. But the week that past seemed even more eventful than usual.

Mays On Binge

Willie Mays of the San Francisco Giants went on a home run binge, the type he usually delays until late in the pennant race. There were a couple of one-hit pitching jobs, with not one but two pitchers taking part in each, and yesterday, outfielder Chuck Hinton of the Washington Senators fell asleep while running to the dugout, thinking he had caught a fly ball for the third out. He had caught the fly ball all right, but, it was for the second out. And while Chuck was dreaming pleasant thoughts enroute to the dugout, two Kansas City runners were stomping across home plate.

Myth Explosion

But the biggest accomplishment of baseball's first week was the explosion of two myths.

All through Richie Allen's growing life he had heard how tough it was to hit in the major leagues. Now that Richie has grown up and become a third baseman for the Philadelphia Phillies, he had found that it's easier than he thought. He ended the first week with one of the top batting averages in the National League and among the leaders in runs batted in.

Consigliaro's Dream Comes True

Another rookie outfielder, Tony Consigliaro of the Boston Red Sox disproved the myth that dreams are only fulfilled in story books. Consigliaro, grew up in Massachusetts, dreaming about playing for the Red Sox. He not only made the team, but in his first game in Boston he hit the first pitch for a home run. Write that in a story, and they would say it never could happen.

Stengel Stories

A rainy day pastime in the major leagues is telling Casey Stengel stories. Ballplayers do it, so do coaches and managers. Even some club house men get into the act. Each has his own favorite yarn about the manager of the New York Mets.

The subject is a natural. Casey is one of the most colorful characters in the game. Put him in the midst of a situation where laughter is the only defense against ulcers, and you have a magic formula. Being manager of the Mets certainly is a situation that demands a light approach toward life.

Cleveland Indians Coach Solly Hemus enters the Stengel story derby with two yarns about Casey and Marv Throneberry. Marv played first base for the Mets for the first two years of their existence. It has been said of Throneberry that he had the uncanny ability to do the wrong thing at the right time. He didn't hit too well, but he was a terrible fielder, too.

Throneberry Goof

Hemus recalls one incident when he was coaching for the Mets and Throneberry unloaded a triple with the bases loaded. After the three men had scored on the hit, Marv pulled up at third, huffing and puffing and looking very pleased with himself. Suddenly, the opposing second baseman called for the ball and stepped on second base. The umpire called Throneberry out for failing to touch second base.

Out of the dugout stormed Casey, and he began to go all out in an argument with the umpire, foot-stamping, arm-waving, and plenty of talking. Suddenly, Casey stopped, put his hands down at his side and listened while the umpire talked. Then, the Mets manager nodded in agreement and walked off the field.

Stengel explained later that the umpire had told him Throneberry not only had missed second base, but he also had failed to touch first. So, if the other team had appealed, he would be called out and not credited even with a single.

Said Casey, "I decided to quit while Marv and I were ahead." Hemus also tells of the time the fans presented Frank Thomas with a cake at home plate on his birthday. Throneberry noted it was his birthday, too, and he wondered why he didn't get a cake.

Casey explained: "I was going to give you one, Marv, but I was afraid you'd drop it."

San Francisco's Willie Mays says he never has had such a sensational start in any season during his major league career. Apparently Mays isn't doing anything different than in past years because he's at a loss to explain his batting surge.

Allan King, WPI Soccer Coach At UConn Clinic

A teacher with a background of professional and college soccer has been added to the faculty of the 19th Annual Connecticut Coaches Clinic, held at the University of Connecticut campus on August 18, 19, and 20.

He is Alan King, coach of soccer at Worcester Tech and a prominent wing and prolific scorer, who has been playing professional ball for more than half his 33 years.

UConn Athletic Director J. O. Christian announced King's appointment. Announced previously as guest lecturers were Hugh Daugherty, Michigan State, and Rick Forzano, Connecticut, football; Joe Mullaney, Providence, and Fred Shabel, Connecticut, football; Joe Mullaney, Providence, and Fred Shabel, Connecticut, basketball; and Frank Kapral, Coast Guard, wrestling.

Professional at 17

Worcester Tech soccer coach since 1957, King turned professional in his native England when he was 17, joining the famed Newcastle United team of the English Soccer League where he played for three years. He has since played in Singapore, New York City, Hartford and New Britain. He was a member of the German-American League's Eintracht eleven when it won the national championship in 1955 and also an all-star in that circuit for four years. In Connecticut, he has played with the Hartford Hungarians, Italian Stars and currently is with the New Britain Falcons.

Soccer appeared on the clinic's schedule all day, Thursday.

The Coaches Clinic was co-sponsored by UConn with the Connecticut Interscholastic Athletic Conference and the Connecticut High School Coaches Association and was open to all interested high school and college coaches.

Sport Oddity

After a high school track meet last week between North Salem of Salem, Oregon and Hudson's Bay of Vancouver, Washington, both teams claimed ictory by the same score — 64 to 58. Both were right, by their own rules. Washington high school rules prevent an athlete from running in more than one event longer than 200 yards. Oregon rules do not.

The Athlete And Scholar

Ed. Note: The following article appeared in the HEIGHTS DAILY NEWS, a publication of New York University, on Tuesday, April 7, 1964. There is no implication by our sports department that this situation exists at UConn. Our coaching staff has emphasized academics as well as athletics.

Barry Kramer has been the subject of many articles in the past week. Possibly a little closer look into this All-American will reveal a lot about his school and his future. Four years ago NYU attracted Barry's attention; not merely because of the opportunity of playing in the Garden, but coming to an institution where there was a medical school of great prestige. Most likely Lou Rossini and Vic Obeck stressed this point, so much and so heavily that Barry decided to come to NYU over such top schools as Duke, Colgate and Ivy League colleges. Barry was an excellent student at Schenectady High. If he had entered as a student and disregarded his basketball, 77 plus 25 equals 102 then possibly Barry might have been accepted to a medical school. But this boy loved basketball and played his heart out for NYU in every game, win or lose. This fact cannot be denied. The future is not that bright for this star now. A recent article in the NEW YORK POST stated that because of the lack of courses with long labs, a low score on the Medical Boards and the barest minimum in science requirements, Barry had been rejected from Bellevue and other schools. What happened to Rossini and Obeck now? Did they forget this boy during the last four years, or were they too busy in television obligations to wonder about the attraction that they so smartly put to Barry and his family.

Barry gave to his school, more so than any other student at the Heights. NYU should have realized this. If he needed more courses for Bellevue, then why wasn't he advised about it? If his marks weren't that good in certain courses, then counsel and advice as to what other courses should have been given to him. Barry Kramer deserved this consideration. He is an intelligent and likeable individual. He might also be the last of the great scholar-athletes to come to NYU and to the Heights. As a result, NYU is receiving bad publicity from this situation.

Possibly one may ask, why give special attention to an athlete? But then if you consider the hours spent away from his studies and classes, you'll have to admit it's impossible to excel at NYU. NYU just shouldn't hand out scholarships and then forget about these boys. Help and advise them, they are carrying the name of NYU both on and off the athletic field.

Barry Kramer only applied to three medical schools. One of those was NYU's Bellevue. Maybe if he didn't have this on his mind, he would have been even greater on the basketball court. Then again, maybe if he was named an All-American this year as he was last year, Bellevue would have opened its doors — maybe.

However, there is more at stake here than the case of one person. There are implications in this situation that we are certain will be ignored by all concerned, especially the University. The question that must be asked is this: Is big-time athletics compatible with a university? Are we a school or a business engaged in entertainment, flesh peddling, and helping the gamblers (they are still there and always will be) of the Garden to ply their trade? It is time for a re-examination of the role of athletics not only at this university but throughout the nation.

The tragedy of Barry Kramer is that he was athlete first and student second.

Huskies In Opener; Play UMass Tomorrow

By ED BURTURLA and LOU MATSIKAS

The University of Connecticut baseball team will be seeking its first Yankee Conference victory today when they play the University of Massachusetts Redmen at 3:00 p.m. at Gardner Dow Field. UMass has a 2-1 overall record, while UConn has a disappointing 2-7 record.

Parmelee To Pitch

Pitching for the Redmen will be 6'7" Mike Johnson. Johnson was the top Redman pitcher on a recently completed Southern trip, striking out 16 men in 23 innings. Opposing him will be Jim Parmelee. Jim leads the pitching staff with a 1.12 E.R.A. and has 10 strikeouts in 16 innings.

Today's game will be the first of four home contests to be played within the next week. The second home game for the win-hungry Huskies will be against Maine on Friday and Saturday with the third game coming next Tuesday, when the UConn host New Hampshire.

Home Games Important

The importance of this home-stand is the Yankee Conference title. With successive wins over Massachusetts, Maine, and New Hampshire, the Connecticut nine will have a 4-1 conference record to carry into their road trip to Vermont. The Yankee Conference champion gets a bid to the NCAA District Tournament.

Loss To Rhody

Thus far, the Huskies are 0-1 in Yankee play, with the loss coming from the hands of a strong Rhode Island team. Pre-season selections for the title were UConn, UMass, and Vermont; but, the Rams have shown that they are definitely in the race with their impressive win over Connecticut last Saturday in Kingston, 6-1.

The Huskies will carry a strong hitting attack into the game, led by Ed Carroll and Dorrie Jackson. Ed Carroll was benched during the Rhode Island game and it is not known whether he will start tomorrow or not.

The tennis matches scheduled for Monday, April 20 will be played on Wednesday, April 22. The soccer games scheduled for Monday, April 20 will be played at the end of the season. The games scheduled for Wednesday will be played as posted.

In recent years, Tulane's football teams have been mostly losers. But coach Tommy O'Boyle is optimistic about his team's 1964 prospects. Says O'Boyle:

"They are bright. We're like a horse who was 40 lengths behind and is now only 20 lengths behind."
