Mock Legislature Convenes; Many Measures Approved

by John Nirenberg

Thursday in Hartford the Connecticut Intercollegiate Student Legislature, a group of more than 300 students representing fifteen Connecticut colleges convened in a mock legislature on Capitol Hill to try their hand at legislative politics. Saturday they voted to pass a UConn bill to lower the drinking age in this state to 19 1/2. Last year a similar bill was defeated by the students. In compromise, New York has considered raising its drinking age to 19 1/2.

The first order of business for the students was to join in committee meetings to decide which of the thirty bills (two submitted by each college) deserved floor debate. Both of UConn's bills were reported favorably, however, only the lowering of the drinking age received debate on the floor. The other UConn bill requiring a moment of silence before each school day was not debated due to lack of time.

John Nirenberg, Junior Senator from the University of Connecticut nominated Martin Gold, UConn's Senior Senator for the Presidency of the Senate. Although defeated, Gold automatically became minority leader.

After the elections the remainder of time was devoted to debating as many of the bills as possible. Each Senator and Representative knew the procedure and was familiar with the rules. It was their job to employ parliamentary procedure for political efficiency and professional accuracy. The organization met three times in a "mock-mock" session where they test their political strength and touch-up their ultimate strategy. At these meetings they try to employ every parliamentary rule and device to become familiar with each's function and possible use at the convention. The Intercollegiate Legislature is taken very seriously by Connecticut Legislators. Many of the bills passed by the students are introduced in the General Assembly. Last year one such bill was passed by the state and is now on the statutes.

The bills passed this session concern the creation of a Connecticut Service Corps, the State's counterpart of the Peace Corps; An act enabling dissection of one year to be grounds for divorce; the creation of a department of correction; and an act providing for mandatory arbitration for all strikes against public service companies.

John Nirenberg leading the debate for the minority with the direction of the minority leader Martin Gold helped defeat a bill making it mandatory for each of the 169 towns throughout the state to create a nine man civil rights commission.

The convention ended Saturday afternoon with its traditional awards ceremony. Besides Gold receiving an award for being a successful minority leader and candidate for the Senate Presidency, Jerry Lemega received an award from the convention for being its State publicity director and a standing ovation from the convention for his fine work. Lemega was a UConn delegate in the House.

UConn was represented by: Martin Gold and John Nirenberg in the Senate and Jerry Lemega, Jimmy Senk, Paul Marin, Sam Chernoff, Ed Aburdine, Barry Sundilson, Sharon Weatherbe, Gale Stevenson, Lynda Campbell, Jeannie Wexler and Lauren Cahn.

World News Briefs

Civil Rights Bill

Washington (AP) - Eighteen House Republicans say they are going to introduce a civil rights bill today aimed at ending discrimination in jury selection and protecting civil rights workers against violence. In his State of the Union message in January, President Johnson said he was going to propose similar legislation, but nothing has yet emerged from the White House.

The Republican bill will get at the problem of jury selection by proposing that federal jurors be selected at random from voting lists. It would then be possible to presume that state courts that do not follow a similar selection system may be discriminating.

Board Of Trustees Throws Away Invitation To Basketball's NIT

by Charles Lipson
Sports Editor

Following the Huskies' loss to Rhode Island on Friday night, a meeting was held in Athletic Director J.O. Christian's office. Unofficial sources had stated that the University of Connecticut basketball team was to be tendered a bid to the National Invitational Tournament.

Four Teams Accept Bids To Fill NIT

(AP) - The National Invitation Basketball Tournament in New York has completed its 14-team field by naming four more clubs. The latest to accept bids are San Francisco, Wichita, Villanova and New York University.

The four join a field which already includes Brigham Young, Louisville, Manhattan, Virginia Tech, Army, Temple, Boston College, St. John's of New York, DePaul and Penn State.

The tournament opens Thursday at Madison Square Garden. San Francisco, runner-up in the West Coast Athletic Conference, is the sixth former NIT champion in the field. The Dons won the tournament in 1949. This year they had a record of 21 victories and five losses.

Wichita tied for second place in the Missouri Valley Conference, and won 17 of its 26 games.

Villanova won only 15 and lost ten, but the Philadelphia team won ten of its last eleven games.

NYU won 15 and lost nine, and earned a bid by upsetting St. John's last night.

Fulbright To Start Red China Talks

(AP) - Chairman J.W. Fulbright of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee announced his committee will start hearings Tuesday on Red China in an attempt to lessen the danger of war with the Communist nation.

The Arkansas Democrat, who has been a critic of U.S. Vietnam policy, says a searching effort to increase public understanding may change what he called "the fatal expectancy of war" held by Chinese leaders and some U.S. officials.

Fulbright called the danger of war with Red China real because hostile Chinese leaders soon will have nuclear weapons. He contends that the Vietnam war can bring us and China into conflict by accident or design almost any time.

Secretary of State Rusk also spoke today of the danger of massive war if Peking and Moscow discover our commitment to prevent a communist take-over in Vietnam is not complete. Rusk spoke on a recorded television appearance.

Republican Senator Jacob Javits says he is convinced that if Hanoi offers to negotiate on the basis of acceptance of the Viet Cong as a separate group the Administration would agree.

The purpose of the meeting was to decide whether or not the University would accept a bid to the tournament. Members of the Board of Trustees, President Babbidge, and J.O. Christian discussed the situation for about an hour before a decision was made.

At about 11:00 p.m. the answer was given to the press that under no circumstances would UConn accept a bid to the NIT. The announcement stated that the Yankee Conference as a whole had no policy regarding the acceptance of a bid to the NIT. The question of NIT participation is up to each respective school to decide.

The reporters present questioned why the trustees had rejected the bid. One of the reasons offered was that UConn follows and participates only in NCAA tournaments. Another reason given was that some of the schools participating in the NIT did not meet our academic standards.

According to URI officials, the bid offered by the NIT would have been accepted by their school.

The history of the bid to the runner-up team in the Yankee Conference is not very old. The rumor that the second place team would receive a bid to the NIT came out of the University of Rhode Island campus just this season. One of the reasons for the rumor was the fact that the URI director of Athletics, Maurice Zarchen, is on the selection committee for the NIT and that he had suggested to the committee that a bid be offered to the runner-up school in the Yankee Conference.

After Rhode Island had lost to the Huskies on Tuesday night and the site of Friday's game was chosen, another rumor spread over the URI campus that the Rams would definitely accept a bid to the NIT should they lose to the Huskies on Friday.

Teach-In On UConn Draws Mixture To HUB Ballroom

PART ONE

by Barbra Peters

Last Saturday, March 5th, UConn staged its first teach-in about the University. Held in the Student Union, about 250 persons attended the ASG-sponsored program, which dealt with the quality of education at UConn and the intellectual atmosphere on campus.

The purpose of the teach-in, according to Provost Gant, was "to determine what our (the University's) goals in the next 10-15 years will be and to try to follow them, university-wide, in the long-range planning we're doing."

President of ASG Andy Dinniman considered the purpose of the teach-in of an immediate character. "I was hoping this teach-in would give an indication of what kinds of reforms should take place in the university. We want more student faculty and administrative agreement on policy itself. Possibly, we'll have a return session of the teach-in."

How effective the teach-in was remains to be seen, said many sources, such as Shirley Ariker, an English Department Graduate Assistant. "Whether anything was accomplished or not depends on the follow-up, on the committees founded and if administration takes it (the teach-in) seriously."

The morning session, held in the Student Union Ballroom, began with the panel discussion of "What is the function of a good State University and how does the University of Connecticut compare?"

As a member of this panel, Dr. Jack Davis of the English Department concluded that "Liberal Arts programs have become programs that are trying to build students to match what society is, which is a shamelessly low ideal; they give the student the social graces for some job and do not spiritually awaken the students, do not permit them to be what they should be, free and autonomous human beings."

Speaking on the panel, Dinniman pointed out that, due to the University's deadening affect on the incoming student, all the new books and added faculty won't make any difference. "A student educated by a university should be an independent thinker," he said, "but how can we get independent thinkers when you go to class and get the same deadening rhythm everytime of: A. 1,2,3; B. 1,2,3; C. 1,2,3..."

During the question-and-answer period following the panel discussion, it was revealed that UConn does not have a specific policy on the suspension of students following their arrest, but before they go on trial. Provost Gant said, "We have a Review Commission for this purpose. There are certain kinds of charges against the University community that involve a certain amount of risk. If the risk is too great, it is necessary to separate this person from the University."

The first of the five subjects, to be discussed in the afternoon workshops, was presented by Dr. David Ivry, Professor of Insurance. Speaking on the physical aspects of the University, Dr. Ivry said, "Our rural setting is one of our better aspects; because of our very location and with 90 per cent of the entire student body housed on campus, the potential for the students identifying with the University is tremendous."

One of the ideas from Dr. Ivry's speech that caused comment in the afternoon session, dealt with his proposal that students not be allowed to have cars on campus. Dr. Ivry said, "We can not compete with cars. The greatest professor in the world can not compete with a convertible on a pleasant May day. We could create an atmosphere of unity between the student and his campus, if we had the student here seven days-a-week."

Advance To The Rear

For the second time in the last five days, the student body of the University of Connecticut has been victimized by the shortsightedness and backwardness of the administrative aristocracy which exists here. The rejection of the bid to the National Invitational Tournament without a plausible explanation is a far greater injustice than the mishandling of the ticket situation for the play-off game.

The reason that has been offered by our Director of Athletics is that the University follows the NCAA and therefore will not play in any other tournament. The fact of the matter is that the NCAA sanctions the NIT and places no restrictions on teams that wish to participate in it.

Another reason that has been offered as a justification for not participating is that the schools which have accepted bids do not meet the academic standards of our school. If that is the case, why do we play some of these teams in the regular season? For that matter, why do we lay Rhode Island? Rhode Island has a star on their team that wanted to come to Connecticut but could not meet our entrance requirements. Connecticut is in the Yankee Conference, not the Ivy League. Above the duping the students have received, the basketball team must not be overlooked. After a slow start they jelled into one of the finest teams in the east. They were certainly deserving of a bid to the NIT and they should have been given the opportunity to prove themselves. Certainly they had a better chance of doing well in the NIT than they would have had in the NCAA.

The time has come for the members of the Board of Trustees to remove their blinders and advance to 1966. If the University makes the effort to hire a fine basketball coach, bring outstanding players to the school and field a top flight team, certainly they should be consistent enough to follow through and allow tournament play.

A decision has to be made. If this school expects to keep its present coach, bring in new talent and develop some sort of public relations with the outside world, which does exist, it must reevaluate its present policy and take the appropriate steps. Fear of publicity has kept this University in the shadow of its neighbor in New Haven. It is time to put things in their proper perspective.

Rick Forzano

Rick Forzano has resigned as the head football coach to accept a position with the St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League. Although his won-lost record as a coach here at UConn was not one of the best, he will always be remembered as the coach of the first Connecticut team to beat Yale. For that alone, his stay here was worthwhile. We would like to extend our best wishes to him in his future endeavors as a football coach.

Advantage

To the Editor:

This letter is directed towards Mr. Phillip Barry, our field house manager, and Mr. J. O. Christian, our Director of Intercollegiate Athletics, and may be entitled sour grapes. I was one of the fortunate few to be able to speak to these two men regarding the ticket policy set for Friday night's game with Rhode Island about which there has been so much controversy. After an explanation of exactly what the policy was by Mr. Barry, a number of questions were raised as to the validity of his estimation of the number of tickets which would be desired by the Student Body for this particular game; the students present felt that to judge the demand on the basis of past games this semester was unrealistic in light of the fact that the student body WOULD certainly come out in much greater numbers to support their team at a special game like this one at which a great number of the opposing team's fans would be present. Also discussed was the problem of this university's obligation to those people throughout the state, alumni and other, who support the team and the school year after year; for this game in particular, it was felt by these two men that these people deserved as great or more consideration than either UCONN students or UCONN faculty. Even when it was brought out by the students present that these people DO NOT CHEER at our games to support the team these men stuck to this value judgment. I asked Mr. Barry if he realized that the tickets given to Rhode Island might end up largely in the hands of their students, who would then constitute a majority of the cheerers at the game, and he replied that he did not believe that this would happen. I think most people who know anything about basketball realize that there exists a phenomenon known as "home court advantage," often worth as much as ten points for the home club. Well, Mr. Barry and Mr. Christian, you were at the game as was I—could you hear our crowd over Rhody's? Were there adults sitting in Rhody's STUDENT sections as there were in ours? Did you see the season ticketholders and other friends of the university cheering with the UCONN students, even when two of our male cheerleaders were up behind our student section urging them on? I do not ask for a home court advantage for our team—but as Mr. Christian suggests, it is always a nice idea to try to equalize it as much as possible. Friday night's game, UCONN vs. RHODY, was played at UCONN with a crowd to UCONN's disadvantage. Now do you see where you value judgment missed the mark, Sirs?

Drains & Brains

To the Editor:

I would like to tell the University how much I enjoy walking (perhaps wading is more appropriate) across our soggy campus each time it rains or when we have snow melting. There are few sights more aesthetically satisfying than the sight of four inches of cold, cold water cascading down the path to the Towers dormitories, gurgling and cooling to itself as it hurls itself against your shoes and pants cuffs with reckless abandon. What in all nature can compare with the wavering reflections of the Student Union building in the temporary ponds astride the sidewalk in front of Engineering I? These joys, when combined with the thrills of crossing the Isthmus of Social Sciences and the skirting of the Great Lakes in each and every parking lot, make for an athletically challenging day.

It seems to me that a University with a School of Engineering rated as high as ours would be able to do something about the poor drainage here. After three consecutive days puddle jumping ceases to be fun, the magic goes right out of it. One begins to notice scales forming about the ankles and, in many of the more advanced cases, webbing begins to develop between the toes.

If the University does not do something in the way of improving the drainage system the only people who will be able to make their classes will be the swimming team.

Rent-A-Cops

To the Editor:

It was a peaceful, almost-spring, kind of day. The wind was brisk, but the sun had just risen over Commons to warm the several hundred students who were waiting patiently for tickets to the Big Game with Rhody. Some were equipped with blankets and pillows, many had spent the night in front of the field house to be assured of a ticket, one was even dozing comfortably in a rocking-chair. The line started at the north door of the building and had snaked its way up and down stairs, around bushes, and finally to the extreme south tip, near the driveway beside the stadium. There was an air of excitement, of friendly competition to see who could get up latest and still be able to obtain the precious tickets. Since the line was narrow, only one or two abreast, students could roam around and chat with other fellow early-risers while friends held their places. There was no pushing, or shoving; no massive stampeding, or cutting into line—it was peaceful, quiet, and orderly.

Then Security came.

Only the good Lord knows what made them decide to compress the scraggly, but organized, line into a solid block of humanity, but they did it. In the confusion of re-organization, many at the rear of the line decided to make a break for it and charged forward. It was a case of the sharpest elbows winning. We're not exactly midgets, but what girl would tangle with a six-foot, 200-pound guy, especially when he is driven by an insatiable desire to get those tickets even if it involves trampling a few people on the way. The specific gentleman (word chosen only for its biological implications of masculinity) in question DID get his tickets, and was later parading around offering to sell them for the ever-so-reasonable price of $7.50 each.

But we're not blaming the students—it's a natural instinct to try to get ahead (in life OR in line) when the opportunity presents itself. Our gripe lies with the Security police, the so-called "rent-a-cops," whose job it is to preserve law and order among the masses of barbarians which inhabit our campus. When the Security car pulled up in front of the field house today at approximately 8:05, everything was going smoothly. By 8:10 everything was going haywire. Maybe they felt that their jobs would be in danger if they should be caught tending an orderly group of students. At least with a screaming mob on their hands they could give passers-by the impression of working for their keep. At one point it was like the Wild West all over again—the cowboy cops herding their cattle into the corral and causing a stampede in doing it.

We're not favoring anarchy. The Security force performs many valuable services on campus, but one word of advice which may prevent future difficulties—when things are going smoothly, "LEAVE WELL ENOUGH ALONE!!"

Sincerely,
Nancy Hall & Becky Sager

Discussion

To the Editor:

This evening at 7 o'clock in room 315 of the Commons, the Students of Objectivism invite you to discuss with them the statement of Nathaniel Branden, that objectivism holds:

1.) that existence, reality, the external world, is what it is independent of anyone's knowledge, judgement, beliefs, hopes, wishes or fears—that facts are facts, that A is A, that things are what they are;

2.) that reason, the faculty that identifies and integrates the material provided by man's senses, is fully competent to know the facts of reality;

3.) that man's perception of the facts of reality must constitute the basis of his value-judgments, that just as reason is his only guide to knowledge, so it is his only guide to action;

4.) that man is an end in himself, not a means to the ends of others, he must live for his own sake with the achievement of his rational self-interest as the moral purpose of his life, neither sacrificing himself to others nor sacrificing others to himself;

5.) that no one has the right to seek values from others by the initiation of physical force;

6.) that the political-economic of these principles is laissez-capitalism, a system based on the inviolate supremacy of individual rights, in which the exclusive function of government is the protection of rights;

7.) that the absence of these principles from men's minds and actions is responsible for the present state of the world."

Study On Growth Rate Reaching Completion

by Rose Marie Barry

A two-year diet study with eight E. O. Smith adolescent boys is nearing completion in the foods and nutrition department of the School of Home Economics. Sixty days of experimentation and recording have been divided into three 20-day periods. These protein and amino acid studies are being done to determine dietary factors affecting metabolism in growth.

Meals are measured and prepared by staff and student help. "These students are paid for their participation at the end of the total study period," said Dr. Johnnie W. Prothro, associate professor in the foods department and director of these studies.

These nutrition studies are supported by funds from the state, the Agriculture Experiment Station and the NIH (National Institute of Health).

UConn One Of Twenty Schools Invited To Join International Honors Program

UConn is one of 20 U.S. colleges and universities invited to join the International Honors Program, an experimental venture in "cooperative undergraduate education."

Under terms of this novel program, a highly select group of college juniors will spend an academic year overseas conducting comparative and interdisciplinary studies in three foreign lands.

Snyder Appointed To Law Committee

Lester B. Snyder, a teacher at the University of Connecticut School of Law, is one of 60 law professors invited to help the public better understand cases argued before the U.S. Supreme Court.

Appointed to a special advisory committee on recent Supreme Court decisions, he and his colleagues will prepare commentaries for press, radio and television reporters in an effort to clarify legal issues in cases under consideration by the nation's highest tribunal.

The UConn participant will be selected from among qualified local Honors Program students in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences. As part of the selection process here, candidates must prepare a statement on how they expect to benefit from their experience. No special foreign language skills are required.

According to Dr. William Spengemann, assistant provost and head of the UConn Honors Program, the choice of all participants will depend, in large measure, on the fields of specialization of three "perceptors" (tutors) accompanying the IHP contingent abroad. Students should be concentrating in one of the three major fields of their tutors, he added.

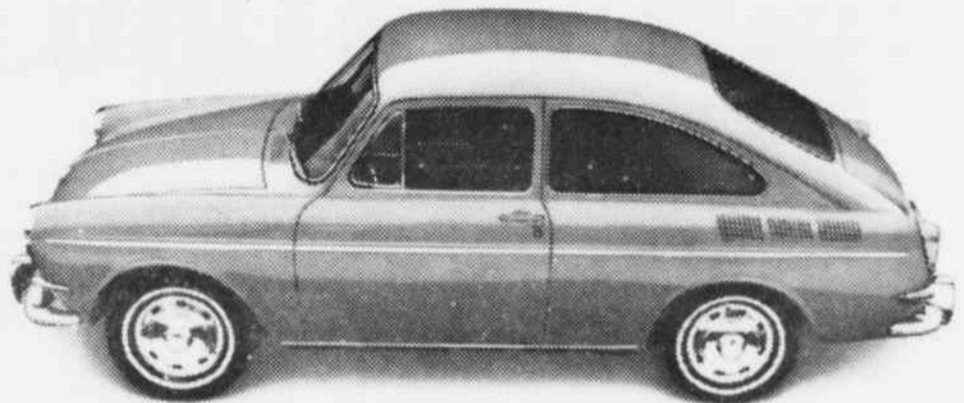

Paul W. Conner, IHP director at Princeton, N.J., reports that the names of the 20 students chosen will be disclosed about March 15. Plans now call for this group to leave in the fall of 1966, with a second contingent departing the following fall, Mr. Conner added.

Cost to the individual student at UConn is not expected to exceed his expenses for an academic year at Storrs. Grants from the IHP and University will meet the added costs of overseas study.

Connecticut Asks For Action In Rail Crisis

(AP)---Connecticut asked today for "immediate and meaningful" action on its bid to share in the costs of the federally-sponsored experiments on high-speed rail transportation. Commerce Secretary John Connor said in a letter to the Governor last month that the reason Connecticut has not been included in the program thus far is that the tracks in the state are unsuitable. Dempsey said that such problems can be remedied easily. Current plans call for the initial phase of the high-speed experiment to be installed between Boston and Providence.

What's a nice-looking car like you doing in a Volkswagen ad?

Nobody made a mistake. That shapely car is the new Volkswagen Fastback.

It's in this VW ad because it's a VW.

(We haven't made very many yet, so you probably haven't even seen one yet. That's why we're running this ad in the first place.)

The Fastback isn't a VW in name only; it's a Volkswagen through and through.

The engine is air-cooled so it has no use for water or antifreeze. And it's in the back to make the going easy when the weather isn't.

The Fastback is airtight, like all Volkswagens, because it's made in the same plant by the same people.

Naturally, there are differences, too.

The Fastback engine is a little more powerful (the car will cruise at better than 80). It holds 5 nicely. It has disc brakes in front. The upholstery is (for us) kind of jazzy. And it (the Fastback) costs $2,128*.)

If you've steered clear of a Volkswagen because it wasn't big enough or good-looking enough or expensive enough, you may be forced into thinking it all through again.

Sorry.

University Of Minnesota Medical Doctor Experiments With LSD To Try To Restore Normal Functioning To Human Nervous System

LSD, an hallucinogenic drug responsible for the dismissal of two Harvard psychologists, is currently being used by a University of Minnesota medical doctor to restore normal and abnormal performance in the nervous system.

Although small doses of the drug can do severe brain damage if improperly used, it is being administered here in medically supervised conditions with screened subjects and can cause no harm, according to Amedeo S. Marrazzi, pharmacology professor in charge of the experiment.

Marrazzi said the danger is in the misuse of LSD as in the case of the two Harvard professors, Timothy Leary and Richard Alpert.

The pair's unapproved experiments with the drug sent two student volunteers to mental hospitals. Mentally unbalanced persons can sometimes go completely insane under the drug.

LSD, short for d-lysergic acid diethylamide, is derived from a fungus which grows on the grain of wheat and rye.

If taken in excessive doses, it produces weird effects: vision and perception are altered drastically. One sees the world, as Time magazine described it, in "wide-screen three-dimensional vision," sometimes in Technicolor. Thought processes are released from their usual restraints so greater insights may develop, including deep spiritual feelings.

One Harvard student, after a session with the expelled professor, was almost killed as he walked in front of Boston rush-hour traffic. He said he thought he was God and that nothing could touch him.

Dr. Marrazzi said the aim of his experiment is to find out how the nervous system handles the impulses of mentally ill persons. By impeding the flow of impulses with LSD, he can imitate the situation in a mentally ill person's brain, he said.

Marrazzi said LSD first interferes with normal perception, which operates through the memory part of the brain. Here, stored information is compared to new information received through the five senses and the brain interprets this. When a person first sees a pencil, he records it; he will use his memory to recall what a pencil looks like and is used for the next time he confronts one, Dr. Marrazzi said.

LSD "closes the door" of transmission between memory and new information, he said. The results are a misinterpretation of the new information, commonly called a hallucination.

Thus, a pencil will no longer be seen as a pencil; it may be "misinterpreted as a dangerous weapon," Dr. Marrazzi said. This reflects the abnormal performance in an ill person's mind.

Cautious experiments on this controversial drug are also being carried on elsewhere. Some feel, as does Dr. Marrazzi, that clinical experimentation with LSD and other hallucinogens may open a whole new field in psychiatry and psychology and in the treatment of mental disturbances. But opinions are sharply divided.

Dr. Sterling Bunnell Jr., a resident in psychiatry at the Mount Zion Medical Center in San Francisco, lists four criticisms of the drug:

--Usage of the drugs causes psychosis. The experimenter who takes the drug himself allows it to subtly influence his judgment and objectivity.

--It causes passiveness, introspection, and a dreamy state.

--Various religious practitioners regard it as sinful to explore feeling and emotion outside the church. Many subjects relate the psychedelic experience to a religious conversation.

--The long-term effect is unknown.

Dr. Marrazzi claims that the drug can be used safely, however, and claims his experiment proves his assertion. He also points to the successful use of LSD in a controlled experiment with 5,000 persons at the Los Angeles Veteran's Hospital.

A student who had used LSD wrote of his experiences in the Daily Californian, at the University of California at Berkeley. He said that adults had lost the ability to think about the world in the terms of a child.

He added, "Fortunately, for us adults there is an avenue, however temporary, which bypasses social structure in its journey to heightened awareness and improved consciousness..with this artificial aid, I could once again open my eyes to the beauty in details and nuances of color."

But psychiatrists Jerome Levine and Arnold Ludwig writing in Comprehensive Psychiatry, cautioned against any use of LSD "just for fun." They wrote, "The funmaker who takes it for a 'kick' most seriously jeopardizes his career as a human being."

URI To Sponsor Symposium On Changing Morals

The Special Events Committee of the Memorial Union at the University of Rhode Island is sponsoring a three day symposium on March 13, 14 and 15. The general theme will be "The Changing Morals and Ethics of the College Student of Today." The first two days, the 13 and 14, will be devoted to speakers. One speaker will be presented each day and a question and answer period will follow each program. Following the two days of speaker programs a film will be presented on the Berkley campus situation to supplement our program. Then, on March 15 a panel discussion will be scheduled in attempt to co-ordinate and summarize the symposium. As soon as confirmation is received on our speakers their names will be announced.

This program is planned primarily for the benefit of the of the various colleges throughout the Southern New England area and also for the benefit of any persons desiring to attend.

Going Up!

A growing number of Harvard and Radcliffe students have asked for and are receiving psychiatric care from the University Health Service, Dr. Dana L. Farnsworth announced. Farnsworth is the director of the service.

This year, nine per cent of Harvard undergraduates and 14 per cent of Radcliffe students are under psychiatric care. The number has been growing by 100 to 200 each year.

Farnsworth attributes it to increased student willingness to seek assistance and the enlarged staff.

He also stated that the increase points to the acceptance of preventive psychiatry as an integral part of college education.

WAKE ME WHEN IT'S OVER

The trouble with early morning classes is that you're too sleepy. At late morning classes you're too hungry. At early afternoon classes you're too logy. At late afternoon classes you're too hungry again. The fact is—and we might as well face it—there is no good time of day to take a class.

What shall we do then? Abandon our colleges to the ivy? I say no! I say America did not become the hope of mankind and the world's largest producer of butterfats and tal-low by running away from a fight!

If you're always too hungry or too sleepy for class, then let's hold classes when you're not too hungry or sleepy: namely, while you're eating or sleeping.

Classes while eating are a simple matter. Just have a lecturer lecture while the eaters eat. But watch out for noisy foods. I mean who can hear a lecturer lecture when everybody is crunching celery or matzo or like that? Serve quiet stuff—like anchovy paste on a doughnut, or steaming bowls of lamb fat.

Now let us turn to the problem of learning while sleeping. First, can it be done?

Yes, it can. Psychologists have proved that the brain is definitely able to assimilate information during sleep. Take, for instance, a recent experiment conducted by a leading Eastern university (Stanford). A small tape recorder was placed under the pillow of the subject, a freshman named Wrobert Wright. When Wrobert was fast asleep, the recorder was turned on. Softly, all through the night, it repeated three statements in Wrobert's slumbering ear:

1. Herbert Spencer lived to the age of 109 and is called "The Founder of English Eclectic Philosophy."

2. The banana plant is not a tree but a large perennial herb.

3. The Archduke Ferdinand was assassinated in 1914 at Sarajevo by a young nationalist named Mjilas Cvetnik, who has been called "The Trigger of World War I."

When Wrobert awoke in the morning, the psychologists said to him, "Herbert Spencer lived to the age of 109. What is he called?"

Wrobert promptly answered, "Perennial Herb."

Next they asked him, "What has Mjilas Cvetnik been called?"

Wrobert replied, "Perennial Serb."

Finally they said, "Is the banana plant a tree?"

"To be honest," said Wrobert, "I don't know too much about bananas. But if you gents want any information about razor blades, I'm your man."

"Well," said the psychologists, "can you tell us a blade that shaves closely and cleanly without nicking, pricking, scratching, scraping, scoring, gouging, grinding, flaying or flensing?"

"Yes, I can," said Wrobert. "Personna® Stainless Steel Blades. Not only does Personna give you a true luxury shave, but it gives you heaps and gobs and bushels and barrels of true luxury shaves—each one nearly as truly luxurious as the first."

"Land's sake!" said the psychologists.

"Moreover," said Wrobert, "Personna is available not only in the Double Edge style blade, but also in the Injector style blade."

"Great balls of fire!" said the psychologists.

"So why don't you rush to your dealer and get some Personnas at once?" said Wrobert.

"We will," said the psychologists, twinkling, "but there is something we have to do first."

Whereupon they awarded Wrobert an honorary L.L.B. (Lover of Luxury Blades) degree, and then, linking arms, they sang and danced and bobbed for apples till the campfire had turned to embers.

If you're looking for an honorary degree yourself, we recommend B.S. (Burma Shave®)—from the makers of Personna. It soaks rings around any other lather; it comes in regular or menthol.

Five ideal dates. Three dollars($3)

Join in the most adventurous experiment of our time. Operation Match. Let the IBM 7090 Computer (the world's most perfect matchmaker) stamp out blind dates for you.

Two Harvard juniors started it. 100,000 students have done it. Now you and 3,400,000 college students in 1500 colleges in 50 cities can sign up and join in!

Just send us the coupon. We'll send you the Operation Match Quantitative Personality Projection Test pronto!

Then return the questionnaire with $3.00. What you're like and what you like will be translated into our 7090's memory file. It will scan the qualifications of every member of the opposite sex from this geographic area. Then it will select the five or more matches best for you.

You'll receive your names, addresses and telephone numbers within three weeks. You'll be what your date is looking for. Your date will be what you are looking for. In other words: the matches will be mutual.

Dear IBM 7090,
I am 17 or over (and 27 or under) and I want to help stamp out blind dates. So mail me my questionnaire. Quick!

COACH RICK FORZANO, shown during a pre-season workout, has resigned from his position at the University to take over the duties of offensive back coach for the St. Louis Cardinals of the National Football League. Forzano in his two years at UConn compiled a record of 7-10-1.

Freshman Swimming Team Beats Brown In Final Meet

The University of Connecticut freshman swim team closed out a highly successful season last Thursday evening with a 64-31 victory over Brown University at Brundage Pool. The Froshermen compiled a record of ten wins and one loss, the lone setback coming at the hands of Williston Academy, the New England Prep School Champion.

The Brown meet was under Husky control throughout as they took first place in eight events and seconds in three. The 200 yard medley relay team of Thomson, Lile, Schongalla and Gruters won that event in 1:49.4 followed by a one - two finish by McAlary and Solis in the 200 yard freestyle. McAlary's winning time was 2:02.8. The 50 yard freestyle was another one-two sweep for UConn as Glen Partelow splashed home in 23.4 followed by Taff.

The 200 yard individual medley was won by Brown's Stokes in 2:20.1. Vellrath and Harmon finished second and third for UConn. In the diving events, Craig Stevens took first place with a point total of 133.5.

Bill Hassell and Bob Schongalla finished one - two in the 100 yard butterfly for another Husky sweep. Hassell's winning effort was clocked at 57.7. Glen Partelow and Joe Solis managed still another sweep in the 100 yard freestyle, with Partelow posting a winning time of 51.0.

The 100 yard backstroke went to Brown University's Salter with a winning time of 1:01.5. Sky Thomson and Bill Harmon finished second and third for UConn. The 400 yard freestyle went to Vellrath of UConn in 4:59.9 while Tom Bouck won the 100 yard breaststroke in 1:07.3. Yanosy took third.

Faculty Basketball Team Victorious; Game Being Protested By Students

Running out to a 22-2 lead in the opening minutes of a ferociously played ball game, the Faculty coasted to a 49-37 win over the Students in a game played Thursday night at the UConn fieldhouse. The contest was played before a screaming crowd of 1000.

However, it was found out by Philadelphia baseball teams hold the records in both the American and National Leagues for finishing in last place the most consecutive years. The athletics wound up in the American League cellar for seven straight years, from 1915 through 1921. And the Phillies finished last in the National League for five seasons in a row, 1938 through 1942.

After the 1964-65 National basketball Association All-Star game, the San Francisco Warriors traded big Wilt Chamberlain to the Philadelphia 76-ers. Following the league's draft of college players that season, Warriors owner Frank Mieuli was quoted as saying:

"We tried for fellows seven feet, one inch in the draft because we wanted to get some use out of Chamberlain's old uniforms."

76'ers Top Celtics

The Philadelphia 76'ers took over first place in the Eastern division of the National Basketball Association by defeating the Boston Celtics 113-110 in a game played yesterday afternoon in Boston.

this reporter, that the students plan to protest the contest on the basis that the faculty team had some members below the NCAA standard of a 1.6 teaching rating.

In a late report from the NCAA, the faculty's manager and coach John Vlandis has appealed the protest stating that he as admissions director had personally looked into all of the ratings and had not found any of the teachers below the 1.6 level.

No report on a decision had been made up to press time.

Before the students had realized what had happened, the faculty had a 20 point lead. Ron Dickerson, Mike Ferrill, and Jack Flynn paced the scoring, with Mike Howard and Terry Webster helping out now and then.

The students came back strong to make the contest close. Carl Anderson started to control the boards for the students and Don Kelly began hitting on his long corner shots. Charlie Lipson helped settle down the student team with some fine ball-handling and the students fought back narrowing the gap to 29-20.

The teams started substituting freely from this point on as players began to look weary from the fast calibre of play.

Jay Farrell, Lee Greif, Ira Loss, Bill Bixbee, and Charlie Case were sent in to rough things up, but pivotman Capt. Holecsek threw in a beautiful hook - shot to completely demoralize the students. Andy Baylock controlled the rebounding for the faculty as Carl Anderson was taken out for a breather. This allowed the faculty to build up an 11 point lead at half-time.

The second half proved to be similar to the first except that the faculty wasn't able to jump out in front by anymore than 11 until the final two minutes of the game.

Scoring honors for the Faculty went to Ron Dickerson, while Don Kelly paced the student combine. Carl Anderson lead all rebounders with 12 followed by Charlie Lipson with 6, as the Students outrebounded the faculty 49-38.
