Campus Leaders Caught In Stag Film Scandal

Former ASG President Lee Greef

Ex-ASG President Lee Greef and BOG prexy Rave Page have been taken into custody for showing lewd films in Von der Mehden under the guise of a BOG sponsored talk by another famous lecturer that nobody ever heard of.

The film, narrated by Greef with the assistance of Websters the intercollegiate dictionary, opened with the birth of 6 new piglets at the Aggie barns. In the background of the stalls one could see the highly competitive young ladies of Kappa and Theta room-rushing. (The piglets went DZ in a package deal!)

Next the camera focused in on the Jungle cafeteria which turned out to be one of the filthiest scenes in the entire show. After a brief interlude of Scott Fraser's paraphrasing of the playboy philosophy, there was an equally nauseating scene depicting the "TEP DOES" organizational meeting featuring the original cast but for Bert Parks playing Norm Greenberg and the Alpha Sig pledge class playing the muscular dystrophy kids.

The highlight of the film was a passionate love scene starring the brothers of Chi Phi and their mirrors.

It was at this time that Security entered the hall and demanded everyone move their cars--after they realized what was going on they quickly returned to headquarters to get their bullet and then came back to make the arrests. Lee was quoted as saying, "Now, here's the thing..." When asked to comment, Page stated, "Awww, I couldn't get a date!" But this obviously ambiguous comment could have applied to any evening.

South Campus Grapevine Pledges 400

The South Campus Horizontal Media Uniform Communications Korps (SCHMUCK), better known as the grapevine, has taken a pledge class of 412. The organization serves the entire campus with all that vital information so necessary to the operation of all campus activities. (i.e., what license plates were at the Manchester last night)

According to the President, Miss Lotta Dert, "We've all been active schmucks for a long time and with these new girls we hope to reach new horizons."

Two hundred of the new girls will be going down to Charlotte, N.C., for the annual National Schmuck Convention. The conference is held each year to instruct the new pledges in the arts of wiretapping, eavesdropping, rumor-spreading, and outright lying. These seminars are conducted by the Schmuck's brother organization, the Ku Klux Klan.

It has been learned that through the cooperation of the Univac Corporation, a highly computerized system of campus communications will be going into effect next month in project "Instantdirt". "Instantdirt" has been designed to assemble all fallacies, mistruths, misconceptions, and misunderstandings necessary for the spontaneous development of an extremely malicious rumor.

The SCHMUCKS have a fine record of accomplishments including 154 depinnings, 16 broken engagements, five suicides, two abortions and one castration. It was just last week when a successful quadruple transfer rebound was performed resulting in a bitter fight and a swift kick in the groin. Someone was seen in the wrong company by a Theta who mentioned it to a Kappa who quickly phoned a DZ, ADPI and Gerry Poch. The transfer to the fraternity quadrangle resulted in the story coming up at a Delta Chi bull session, and when the final version got around to an SAE card game, it was reprinted in Dear Dolores with excellent distortion.

Be-In on the Maul

A Be-In will be staged on campus this Friday in front of the Student Union at 3:00 p.m. The event is being sponsored by the Bored of Government.

The event is termed an anti-philosophical movement by the Thomasian Hippies and g.t.'s no b.t.'s by the SAElists. Whatever it is the humanists on this university promise a large attendance.

The Currists of the History Department, the Kupperites of the Philosophy Department, the Hilltites of the Journalism Department, the Allamosts of the English Department, the Friends of Max in the Psyche Department all will turn out for the demonstration.

And they will be demonstrating for what every person at this university has wanted to demonstrate about for years. After hours of inquiry this reporter has concluded that the event should be eventful. If there is a great turnout it will be the first time in the history of this university that a demonstration of this nature has met with widespread approval.

The demonstration is to put cocaine back into coke.

Babbith and Stakepole Announce

999th Student-Faculty Committee

President Babbith announced today that a new student-faculty committee is being formed to "investigate the new standards of morality arising on the UConn campus." The President was quick to point out that the committee was not necessarily against the new morality. "After all," said Babbith, "look at the CCC Parade. We are not puritans, certainly. Phi Sigma Delta was chastized last year for certain actions and conduct during the parade, but this year, under a more progressive attitude, we gave them an award for throwing an even bigger moon than before."

As usual, Associated Student Government President Matt Stakepole was quick to endorse the new committee. He said that it would increase student-administration dialogue, just like all the other committees. He pointed out that despite the fact that the committee had absolutely no power, it would give the student leaders on campus another platform on which to talk. Stakepole suggested that a committee be formed to study the new committee on morality, and after a careful investigation, decide whether or not to give the morality committee any voice in campus affairs.

The ASG President also said that the leader of the new committee was to be Student Senator Ed Isaham, the ISO party whipped. The Senator explained his conception of the committee's role as "a chance to give students a path of communication with the administration." He also said that the only problem he could foresee was a shortage of student leaders to

UConn Tradition Upheld:

Liberal Ousted from Poly-Sigh

The University of Connecticut underwent a traumatic experience this year, but the sticky problem has finally been solved by the Poly-Sigh Department.

The problem, it seems, was a young subversive, new to the department this year. We have been assured that this man was only an imposter, that the real instructor, a true and good conservative, never arrived.

At any rate, the sometimes moustached instructor (who by the way did not have a crew-cut at anytime during the year - just goes to show where his sympathies lie) is leaving for a better position in a newer, more progressive school. (Which, we can not help but add, serves him right! It is exactly what he deserves.)

We are certainly glad that the department reflected the attitude of the administration of the university which reflects and mimics the state administration. This attitude is extremely noteworthy and should command, from every resident of the state, the utmost respect. This attitude was formed very slowly and slowly went through the membership of many committees and came slowly out after slowly being slowly considered by the members. The attitude reflects this very quality-slowness.

The young rebel, who has sullied the halls of social sigh building, arrived here last fall from Princetown Graduate School. Immediately, the subversive taught two courses in Practical Politics and Political Parties. Not only did he arrange discussion groups in lieu of the third hour lecture each week, he sent his students out to work in the field with political candidates of their choices.

This ludicrous man also has been known to working continually with "The New Politics"! What kind of instructor is this for a course in Practical Politics?

"As students we are extremely glad that we do not have to put up with ridiculous instructors such as this one. His exams were logical and comprehensive, he participated in many student activities but refused to upgrade those of his students who participated with him.

"We will never forget the generation gap, insecurity and expert student spy system used by the wonderful members of the tenure committee of the Poly-Sigh department to find reasons for not renewing his contract.

This move, far from unique in the department, is in fact the general trend of the past decade. Almost every young member has not stayed here more than a few years. This of course is to the advantage of the student, since it is much easier to pass a course which has had the same exam for 15 years. This trend may be the reason that the new department head will come from within the department," said Mr. Ird of the department on behalf of his students.

There was no student strike here as there was at Long Island University, because the students here have learned from most of their teachers never to stand up for things in which they believe.

A Gold Mine...

As we recently in the past few days yesterday meandered about the peaceful UConn campus, musing over those inner thoughts and meditations which we tend to muse over when meandering, we mused that indeed, there was something amiss in the Husky air. There was something, oh something, which was disrupting the typically New England-type serenity. Yes, there was something in the air, and suddenly we realized what it was -- the library dome!

Upon submitting inquiries to who we thought might be the proper authorities, we found that the present structure surrounding this fair institution's hallowed library's dome to be not a graduate student's $4,000 U.S. grant for a study in camouflage, not a small but by no means significant addition to the library quarters (we were thinking of an air-conditioned seventh floor), but instead, a repair.

Yes, that's right, a REPAIR. Right on top of that library, a REPAIR. And it's been a REPAIR for as long as the freshmen can remember, since they only came up here last September, and it seems as if it's been there since last September, or at least pretty much near there. Now hasn't it?

After all, think of all the UConn students who have studied in the library all year, with this hanging over their heads...

So, we mused, if we wanted to write about it, the library dome REPAIR could turn out to be a real 'gold mine'...and it did.

Stackpack Claims

Bigwig Matt Stackpack stopped in the office just recently not too long ago. Speaking sage-like, Stackpack brought our attention to a problem which has been plaguing the UConn students, as well as the faculty members here who have nevertheless taken insufficient interest in it. Because of that insufficient interest, generated in part no doubt by those interested, as well as the all to present apathetic bloc which failed to contribute in the accepted manner, Matt Stackpack claims "Jeez". We agree, but with reservations.

To the Editor:

It has come to this writer's attention that Gaylord Flint is not what he appears to be, but that he is a wolf in sheep's clothing. To hear Gay tell it, he was a hero last week when he single-handedly saved a girl from being raped. But what really happened was that he changed his mind. Gay also reports that he has first hand information that the campus is not safe for women at night. He claims a girl told him that one night...while he was molesting her. Gay's excuse for such actions is that he is ill, suffering from a bad case of high blood pressure.

A brief description of Flint's modus operandi should serve to convince any doubters of the seriousness of this shocking expose. The typical victimess is invited for dinner at his lake-front cottage. The main course is usually steak, cut so thin that it only has one side. And to make matters worse, it isn't really all steak... it's a veneer. He then proceeds to distract the doomed girl with an avalanche of jokes, like the one about the funeral parlor that was closed due to a birth in the family. Or the one about the new electric chair they're buying in California because the old one proved to be unsafe. While the poor girl is wincing from these jokes, he proceeds to apply Ogden Nash's theory that candy is dandy, but liquor is quicker. Any further description of the proceedings is inappropriate. Although the redeeming social value would certainly exonerate me, I leave the details to the dirty corners of the readers' minds.

In conclusion, I hope Miss Noftsker will institute a policy of mentioning Gaylord Flint by name, in her annual "warnings" speech to the freshman girls. While we realize that this additional warning would lengthen the present six hour speech, we feel that it is important enough so that perhaps mention of Joe Bechulya could be dropped to make room for Gaylord. After all, Joe died eight years ago.

Thoughts of Mao

Gentleman,

As the American publicity agent for China's latest and most revolutionary cultural export, THE READINGS OF CHAIRMAN MAO, I feel it necessary to contact my American contemporaries and share with them Man's most valued gift to culture. Many of my American friends fear and farrow from the cultural revolution going on in my country. They do not realize that China has not prospered and reached its full potentialities in the last thousand years under a system based on reverence of the aged.

We have not come near reaching our Western friends' overall wealth under either capitalism and socialism. We realize if China much reach her fullest potential we must rever our elders and rely on our youth. That is what our revolution is all about. We are not against society but we just want to improve it.

Chairman Mao does not write only for China but he prays for all mankind. He asks for hard work and sacrifice for his nation. Many of Chairman Mao's sayings are reflections of things that made contemporary western powers what they are today. We ask you to understand and accept what we are trying to do for China. We want you to read our Book and maybe reflect back on some of the values you have since forgotten.

In Peking, we have come to understand that the University of Connecticut claims to be open minded yet there is not one course requiring the READINGS OF CHAIRMAN MAO to be read. We even understand your library does not contain our export. We feel if we are liberal enough to carry your Husky Handbook, carry pictures of your president Homer when we eulogize our Chairman, sing your Alma Mater before our national anthem, and feed our Pekinese John athlin 7 dog biscuits there is no excuse not to give us a chance.

Many of your contemporary universities recognize Chairman Mao's literary potential and have kept in contact with our philosophies. We understand your academic vice-president Provost Can't is an Ardent Barry Goldfiner fan and does not recognize Johnson as president, Russia as a nation or Mao as a literary leader. We would like to urge all students and faculty to share in our vast treasure and give READINGS a chance.

It is often difficult for American students to take time from athletics, picnics, parties and sings to spare a little time for the mind. But if you do, we urge you to be more openminded than your institution and give MAO an equal going with campus beauty queens and Barry Boldfinger.

Chairman Mao has asked me to give you his sincerest wishes and welcome you to visit any time. He will even supply the one-way ticket. Chairman Mao said he would be glad to visit your university and speak after Mr. Boldfiner.

I must close now sine it is time to go burn a Pagoda and time for my Mao lessons. I hope to be seeing you some day. May Chairman Mao bless you.

Comradely yours,
Chang How Hi

Probe Suggested

To the Editor:

In answer to the letter published in this paper recently, I must take vigorous opposition to the reasoning offered by that writer. Although I do agree with his basic assumptions, I feel that the irresponsible and inaccurate interpretation presented by him seriously distort the true meaning and effect of the problem.

With a more consistent and thoughtful outlook, I think you can make a case for the fact (and a very important one it is), that among the institutions in revolution, business is the most lacking in serious response to the impulse for an over-all comprehensive view of man and his relation to society and himself. Some have carelessly shrugged this problem off with a mere "Nyah...". but then, isn't this another Laissez-faire weakness in today's complex world? Let, then, the youth of America unite this day in opposition to this formidable encroachment which threatens every aspect of our social system as we know it per se.

Expectantly,
H.S. Bunting

How long are you going to stay away from home? What's the matter, you're too busy to stay with your own family already? All you ever do is waste all you time at your silly paper and I never get to see you anymore. And it's not as if you couldn't just call us on the phone, just like that, we'll even pay the bill if you should want. Just remember, young man, just because you're at a fancy college, I'm the one who put you there, remember I even stood up for you when your father got mad that time you wanted to play surgeon with little Mryna, and you used his brand new G.E. fancy electric carver. Just remember, you're not too good for us, maybe we just didn't go to college, that's all.

V.C. Block Dance Successful

The Young Conservative's Viet Cong Block Dance was a huge success reported Pete Mihaly, spokesman for the event. Seventeen people, a record turnout for any YC project, gathered around mirror lake, dressed in black pajamas in honor of the loyal bands of fighters that have been defending their homeland. It was rumored that huge bands of passifists had come from as far away as Ashford and were meeting at the Campus Restaurant to crash the party, but nothing resulted. One long-haired, un-American beatnik commented, "We wuz gonna crash it, man, but someone realized we wuz invited. It's really miserable when you're a social outcast and you know you can't go to parties, even when you're invited. Besides, we had a be-in with grass, flowers, and marshmallows out at a cottage."

The Conservatives swung all night to a gramophone that played cake walks, and a few two-steps. One progressive couple was asked to leave the affair when they tried to do a Charleston. The highlight of the affair was the placing of 500 inverted "ISO is Now" buttons around the lake. In one spokesman's words, "They're sorta like pungi poles as a trap for those liberal socialist couples that make love around the lake."

Year-End Review

Last Monday was the last of this season's Direct Line TV shows. For those of you who somehow always seemed to miss it, here is a review of the highlights.

The first program was about happenings, but it still isn't exactly clear what happened. The next show concerned hallucinogenic drugs, and guest star Dr. John Steinman, University Psychiatrist, was tripped up on a question about the difference between LSD and ISO. In another program on the Playboy ethic, Evan Hill accused all the Playboy pin-ups of being dumb bunnies, while host Roger Burke stated that he tends to believe all the figures he sees in Playboy.

At about mid-year, however, the ratings were beginning to drop and the show was in trouble. In an attempt to correct the situation, regular panelist Rick Aronovitz was kicked off the show. The assumption was that Rick would go over and watch the show to double the audience size. But when Rick turned on the set in the Union Lobby, droves of people got up and left, while the three remaining people asked what else was on. So Rick was put back on the show, and the following week it was so bad that even the CIA and FBI wiretappers tuned out.

But the fact that audiences failed to materialize was offset by the coincidence that the stars of the show also failed to show up on occasion. Lord Alfred only made one show and Lee Greif came in late one time after fighting his way across the AFTRA picket lines in front of the Radio-TV Center. It seems that he was in the Union and happened to notice that he was supposed to be appearing on the TV show he was watching.

The next to last show of the year was cancelled because of transmitter trouble, thus spoiling Burke's chance to pull a Johnny Carson, (since he couldn't very well walk off his last show.)

The final program featured Charlie Feldstone, Ph. D. on the subject of examinations. In an attempt to corral an audience, Charlie let it be known that he would give the answers to two of his final exam questions at the end of the show. For those of you who missed it, the answers were B and D.

Course Critique on Sale

The Student Senate will be selling a 100's Course Critique next semester. It will be the culmination of six months of hard work. Featured in the critique will be a standardized evaluation of each course, rated on a point system of 10 points for each of the eight categories.

The questions given to students in each 100's class were:

- 1) Rate the intrinsic gut quality of this course.
- 2) Take away 3 points from a total of ten for each book required, add 1.4 points for each one costing less than 50¢.
- 3) Rate your teacher's susceptibility to crying and it's effect on a borderline grade.

4) Rate teacher's susceptibility to the excuse for missing a test that your turtle died.

5) Rate same as #4 but substitute grandmother for turtle.

6) Rate teacher's susceptibility to excuse that your house-mother had a baby and you had to take her to hospital. Estimate if you haven't used this one.

7) Rate your ability to fall asleep in teacher's class. (The easier it is, the higher the score.)

* Give a numerical value to his (her?) susceptibility to miniskirts in a lecture hall. (It may be helpful in answering this question to notice broken sentences and gaping mouths; try to apply this to the question.)

Homer Hits 500th Mantle

Last night in a pre-birthday party, President Babbage staggered into a fireplace at one of his more prominent faculty member's home. He was the sixth person on record ever to accomplish this feat of hitting 500 mantles. When asked how he felt about this honor he replied, "Well, I never was out to break any records.

The injuries I sustained at Freshman Orientation Weeks since I've been here have not been conducive to these activities at all. It really feels great to know that I have joined the ranks of my fellow Ball of Flame members. I will try now to work for the 714 mantles hit that is the world's record.

AWS Provides Abortion

The AWS (Assinine Women Students) recently made an aborted attempt to restrict all women students to their dormitories during weekends unless accompanied by a parent, guardian, or Steve Boudreau. The reasons behind this move, state Ruth Winner, AWS Chieftain, was "I just can't stand being alone in the dorm every Friday and Saturday night!"

"Too many girls are getting away with these unchaperoned dates and it just has to be stopped..." stated Miss Isaschmuck Snotsker, mother superior of the AWS.

In cooperation with the Taxidermy department of the School of Agriculture, the U.of.C. bookstore will be selling the skins of rabbits, foxes, bears, Thetas, and various other animals. These pelts have been cured through a long process and therefore should not transmit any diseases. Anticipating a large crowd at the cash registers, Cy Marner, manager of the bookstore said, "If you can't get one by the weekend, take a chance!" By this he meant, of course, that you should come back Monday morning for they'll probably still be some left.

Blond-haired, blue-eyed, American-born president of Kappa Kappa Gamma, Bam Pender has made a formal announcement that the sisterhood of Kappa will remove their yellow raincoats and wear fleur-de-lised mini-skirts made of transparent scotch tape for the duration of the semester. The entire jungle, Sigma Phi Epsilon, and the Senior Class of E.O. Smith high school are presently planning a panty raid on the same house in the near future.

If that fails, the pledge class sneak into their laundry room and swipe all undergarments in sight. Brat Wilkie, president of Theta was heard to comment,

"Gosh, I wish we'd thought of it first." When told of the uncanny decision, one Theta said, "I don't think unKanny at all. As a matter of fact, it's very much like her."

IFC Celebrates Erection

The IFC (Inane Fraternity Council) will hold a special ceremony tomorrow to celebrate the erection of a monument to their illustrious president, Fairy Mandell. The monument, appropriately located four feet under the mud in Mirror Lake, depicts Fairy smiling from ear to ear as he accepts his weekly instructions from the IFC office secretaries.

The monument was originally planned as a complete surprise to the University but some passers-by sighted the brother of TEP pulling the statue toward the lake late last night.

Performing at the availing ceremonies will be Little Richard (Fifield that is). All are urged to attend and alka-seltzer will be distributed in the event that Fairy chooses to speak.

But after my long talk, the ASG President still wouldn't open the door and let me in so I had to settle for the ASG vice-president's office. fame, lost his pole in the mud and excavators had to be called in to find it.

In other field events, Rich Bohemian snapped his javelin in half and failed to get first place. He did, however, manage a second and a third.

Lew Chambermaid dumped on Freddy (Betty) Crocker for stealing his long johns. It was a cold windy day and Chambermaid was forced to run without them. As he stumbled across the finish line a throng of spectators mobbed the gutty (where have I heard that word before) athlete for what he had done. I over heard his answer to the question, "What made you run such a race?" His answer was simply, "I just happened to be in the nude for running today."

In the hurdling event, Joe Cloverell finished directly on the last hurdle in a miscalculated jump and was finished for life... as a hurdler.

Harvey McGuire (he's the lead singer in the famous group showed what Coach Schkendidy means by a hard workout. In the starting blocks in the 100 yd. dash, his spikes got caught.

The NCAA has announced the latest in a series of revolutionary rule changes which may well force the renaming of the game of football. Due to the extraordinary amount of injuries during the past few seasons, a new type of uniform will be worn.

Sources close to AP have said that the man behind the ruling is a trainer at the University of Connecticut, Doc "Shinsplints" Wartgo. "Shinsplints" has been known for many years as the nation's leading designer of athletic fashions, such as the lacrosse birdcage. The new uniform is actually modeled after one Wartgo wore while serving in the army, and it will afford maximum protection to all football players. It consists of a full length suit of classical design, with a matching helmet, complete with face mask.

Carnegie Steel Co. has turned in the low bid and has been commissioned to produce the new uniforms, which as some alert readers may have guessed will consist of a suit of armor. NCAA officials seemed optimistic about the success of their plan, but warned that the present pace of the game may be slowed down until the players become used to their new apparel. (Ed. note: Our advice is to "get a horse.")

The Boston Bruins have announced the signing of a goalie from nearby Worcester, Mass. Coach Milt Schmidt made the announcement today that Joseph "Jacques" Toomey from the University of Connecticut has signed a $100,000 contract to play in the nets for the Bruins, desperate for some fresh American talent. Toomey spent the past season in the nets and on the bench for the UConn hockey team. Veteran hockey mentor John Chapman's comment when told of the news that he would lose his star goalie was, "Joe is lucky . . ."

John Toner, head football coach at the University of Connecticut has announced that he will resign after the Yale-UConn game next season. Toner said that the reason for his resignation was personal, but informed sources have learned that Toner will accept a job as head kicking coach for the New York team in the new professional soccer league. Toner, it must be noted, was the man responsible for the emergence of Roy "The Toe" Lawrence as a field goal kicker for UConn this past season. Toner will attempt to teach the soccer players to kick football style, a move sure to cause a revolution in international soccer circles.

The Boston Red Sox have announced that they are putting World Series tickets on sale. The Sox are currently in the midst of a tight American League pennant race, with just over 130 games remaining on the schedule. They occupied first place for one day early in the season, when they were tied with the New York Yankees for the top spot.

The A and P nomination for shaft of the year goes to the Torres-Tiger fight. AP had it 8-7 for Torres, but the blind judges didn't see it that way. Tiger won a split decision, and they almost got their heads split afterwards. One AP stringer was arrested for throwing bottles in the riot that followed the fight.

The New York Times today leaked word that they would be appointing a new sports editor within the week. Sources close to the NYT and AP have indicated that a veteran sports editor from one of the nation's leading dailies will get the coveted position. From all indications that man will be Frank Winkler, lately of the Connecticut Daily Campus. Winkler has served as sports editor of the CDC, and has had extensive experience in handling temperamental people such as those he will be in charge of since he has been serving as a resident advisor in one of the major trouble spots of the western world, New London Hall. The new post is one of the reasons for Winkler's refusal to continue as sports editor of the CDC. Further rumors, as yet unconfirmed, say that Harold Levy, the present CDC sports editor will join Winkler in an associate position.

Lew Alcindor has dropped out of UCLA, according to UConn basketball coach Carl Burrson. Alcindor, it seems, was disenchanted with the weather in Southern California. The 7' 1" star is a bobsledding enthusiast, and the warm, smog-filled air made it impossible for him to partake of his favorite sport. Burrson made the announcement, and at the same time, Floyd Ruff, director of recreation, announced that the UConn ski slope will be augmented by a bobsled track this coming winter.

It appears that Alcindor is headed for UConn, where it is hoped that he will be able to offset the loss of the Huskies' great All-American cornerman, Bill "An All-American passes when he's covered" Holowaty.

take posts on the new committee, because so many of them were busy on other student-faculty committees "expanding avenue of communication."

Stakepole, however, said that he had already filled all the student posts on the committee. Aside from Abrahams, student members will be: Pat Werdann, a nursing student who will be in New Haven next year; and Lee Grief, who is graduating in June. The first meeting of the committee will be early next September.

Faculty members who will be on the committee will all be graduate students, who are yet to be announced. As Babbith pointed out, "It is logical that, since the committee will have no power, we don't need any faculty on it." Matt Stakepole, as usual was quick to agree. Senator Isaham did not comment until Mally Markedup agreed, and then he agreed too.

Stakepole also commented on his conception of the purpose of the new committee, saying that he saw it as a means to encourage the proper attitudes concerning morality on campus. "I believe in the American way," said Stakepole, "and I think that attitudes such as the one demonstrated by the judges for the CCC parade are the kind we wish to encourage," copying President Babbith's example. "The minifloat with Snoopy that won a prize is a good example of the right attitude. Even though it had nothing to do with the theme of the parade, there is nothing more American than Snoopy, and I'm glad that they were given a prize." There were tears in his eyes.

President Babbith added as a footnote that although the grad students to be on the committee will be mostly BA's, there will be at least one BS.

Slush Fund Uncovered at the University of Connecticut

The DAILY CAMPUS learned today from reliable sources who refused to allow their names to be printed (actually it was the super sleuth from Hartford, Bill Newit), that the University of Connecticut is harboring a slush fund. Newit discovered traces of the fund while making a 5 a.m. phone call to basketball coach Burr Carlson. He was cut in on a phone conversation between Carlson and his recruiting ace

Fred Shabel, who were discussing finances after the recent basketball season, and the proposed cutback in the budget due to a huge influx of poor football players into the school. The two moaned about the added money that country squire Gentleman Jim Hicks had set aside from the illicit fund for coach John Toner's football prospects.

This money will be used, as it has in the past in a variety of ways. This year many of the UConn athletes used the Slush money at such nightspots in the Storrs area as A's, Lou's, and the Student Union Snack Bar. Cigarette money was also handed out to several stars. Evidently, bribes to various disciplinary organs of the University also came out of the fund, to protect players from charges for breaking windows and other rule infractions. Also, money was allegedly reserved for paying security for parking tickets handed out to players who brought their shiny new cars to practice.

In a new development to the case, the ruling body in college athletics, the all-wise NCAA has decided to investigate the fund.

The first man called in to account was beloved hockey and tennis coach, John (Chips) Chapman who was accused of using the money to import hockey players from Canada. His resignation is expected in a few days. Carlson may also be asked to resign before UConn is expelled from the Yankee Conference. Both declined comment, but Chapman was said to be cautiously optimistic. He referred all comment back to his previous statement that "I have done the best possible job with the material at hand."

The slush fund itself is rumored to amount to nearly $20,000, and served one other major use in addition to paying the athletes for their noble contributions to the campus. Coach Nate Osur is said to be using part of the money to head a huge gambling syndicate which bets on UConn wrestling and lacrosse matches. A prominent member of the syndicate is said to be Paul Hornong, a notorious gambler and sometimes football player for the New Orleans Saints of the NFL.

Track Roundup

Pansey Guen was so disgusted over his performance in the buck shot that he threw an amazing hemorrhage good for a new school record.

Skin and bones Pete Moss (ON) happened to be turned sideways when Coach Schendidy was looking for him to sign him up for goal post duty, but being so thin the eagle-eyed coach missed him.

A funny thing happened on the way to the finish line in the 5 meter relay event. Hill-Billy Doung running the last leg, was neck and neck (I think that was a queer move on his part) with John Vitalis when they both slipped on Jon Copulate's greasy kid stuff and fell in the muddy (of course) track.

The ensuing mud pie contest between Rich Winkellar and two-time all conference champ Bufles Birdney was disqualified due to unforeseen circumstances. Craig Penfeylton of pole vault

Confessions of Chicken Little

The following is a true confession of a noted person at Storrs, Conn. - "Chicken Little."

Confessor: Is it true that you have had three first team ECAC-All East First team football players and practically nothing was said about them?

Chicken Little: Well, sort of. One of them got some publicity and the others - well, it wouldn't have done them any good to give them publicity 'cause they are both graduating. Besides, I can only write about one person at a time.

Confessor: Is it true that you had a person who broke all UConn basketball scoring records and the only publicity he got was in the Hartford Courant and the Willimantic Chronicle?

Chicken Little: Well I don't think you have any justification for accusing me of that because that's the most publicity any UConn athlete has gotten in years. In fact we even had an article about him in the New Haven Register and the CDC once. So, what more do you want?

Confessor: Is it true that last year's basketball team had all four seniors sign with major league teams and that one of them was the NCAA Home Run Champion?

Chicken Little: Well, this is true, but when those ballplayers signed, the school year had finished so why bother putting their names in the paper?

Confessor: Is it true that you have a Track All-American who is also the NCAA 35 pound weight champion and have one of the best weight contingents in the east on probably your most successful track team and practically no one knows about it?

Chicken Little: Well, again that's not my fault. Everything you said was in the Hartford Courant, so what more do you want?

Confessor: I don't believe that you haven't even released to the CDC never mind the rest of the press, that you presently have a baseball player batting nearly .450 and is leading the country in runs batted in. Also, this person batted .403 last year and you still haven't gotten him enough publicity to be considered for an All-American team? Is this true?

Chicken Little: Well, there's a lot to this story. First of all, last year he was only in the top 10 in the country and not the top 5 batters. So I don't think that if he had any publicity he would have made any teams. And this year he is right on top of the RBI department, but just think how about if he doesn't do as well for the rest of the year, and falls out of the top five of the country. This would be disappointing to the people who read that he was first at one time.

Confessor: Is it true that you've got the number one baseball team in the East and number 12 team in the country? Also, that team has a pitcher undefeated and unscored upon and averaging better than a strike-out per inning?

Chicken Little: Yes, but if they win the National Title, they will get the royal treatment - publicity in the Courant, the Chronicle and even the Hartford Times.

Confessor: As a penance I think you should make an effort to do a little more for the athletes here at UConn. Maybe you get some publicity for them in the New York papers and the Boston papers where many sportswriters govern All-American teams and give our athletes a fair shake. You have some very fine athletes here - why not let the east know about them if you don't want the rest of the country to know about them.
