

BANK THIEVES CAUGHT.

A Nebraska Chief of Police uncovers an organized gang. HASTINGS, Neb., Nov. 19.—Chief of Police Lepinsky has returned from Hanover, Kan., where he traced the Davenport National bank robbers and succeeded in unearthing an organized gang of the boldest kind of robbers, which has been operating through this part of the state for the last six months.

THE FAIR MILLIONS.

His Heirs Are Pushing Matters to Have Them Promptly Divided.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 19.—No time is to be lost in the distribution of the millions of the late James G. Fair, as far as his children are concerned. Through their attorneys, they are maneuvering with a rapidity, now that the present will has been settled, that is in strange contrast to the dilatory tactics which marked the progress of the litigation for the last 18 months.

Opinions vary as to the value of the estate. At the time of Fair's death wild statements placed his wealth at $40,000,000. Gradually the figures were reduced, and a conservative estimate places it at $17,000,000. According to one of the trustees under the trust will, the estate has increased one-fifth in the past year.

Quarrel Over a Bishop's Salary.

TORONTO, Nov. 19.—An injunction has been sworn out to stop payment of salary to Right Rev. Du Monlin of St. James' cathedral, who was elevated to the bishopric of Niagara last June, but who continued doing duty as rector for St. James' until a successor was appointed. The point raised is that a bishop is precluded by the canons of the church from receiving benefice or emoluments from any congregation.

A New York Sculler in Cambridge.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The final heat of the sculling match at Cambridge was exciting. Gould of first Trinity beat Howell of Trinity Hall by two yards. Howell is a New Yorker and first made the acquaintance of a sculling boat a fortnight ago. He won his heat on Monday in eight seconds faster time than Gould.

That Vanderbilt Check.

CANTON, O., Nov. 19.—Mr. McKinley has consistently adhered to his determination not to discuss political questions for publication and is therefore silent on the Vanderbilt contribution of $150,000 to the campaign fund.

THEATRICAL GOSSIP.

MAUD ADAMS IS NOW CONSIDERED OUR LEADING ACTRESS.

Next Season She Will Star Under the Management of Mr. Charles Frohman—Her Success Won by Her Modest and Untiring Effort.

While the new season in New York has thus far brought to view no play of great originality, and very few of any other quality likely to quite satisfy the folks who always take the stage seriously, there are signs of greater prosperity in the theatrical world than the most sanguine observers expected before the season opened.

And now comes the announcement that Maude Adams is to star next season under management of Charles Frohman. Miss Adams is a great favorite. She is far and above every other American actress on the stage to-day, and yet so simple and unassuming in her methods as to obtain no notoriety save that which is commanded by merit.

Five years ago, after the first performance of "The Masked Ball," Miss Maude Adams awoke to find herself famous. At one bound she has achieved histrionic distinction; she had established her right to be considered among the leading actresses of the American stage.

Since that time Miss Adams' advancement in her profession has been rapid. Each new role she has added to her repertoire in these years has been marked by the evidences of careful and intelligent study, the ability to profit by disinterested criticism and likewise by the effort to conscientiously overcome the individual tricks of manner that might perhaps mar the artistic finish of her performances.

Had the actress attempted to impart but the slightest touch of coquetry to her impersonation of this simple little maiden of the early Victorian days it would have been fatal to the very spirit of the role, and so it is that Miss Adams' delightful assumption of witching ingenueness is the secret of her latest and best success.

It is perhaps rank heresy to so popular a star as Mr. John Drew, but it is a fact nevertheless that Miss Adams dominates the Empire stage whenever the action of "Rosemary" places her in view of the audience.

Mrs. Wheeler (alone on her bicycle at 10 p. m.)—Well, I certainly am having a delightful time this evening! These lonely dark roads have a fascination for me. Let me see—I have twenty miles to go yet. Oh! I'll be home before midnight.

Mrs. Wheeler (the next evening)—What! Can't go to the theatre with me? Go by myself? James Wheeler, do you wish to insult me! Do you think I have no more self-respect than to go to a public place of amusement without an escort? Your instincts are perfectly brutal!—Puck.

She—You looked like a fool when you proposed to me. He—That was on purpose. I wanted to be accepted.

Two Killed by the Cars.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 18.—J. P. Carpenter, one of the largest lumber dealers of this city and a resident of Covington, Ky., and D. H. Lyons, a prominent architect of this city, were walking along the double tracks of the Cincinnati, Lebanon and Northern railway, when they were caught by trains going in opposite directions, and both were killed.

Drowned His Wife and Family.

DENVER, Nov. 18.—Andrew J. Spute was arrested, charged with the murder of his wife and five children. Spute took his family boating on Smith's lake. By some means the boat was capsized. Spute alone could swim, and all the others were drowned. Shortly afterward it developed that Mrs. Spute's life was insured for $10,000.

An Arkansas Jurist Dead.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Nov. 18.—Judge I. C. Parker, the famous Arkansas jurist, died at his home in this city today of Bright's disease. Judge Parker had imposed the death penalty upon more criminals than any other jurist in the United States. For 21 years he had presided over court without missing a day.

Fatal Explosion at a Celebration.

MIDDLESBORO, Ky., Nov. 18.—During a political celebration at Clintwood, Dickinson county, Va., an anvil exploded, killing Pellam Colley and Preston Mullins and injuring three other men.

Woolen Mills to Resume.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Nov. 18.—The Buell woolen mills will resume operations on full time tomorrow. This is one of the largest woolen mills in the west. It closed down just before election.

Pigs in Quarantine.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 18.—Hog cholera prevails in some sections of Ohio, Kentucky and Indiana, so that the Union stockyards here have established a strict quarantine.

No Breath, No Sting.

Here is a way to rob a beehive of honey and avoid being stung. Just hold your breath. Simple and easy enough, and the only reason it hasn't been tried more often is that few people know of it. Even the bullet-like hornet cannot injure you if you just stop breathing for a moment. In fact, you can pick him up and watch his stinging apparatus vainly work, for he can't puncture your skin any more than he can sheet iron.

Following Instructions.

"Why, Jimmie," said the gracious hostess, "you have taken half a pie on your plate." "Yes'm; mamma said I mustn't have but one piece when I was visitin'."—Detroit Free Press.

Sea Signaling by Flags.

The flags to be hoisted at one time in signaling at sea never exceed four. It is an interesting arithmetical fact that, with eighteen various colored flags, and never more than four at a time, no fewer than 78,642 signals can be given.—Cincinnati Inquirer.

Another Calf Case.

Two farmers of Beech Springs, Va., went to law a short time ago over a calf, valued at $2, which one accused the other of stealing. The litigation caused the farmers $50 each, and the case was dismissed. The next day the calf was found dead in a cave on property that did not belong to either of the litigants.

A DETECTIVE'S LOSS.

Inspector Hookyer had served his twenty-five years in the detective force, and his colleagues were entertaining him at a little farewell dinner, in anticipation of his forthcoming retirement. The Chairman having enlivened the guest of the evening to an extent that brought a blush to the face of that case-hardened officer, the Inspector rose to reply, and at the finish he said:

"The Chairman has said that I never let a man slip through my fingers after I had once got on his track, but I am sorry to say he is wrong. I am bound to acknowledge that once an offender was too clever for me."

"Tell us about it!" arose spontaneously from almost every throat; and Inspector Hookyer, in response to the request, gave the story:

"It was a good many years ago now when I had entrusted to me a case of a young woman named Eliza Thickbroom, who had been found dead (evidently murdered by having her throat cut) in some fields adjoining the canal near a town in Lancashire. She had been a domestic servant, and was of a very retiring, staid disposition, and bore an irreproachable character. Her friends lived in quite another part of the country, and her mistress had no knowledge of her keeping company or anything of that kind. For some time I had considerable difficulty in fixing the crime or any reason for it upon any one; but at last, after a lot of inquiry I ascertained that she had been walking out with a man named Lamprey, who lived near Stockport, in Cheshire, some thirty miles from where Eliza Thickbroom resided.

"It seemed that the girl had been in the habit of spending her holiday, when she had a day off, in going to Stockport, where Lamprey met her, and that, hearing something to his discredit, she had refused to have anything more to do with him, and, so far, nothing further was known to implicate Lamprey in the crime; but I, of course, at once took a train to Stockport, and proceeded to hunt up Lamprey, and to make inquiries in the town where he resided.

"I knew nothing about him except his name, but from the local police and cautious questions of one and another, I ascertained that he had been a sailor and was then a 'steeple-jack,' and one of the best climbers known.

"'Jack Lamprey!' cried one man to whom I had spoken. 'Ah, he can climb up sure, can Jack! Why, he climbed up to the very top of yon steeple (pointing to the church hard by, which had a spire remarkably tall and slender, and very hard to mount). 'After the storm had damaged the weathercock, Jack climbed up and fixed it all alone for the parson, and he refused to be paid for it!'

"The man seemed to look upon Lamprey's refusing payment as more wonderful than climbing the steeple, and perhaps he was right. Well, bit by bit I found little things which, when pieced together, pointed unmistakably to Jack Lamprey as the murderer. He had, until recently, been seen frequently in and about Stockport with the girl, but for the last two or three months she had not been observed in his company. He had been a jolly sort of fellow, but since the girl had ceased her visits it had been noticed that he had become moody and silent, and he had taken to drink a good deal, although he had previously been a most abstemious man.

"He was away from his lodgings on the night of the murder, and on his return early the next day he was travel-stained, as if he had walked a long way. His landlady remembered that he had told her he had fallen down in some chemical works where he had been on a job, and had stained his clothes, and she recollected that immediately after his arrival home he had busied himself brushing and sponging his garments.

"I took every precaution to prevent any one knowing that he was 'wanted,' but some 'pal' must have got to suspect it and given him the warning. The police in Liverpool had been wired to, and had kept watch of all trains in the direction of Stockport, and toward the evening of the second day I received the intimation that a man resembling his description had taken the train and was on his way. Assisted by a local detective who knew the man, I watched every passenger out of the train on its arrival at Stockport, but no Jack Lamprey alighted, and, on inquiring of the guard, it seemed pretty certain that he had got out at Cheddle, a station a few miles outside Stockport.

"It was the beginning of winter, and night had set in, so that it was extremely doubtful if we could follow the man, but we took a train which was just going out of the station, and in a few minutes were at Cheddle. I there made certain that my man had got out. He had booked for Stockport and had given up his ticket; but do all we could we could get no trace of him. He had left the station immediately on leaving the train; no one knew him, and we could find no one to tell us anything more. So, hoping perhaps to pick up a clew on the road, we walked back to Stockport, and so on to the town where he lived, which was a few miles the other side, but our tramp was in vain.

In the public house which he frequented I came across a man to whom I had previously spoken, who seemed to know Lamprey in a very distant sort of way, and I turned the conversation on the man I wanted.

"'Ah! I've just seen him,' said the fellow. 'About an hour ago, or mayhap a little more. He was going to Macclesfield, he said, to catch the early train in the morning to Staffordshire, where he's got another job. He seemed in a mighty hurry, too.'

"I had reason afterward to think that this man was the one who had given Lamprey warning, but whether that was so or not his information that night appeared to be correct, for I met several people who had seen Jack going across the fields to Marple, which was his best way of getting to Macclesfield from the place he lived in; but when I arrived at Marple station I was at fault again, for no train had been out for quite two hours, and although I waited till the last train to Macclesfield had left, Lamprey did not show up.

"Tired and vexed beyond description, I tramped back and got what rest I could, hoping that something might turn up in the morning to assist me in recovering the ground I had lost.

"Sure enough, the something did turn up in the morning, and something which confirmed my fears, though I felt that I had got my man dead if I had missed him alive. The postman came round soon after 7, before it was quite light, and I had only just got up when a boy came running with a letter, which had been delivered at the police station. It bore the Marple postmark, and was addressed to 'The Detective from London.'

"Tearing it open I read something like this:

"'From John Lamprey. I know you are after me, and I know what for. I managed to keep out of your way to-night, and I meant to try and get down south, but you are sure to have me, sooner or later, so I've determined to make an end of it. Look at the church steeple when you get this to-morrow morning.'

"The church steeple was a tall and prominent feature whichever way you turned, and I had only to go to the end of the street to get a full view of it. When I got there and looked up, I saw something that gave me a start. In the uncertain light of the early morning I could distinguish against the gray sky, hanging by the neck to one of the iron loops which serve for a ladder on the side of the spire, the figure of a man!

"'So much for Jack Lamprey!' I said to myself, as I hurried to the police station. 'He has saved me any more trouble!'

"By the time I had been to the station and back to the church it was broad daylight, and, of course, the body hanging aloft had been seen and a crowd had already collected, every one recognizing it as that of Jack Lamprey.

"'A strange freak,' I remarked to the sergeant who was with me.

"'I don't think so,' he replied. 'Jack had made himself a sort of hero over going up the spire to repair the vane, and there was nothing more likely to occur to his mind than to finish his career at the same place.'

"There was no one round Stockport who would venture up the spire, and a telegram had to be sent to Stalybridge for a man to come and get the body down. It was past midday before the steeple-jack arrived, and by that time half Stockport had heard of the affair. Work was discarded, and an immense crowd collected to witness the sight. Every foot of the man's way up the steeple was watched by thousands of eyes, and when, at last, he approached the swaying body of Jack Lamprey, the tongues which had been loudly wagging were hushed as if by common consent.

"I shall never forget the few minutes that followed, while the steeple-jack (now looking the size of a little child) made his way very cautiously close up to the body, and fixing a rope to it, made his preparations for lowering it to his assistant, who was waiting on the top of the square tower to receive it. There was something awfully sad and solemn about it all!

"In due course the assistant received the corpse, which he let down to the ground, and everyone around me remarked that he swung it roughly to the earth, without showing the respect which might have been looked for. In fact, some actually called out 'Shame!' 'But all at once the hush which had fallen upon the crowd was broken by a storm of jeers and laughter! The thing which had given us all this trouble was nothing but a guy! And I never felt such a fool in all my life.

"So that he might get nearly a day's start, Lamprey had cleverly misled me the night before. While I had been wasting my time at Marple, he had been employed in stuffing the suit of clothes which he had taken from his lodgings with straw, making a very passable representation of himself; and in the middle of the night he had climbed the steeple (which was child's play to him), and left his effigy there to deceive me and lull me into inaction.

"I need not dwell upon the chaff I received. It is too painful, even now, for me to recall without annoyance, but you may be sure that I quickly made myself scarce."

"Did the fellow get clear away?" asked some one.

"Yes. He took the train to the east coast, and succeeded in getting to Holland unnoticed," replied Inspector Hookyer. "But he hanged himself in real earnest some considerable time afterward, leaving a letter behind admitting his guilt, and stating that his conscience troubled him so that he could not bear to live."—Tid-Bits.

Men are often wiser than they act. They know how to be happy but sometimes they are miserable. They know there is no happiness worth the name without health; yet they neglect health. They allow dyspepsia and biliousness and constipation to get a hold on them and make life wretched. Those three complaints usually come together. Constipation affects the stomach and indigestion, headaches, nausea, dizziness, queer sensations of weakness and palpitation. Your nerves are unstrung, your system is sluggish. You lose ambition. The fact is your whole constitution is being slowly undermined. What you need is Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

They cure constipation, dyspepsia and biliousness in the only sure, permanent way. There is nothing violent or irritating about them, they work mildly though quickly. They tone and strengthen the bowels, carry on their functions naturally. They gently stimulate the flow of bile from the liver and the digestive juices of the stomach. You don't become a slave to their use as with other pills. They make you regular and then you can leave them. That is the difference between Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets and the something "just as good," which a sharp druggist tries to substitute. Don't let him do so with you.

If you want to keep your health and strength without consulting the doctor so often, the best thing you can do is to write to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y., for a copy of Dr. Pierce's great book, the "People's Common Sense Medical Adviser." Send 21 one-cent stamps to cover cost of mailing only. It is a large book of 1008 pages, with over 300 illustrations. It is the same book of which 250,000 copies were sold at $1.50 each. The only difference is in the binding which in the free edition is of strong manilla paper.

There is no other such complete family doctor book in the English language. It is a veritable medical library, complete in one volume. Send now, before all are given away. They are going off rapidly, therefore, do not delay sending immediately if in want of one. The above generous offer is limited to 500,000 copies.

GRANT AND LINCOLN.

THE FIRST INTERVIEW BETWEEN SOLDIER AND STATESMAN.

General Horace Porter's Story of the Historic Occurrence—Lincoln's Frank Confession of His Ignorance of All Things Military.

On the evening of March 8 the President and Mrs. Lincoln gave a public reception at the White House, which I attended. The President stood in the usual reception room, known as the Blue Room, with several Cabinet officers near him, and shook hands cordially with everybody, as the vast procession of men and women passed in front of him. At about 9:30 o'clock a sudden commotion near the entrance to the room attracted general attention, and upon looking in that direction, I was surprised to see General Grant walking along modestly with the rest of the crowd toward Mr. Lincoln. He had arrived from the West that evening, and had come to the White House to pay his respects to the President. He had been in Washington but once before, when he visited it for a day soon after he had left West Point. Although these two historical characters had never met before, Mr. Lincoln recognized the General at once from the pictures he had seen of him. With a face radiant with delight, he advanced two or three steps toward his distinguished visitor, and cried out: "Why, here is General Grant! Well, this is a great pleasure, I assure you," at the same time seizing him by the hand and shaking it for several minutes with a vigor which showed the extreme cordiality of the welcome.

The statesman and the soldier conversed for a few minutes, and then the President presented his distinguished guest to Mr. Seward. The Secretary of State was very demonstrative in his welcome, and after exchanging a few words led the General to where Mrs. Lincoln was standing, and presented him to her. Mrs. Lincoln expressed much surprise and pleasure at the meeting, and she and the General chatted together very pleasantly for some minutes. The visitors had by this time become so curious to catch a sight of the General that their eagerness knew no bounds, and they became altogether unmanageable. Mr. Seward's consummate knowledge of the wiles of diplomacy now came to the rescue and saved the situation. He succeeded in struggling through the crowd with the General until they reached the large East Room, where the people could circulate more freely. This, however, was only a temporary relief. The people by this time had worked themselves up to a state of uncontrollable excitement. The vast throng surged and swayed and crowded until alarm was felt for the safety of the ladies. Cries now arose of "Grant! Grant! Grant!" Then came cheer after cheer. Seward, after some persuasion, induced the General to stand upon a sofa, thinking the visitors would be satisfied with a view of him and retire; but as soon as they caught sight of him their shouts were renewed, and a rush was made to shake his hand. The President sent word that he and the Secretary of War would await the General's return in one of the small drawing rooms, but it was fully an hour before he was able to make his way there, and then only with the aid of several officers and ushers.

The story has been circulated that at the conference which then took place, or at the interview the next day, the President and the Secretary of War urged General Grant to make his campaign toward Richmond by the overland route, and finally persuaded him to do so, although he had set forth the superior advantages of the water route. There is not the slightest foundation for this rumor. General Grant some time after repeated to members of his staff just what had taken place, and no reference whatever was made to the choice of these two routes.—Century Magazine.

Struck it Right.

"Yes," said the reader of hats, "I can tell the moment I look at a hat what kind of a man the wearer was, how old, whether tall or short, and other characteristics. Oh, it's no trick. I don't know how I came by the faculty."

"It must be a gift," suggested one of us.

"Like second sight or mind reading," observed another.

"Bring on your hat," said a third; "I'm anxious to see how it works."

A large number of hats were produced from one source or another, large hats, soft hats and stiff hats, and their ownership was successfully concealed.

The hat reader took a rather broad-brimmed soft, shabby hat and began to inspect it.

"This," he said, "is the hat of a tramp."

"How do you know?"

"By unmistakable signs. The brim is turned up in the back; that comes from often sleeping in haystacks or under trees. It is pulled down in front to shade the face from inspection."

"Wonderful. Go on."

"It's owner was often hungry. He has gnawed the brim. He was dishonest, for he hid things in the crown. The shape of the crown shows that he had the pointed skull of an idiot. Am I right?"

"I guess so, old boy," said the host of the occasion. "That's my hat, and when I was on my walking tour this summer I did nearly all you mention. Try another."

The Town Meeting.

The reporter's detailed account of the proceedings at yesterday's town meeting, appearing elsewhere in to-day's GAZETTE, shows the meeting to have been one of unusual importance and interest to our citizens, and the outcome of it, such as will prove reasonably satisfactory to the town's taxpayers and well-wishers.

The action as to bridges, and the purchase of a steam road roller and crusher, was particularly wise and gratifying.

Delaware Given to McKinley.

Governor Watson, of Delaware, has arrived at the very sensible conclusion that the affix "Sr." is no part of a man's name, and that the votes cast for James G. Shaw and James G. Shaw, Sr., for Presidential Elector, were cast and should be counted for one and the same man.

This decision gives McKinley the three electoral votes of Delaware, to which he was clearly entitled if the intentions of a majority of the voters are given effect. He did not need the vote to elect him, but he would have been defrauded out of one vote the citizens of Delaware intended to give him had the decision been otherwise.

Two New Southern Senators.

Two new senators will represent Georgia and Alabama in the places of Gordon and Pugh. This has been decided by the result of a legislative caucus in each State. Alfred S. Clay will succeed General John B. Gordon from Georgia and General E. W. Pettus will succeed Senator James L. Pugh of Alabama.

Both are men of good reputation and of sufficient ability to represent their States creditably. Both are free coinage men, but as the result of the recent election has made free coinage an impossibility, their predilection for Bryanism is not likely to last long. They are both too sensible to continue to advocate a lost cause.

Our Exposed Southern Coast.

Governor Mitchell, of Florida, has issued a circular letter to the Governors of all the states presenting the defenseless condition of the gulf and South Atlantic seaports of the country, and issuing a call for a convention in the interest of the gulf and South Atlantic harbors to assemble at Tampa, Fla., on the 20th day of January next. The object, as stated in Governor Mitchell's letter, is "to discuss methods for the proper defense of Southern harbors and also to devise means for their betterment."

This movement should interest the people of the entire country. The Mississippi is the national artery of trade, employed more or less by nearly one-half the States of the Union, and if possessed by a foreign enemy would impose countless sacrifices upon the people of both North and South. While the Southern States are specially interested in most of the South Atlantic seaports, the whole country has a common unity of interest in having them put in the best condition for defense, while the protection of the gulf, the outlet of the Father of Waters, appeals directly to the great central States of the continent.

Sectional lines have been largely effaced by the recent national election. Four of the old slave-holding States cast their electoral votes for McKinley, and two other States of the South were so closely contested that their future political positions may be accepted as doubtful.

In no way could the North at this time to a greater extent, strengthen the thoroughly loyal and anti-sectional sentiment of the South than by having full representations at Tampa of able men from every State of the Union. Such a convention, attended by progressive men from all the States, would do much to broaden and deepen fraternal feeling between the two sections, and make their business interests more completely interwoven with each other.

Pretty Free Silver Coinage.

It may surprise the people who were lately complaining of the demonetization of silver to learn that more than 16,000,000 of silver dollars were coined in the ten months from February 1 to November 1, or more than twice as many as in all the years of so-called free coinage from 1793 to 1873.

This coinage is from the bullion purchased under the act of 1890, and except so much as represents the difference between the cost of the bullion and its nominal coinage value, it adds nothing to the volume of the currency, the law requiring an amount of silver to be held in the Treasury equal in cost to the amount of Treasury notes outstanding.

The advantage of converting the bullion into coin is that it puts it in available form to be exchanged for Treasury notes when desired, these notes being then cancelled. The gradual retirement of all of these notes would simplify the currency without increasing the proportion actually based upon silver.

TO DETECT CONSUMPTION.

Dr. Holmes Tells a Medical Congress About an Important Discovery.

Many interesting papers were read before the Pan-American Medical Congress yesterday, but that of Dr. A. M. Holmes, of Denver, Col., on his discovery of a new treatment of consumption from morphology of blood attracted the greatest interest, and was the subject of considerable discussion.

Dr. Holmes' paper was entitled "The Diagnosis of Tuberculosis by the Morphology of the Blood." It contained a presentation of the manner in which he made the discovery of detecting the tubercular germ in the human blood before the system has been attacked and at a time when it may be eradicated by the treatment of any physician. Dr. Holmes' discovery has been discussed very widely in medical circles, and he was invited to be present and personally present the subject to the congress.

The manner in which the discovery was made while he was experimenting with blood drops was interesting to the professional men present. He had noticed under a microscopic examination a difference in the shape and formation of the corpuscles, especially of consumptives, and extended his researches, with the result that more than one hundred total strangers were brought to him for examination, and in each case he had either detected the presence of the disease or announced the extent to which it had made inroads on the patient.

This discovery, while not a cure, is considered by many to be more far reaching than that of Prof. Koch, in that the disease is discovered at a time when it is a simple matter for any physician to cope with it. In presenting his researches the Doctor practically gave up everything for science, and the result of labors in the principal hospitals of Europe for a period of fifteen months is now given to the world. A vote of the thanks of the congress was extended to the Doctor for his paper.

Horrors of the Microscope.

Professor and Doctor Swift of Rochester gave a lecture before Miss Baird's school last evening upon the wonders of the Microscope. Among the Professor's exhibits he showed a drop of Norwalk's city water! The horrors there revealed will haunt the memories of the young lady students to their marriage day! What the girls are to do for drink, is now a serious question, as they cannot drink beer, and tea and coffee only at mealtimes. The lecture was exceedingly instructive and entertaining, but the Norwalk water episode was a horror.

Mr. Fessenden Apologizes.

Yesterday in the Superior court room Samuel Fessenden made the "amende honorable" to Attorney Stiles Judson for calling him an "insolent puppy" during the Porter-Ritch trial last week. Mr. Fessenden addressed the court, saying that his words addressed to Mr. Judson were not warranted and that he had no tangible excuse for attacking him. The apology was accepted and the strained relations between these lights of the bar are removed.

State vs. Fairchild.

The case of the State vs. Fred Fairchild occupied the attention of Judge Hubbell this morning. The defendant is charged with having assaulted Charles Gehobe. Trouble in the Choir.

There is trouble brewing in St. James' P. E. church, between the old members of the choir and the new organist, Walter Hall. Mr. Hall notified the members of the famous surplined choir on Sunday that they were no longer needed, as he could get along with a quartette of first-class soloists such as he had secured. The discharge of the choir was greeted with a gasp of consternation and the members at once went to their friends in the parish and sides have been taken in the matter. Mr. Hall is backed up by the music committee of the church, and has some very influential friends and there is but little doubt that he will come out first in the controversy.—Bridgeport Standard.

A poor victim of our Bridge tangle-foot, was staggering his way up toward Spring Hill, last evening, and losing his equilibrium, fell on the hard Belden avenue pavement, and in his struggles to get up, got over on his back and couldn't turn over in any way. While gazing skyward, he suddenly burst into a spontaneous conflagration! A lad passing by, ran to his aid, whipped out the blaze and saved the poor victim from terrible burns if not death. He had in his stupa, put his lighted pipe in his cotton lined coat pocket, and the flames were fast devouring all the cotton goods in his make up.

Railway Magnates Meet.

The annual meeting of the Connecticut Street Railway association was held in New Haven yesterday. Representatives were present from the New Haven, Hartford, Bridgeport, Waterbury, New Britain, Derby, Bristol and Norwalk lines, and from the Westport & Saugatuck road. The election of officers resulted as follows: President, H. Holton Wood, Derby; vice-president, Henry S. Parmelee, New Haven; secretary, E. S. Breed, New Britain; treasurer, E. S. Goodrich, New Britain; executive committee, A. M. Young, Waterbury; E. Israel Kelsey and G. A. W. Dodge, of New Haven.

The representatives present inspected the street railway lines of the city yesterday noon. At 2:30 the annual banquet was held in the New Haven House.

AMUSEMENTS.

"The Limited Mail."

All who see this play at Hoyt's Theatre, to-night, will witness a performance that bristles with thrilling sensations and interesting episodes. It is a play dealing with life on the railroad, written and dramatized by a life-long railroad man, Elmer E. Vance, for many years train dispatcher and night telegraph operator at the Union Depot, Columbus, Ohio. Consequently, every detail may be counted on as absolutely correct.

"Princess of Bagdad."

The Princess of Bagdad is from the pen of that master of dramatic stage craft, Alexander Dumas, and in selecting it Miss Fuller has chosen a popular theme for the display of rare histrionic powers, and the role of Lionnette, it is said, is destined to acquire a high place in the gallery of dramatic portraiture. It will be seen at Hoyt's Theatre, Saturday night.

Hoyt's A Trip to Chinatown.

"A Trip to Chinatown" is a clever musical conceit, satirizes popular themes and characters of the day, introduces pretty songs, attractive girls, and clever comedians, affording an evening's entertainment in which there is hardly a break in the laughing. The piece will be produced at the Norwalk Opera House, Saturday night, in exactly the same manner as at Hoyt's Theatre, New York. The musical numbers are all new and up-to-date.

Mr. Barnes of New York.

Miss Loraine Hollis, who is announced to appear at the Norwalk Opera House next Monday night as Marina, in "Mr. Barnes of New York," is said to be one of the most beautiful women on the American stage. She is also young, ambitious and talented. Her acting is devoid of affectation, and full of a subtle and suggestive charm. In the lighter scenes she is graceful and mobile, while in the stronger passages, her natural emotional ability finds forceful expression. Miss Hollis is supported by a strong company.

When Henry B. Nash's sailboat capsized in the harbor three weeks ago, he lost a pocketbook containing $13, and valuable papers. One day last week, while at work with oyster tongs near the spot, he had the good fortune to draw to the surface the treasure, as good as ever, save for a thorough wetting.

Rufus G. Taylor is in declining health at the house of William J. Finch. For several months he has shown evidence of weakness. During the entire period of his practice here, Dr. L. T. Day has employed Mr. Taylor. The doctor's predecessor, Dr. G. B. Bouton, also employed him, and he had acted for the late Dr. David S. Burr, serving each faithfully, the whole period aggregating 40 years. Last week Mr. Taylor felt compelled to say he could not labor further, and he was removed to his former home, as stated, where a sister, Miss Mary Taylor, and a niece, Mrs. William T. Wood, will minister to his wants. Mr. Taylor is about 65 years of age.

The boy was thrown over on one side of the street while the man "went to grass" on the other side. The latter jumped up and mounting his wheel rode off without attempting to ascertain whether the boy was injured. Luckily, however, the youngster escaped and was soon able to resume his ride.

The Norwalk Iron Works company have purchased the tract of land on Water street where the Union Knob Works company's plant, destroyed by fire some years ago, was located. It has a frontage of 300 feet and nearly that number of feet in depth. The owners were the Lock company and the Russell & Erwin company, of New Britain. The price paid was $6,400. The lot is just south of the Consolidated railroad bridge, opposite Hatch, Bailey & Company's lumber yard. It is proposed to have the Consolidated Railroad company extend the spur track already in the rear of the Iron Works to the new property, going under the present iron bridge, and crossing Water street at grade. To do this will require permission from the city or a charter from the Legislature.

Curiosities of a Bake Shop.

The largest loaves of bread baked in the world are those of France and Italy, says the Cleveland "World." The "pipe" bread of Italy is baked in loaves three feet long, while in France the loaves are made in the shape of very long rolls, four feet in length, and in many cases even six feet.

The bread of Paris is distributed almost exclusively by women, who go to the various bakehouses at 5:30 a. m., and spend about an hour brushing and polishing the loaves.

After the loaves are thoroughly cleaned of dust and grit, the woman proceeds on the rounds of her customers. Those who live in apartments or flats find their loaves leaning against the door. Restaurateurs and those having street entrances to their premises find their supply of the staff of life propped up against the front door. The wages earned by these bread carriers vary from 50 cents to 63½ cents of our money, and their day's work is completed by 10 of 11 o'clock in the morning.

INEBRIETY FROM SMELLING SALTS.

A Titled Lady Ostracized from Society as a confirmed Drunkard.

The very latest sort of drunkenness is that which, it has been discovered, comes from the constant inhalation of smelling salts.

So great a hold has the smelling salts habit gained upon the modern woman that when she is deprived of them she experiences all the cravings that afflict the person who dearly loves liquor, and finds himself deprived of it. Some of the salts are of excessive strength, and produce a sort of stupor most gratifying to the victim. More than one woman has been suspected of drinking when really her inebriety has resulted from a too liberal use of the smelling bottle.

Not long ago a titled lady was carried from the cloakroom at a grand reception in London in a state of helplessness. A bottle was found in the folds of her gown containing matter of a strength sufficient to take away the breath of an ordinary person. The rumor spread with wonderful precision that my lady was a confirmed drunkard—the smelling salts theory being derided by the majority—and the victim found it necessary to withdraw from the social circle she had long graced.

Indulgence in this habit may become expensive, for the seasoned subject soon exhausts the strength of the salts. As stimulation of the olfactory nerves is not alone the reason of this practice, it becomes necessary to renew the supply, and once enchained the slave will accept nothing that does not yield full virtues. The story is told of an elderly lady who calls upon a chemist every two or three days and requests the replenishing of no fewer than eight smelling bottles, some of which are not of a diminutive size.

CHICKEN AND CANARY BIRD.

A Firm Friendship that Was Begun in a Very Singular Way.

One day last spring, in purchasing a lot of fowls from her marketman, a lady in this city got one little bit of a chicken that was almost too small to eat, and which made its escape through the wires of the coop and began to chirp and cry about the yard. The lady made no effort to recapture the little thing, thinking it would be better off running free about the place. But it soon became evident that the chick had been too soon taken from parental care, and was totally unable to provide for itself. Two whole days passed, during which it neither ate nor drank, though the lady tried every means in her power to provide for its welfare. The chicken simply peeped and drooped till the lady gave up all efforts, and left the little thing to die, which no doubt it would have done right speedily had it not been rescued in the following singular manner:

It chanced that the lady has a pet canary of which she is very fond, and to which she devotes much care and attention. For instance, it is her invariable custom in mild weather to turn the bird out of its cage for a certain portion of each day, letting him have his bath in a sunny spot on the back porch. So that morning when the little chicken was so nearly giving up his life for lack of food and comfort, it happened that the canary was turned out of his cage for an hour of freedom in the sunshine. The lady was watching to see that no cats came around, and presently she saw the canary trip down the steps to the lawn, where the little chicken was crying. For a moment the two feathered things stood and looked at each other inquiringly. Then the bird chirped and made a dab, too, and pretty soon the two were chirping and dabbing away mightily. What the chirps and dabs meant of course we may not know, but presently the bird came hopping up the steps, the chicken following behind. Making his way to the cage, which sat open on the floor, the bird went in, chirping and dabbing all the while, with the chicken following after, and presently the two little friends were eating and drinking together.

That was the beginning of the singular friendship, which continues still unabated. The chicken stayed in the bird's cage with him until it was too large to get in the door, and then a roost was placed for it close to the cage hook, so that they might be near each other at night. It is no uncommon thing to see the canary throwing the seeds down from his cage to the chicken, and if the chicken finds a worm he brings it to the house and chirps under the cage till the lady lets the bird out, when the friends enjoy the feast together.—Philadelphia Times.

Mrs. Fillmore's Kindness.

Mrs. Fillmore probably did what no other retiring first lady has ever done. Mrs. Pierce, who succeeded her, was heartbroken over the death of a child, and Mrs. Fillmore remained to give her welcome and smooth her way. Then the Fillmores went to Willard's Hotel, and Mrs. Fillmore died before the month closed.

A late bishop of a somewhat inquisitorial character once wrote the following query to the church wardens of a parish in his diocese: "Are the conversation and carriage of your clergyman consistent with his holy office?" The reply was: "We can't say nothing about his conversation, but he don't keep no kerridge."—Household Words.

Gun-Shot Wounds.

Major E. A. Garlington was shot through the arm at the battle of "Wounded Knee," December 29, 1890, the last fight between the Indians and our troops. It is not often that a regular army officer certifies to the value of a proprietary remedy, but this is what Major Garlington says about SALVA-CEA:

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 21, 1895.

"I have used SALVA-CEA for soreness or rheumatic pains in the muscles of my arm, which is disabled from a gun-shot wound involving the elbow joint; relief was quick and complete.

E. A. GARLINGTON, Major and Inspector General, U. S. A."

Not many people suffer from gun-shot wounds, to be sure, but lots of us do suffer from piles, local skin irritation, chafings, colds and nasal catarrh, and SALVA-CEA is just as efficacious in all of these as in gun-shot wounds.

Two sizes, 25 and 50 cents per box. At druggists, or by mail.

For deep-seated pain and rheumatism of the joints use Salva-cea, "Extra Strong," Sold in tins at 75 cents each.

NEW YORK LETTER.

When years ago I used to come down from up the state to visit New York, nothing impressed me more than the people I encountered. I suppose every occasional visitor to the metropolis has something of the same feelings which I experienced in my younger days in viewing the never ending, surging crowd that seems always present in Gotham's thoroughfares.

Invisibly and almost imperceptibly the character of many of the most populous districts of New York city is changing, and the extent of the change is not realized or clearly understood by many persons. The population as given by the census of 1890 was 1,515,000.

Though to a considerable extent for sign immigration to the city of New York, not including immigration for transit through the city, has fallen off since 1893, the increase of the cosmopolitan population of New York goes on at such a ratio that instead of New York's surrendering any of its former prominence as a cosmopolitan city, it is increasing it. Though by the last Federal census the Irish-born population of New York outnumbered the Italian population by nearly five to one, there were more children born to Italian than to Irish parents in the quarter covered by the last report. In some localities where the Irish population was formerly predominant Italians have superseded it. In the Fourteenth ward, for instance, made famous in many local plays and newspaper sketches as a stronghold of Irish residents, there were only seven children born of Irish parentage to 258 Italians, and in the Sixth ward the figures were nothing to 91. The fact which all these figures establish is perfectly plain to any observer that the city of New York is becoming every day more and more of a foreign city, it is extending its cosmopolitan character, and there are no longer German districts or Russian districts or French colonies or English settlements. The heterogeneous population has become scattered, so that there are, in fact, only two or three American wards left.

Kleptomania is again claiming the attention of scientific as well as incredulous minds, by reason of the pleadings of guilty by Mrs. Castle, the rich California lady who was recently accused by London shopkeepers. The press reports say that when the judge pronounced his sentence of three months imprisonment Mrs. Castle stood dazed for a moment and then, as the full import of the Chairman's words came to her, became hysterical, obliging the nurses and the prison warden to support her. She then began to moan piteously and finally to scream and struggle violently. She was removed from the room as quickly as possible and as she was being taken away cried out:

"What does it mean? My God! What does it mean?"

A good many of the women in the court room exhibited strong emotion, several of them weeping and all expressing deep sympathy with the unfortunate prisoner, whose screams could be heard faintly issuing from the underground passage through which she was taken even after the court room had been cleared.

New York has its kleptomaniacs as almost all the large stores can testify. The lavish displays of goods are veritable provocators of special thefts. They constitute a real danger for feeble or sickly persons. A great many women who would not steal elsewhere here find themselves fascinated and overwhelmed with a desire to appropriate small articles within their reach. It is a temptation that is truly diabolic, for the chances of detection are minimized at certain hours during the day when the stores are crowded, and each clerk has many customers waiting to be served, these meanwhile handling the goods that lie upon the counters.

The best method of preventing these women from becoming thieves would be, it seems, to station at each counter an officer of the law, not in ordinary dress like the rest of the customers, but in a uniform as conspicuous and noticeable as possible.

London merchants profit by this unfortunate weakness. When one finds that he has lost something by theft, he ascertains the names of those of his kleptomaniac clients who have visited his place within the previous day or so, and to each of these he sends a circular requesting that they forward to him at once the missing article in question or price. The kleptomaniac does not remember whether she has stolen or not: she pays at once, therefore, to ease her awakened conscience. It so happens, therefore, that for the same theft as many as ten families will indemnify one of these great stores and the wily Britisher will pocket the entire proceeds and become himself the real criminal.

CYRUS THORP.

A Human Song Book.

Rev. S. Baring Gould has been narrating some of his experiences when collecting the many traditional "Songs in the West," which he has since published. From one old man in the neighborhood of Law Trenchard, England, he obtained at least one hundred songs.

This man, James Parsons by name, was known as the "singing machine." It is stated that he was one evening in a public house at Lydford, when a bet was made that he could not go on singing fresh songs until the sun rose. He was to have a pint of ale for every song he sang.

When he began Parsons had already been singing all the evening, and had drunk not a little. Nevertheless he sang on through the night, one song after another, until the sun rose, and thus won his bet.

How to Cure a Severe Cold.

A few weeks ago the editor was taken with a very severe cold that caused him to be in a most miserable condition. It was undoubtedly a bad case of la grippe and recognizing it as dangerous he took immediate steps to bring about a speedy cure. From the advertisement of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and the many good recommendations included therein, we concluded to make a first trial of the medicine. To say that it was satisfactory in its results, is putting it very mildly, indeed. It acted like magic and the result was a speedy and permanent cure.—The Banner of Liberty, Libertytown, Maryland. The 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by E. P. Weed, Druggist.

RISKY MARINE REPORTING.

Nerve and Skill Must be Possessed by the Man in the Skiff.

It was a pleasant, breezy day in the latter part of September. The wind was blowing from the northeast in the Straits of Mackinac with just enough force to raise a white crest on occasional waves somewhat larger than their fellows. It seemed quite enough sea for the cockleshell skiff which held the marine reporter and his papers and messages, although but a pleasant sailing breeze for the towering three-masted schooner which had been towing it along side. The schooner was bound down to Lake Huron for a load of cedar, and her dingy, smoke-discolored sails were piled high to the topmast head.

The marine reporter had been on watch for just four hours. That is, he had been rowing about the Straits of Mackinac on the lookout for and boarding passing boats for that length of time. Ere long he discovered and started to intercept a large wooden steamer towing two consorts, coming up the straits.

Getting directly on the track of the steamer, the reporter's boat rested until the big wooden hull loomed right over it. Then, with a skillful sweep of the oars, the skiff was drawn out of the way and alongside the steamer, which checked not for an instant. The reporter was standing up in the boat now. "Stand by," he cried, and a head appeared above the bulwarks ten feet above him. With a skill born of practice, the reporter threw a coil of line which was attached to the bow of the skiff, and holding the slack in his hand checked the jerk which came when the steamer commenced towing the skiff.

The crew of the steamer knew what was wanted, and at once lowered a bucket over the side of the boat holding a couple of iron belaying pins for weights on the letters in the bottom. Every man in the crew wanted a newspaper, as the voyage had been long, and the Captain wanted two, but the reporter had enough to go around. There was an order from the owner in Cleveland to the Captain of the steamer, sent by telegraph in care of the station at Mackinac, and to be delivered by the reporter, and two letters also to be sent to the station.

"See anything new coming up, Captain?"

"No, nothing but gales of wind dead ahead, and a little fog on Saginaw Bay," was the response.

"All right, let go." A deck hand cast off the painter, and, giving a pull on a tiller line, the skiff was steered from the dreaded vortex at the propeller.—Chicago Daily Tribune.

BULLET IN A HAILSTONE.

A Tale that Would Do Credit to Baron Munchausen.

Col. Clark R. Wescott of London, England, who has been spending a couple of months in Chicago and the West, in the interest of a syndicate which owns considerable mining property in this country, is responsible for the following account of a singular natural phenomenon. His story is as follows:

"One hot day a couple of weeks since, I was riding along a mountain road in Colorado on my way to a mine in which I am interested, when I noticed high above me, soaring in majestic circles, an eagle. I had a 45-90 Winchester slung across my back, and it was but the work of a moment to unsling the gun and fire at the bird, which appeared to be directly above me. The shot was a clear miss, and not caring to waste any more cartridges, I was about to ride on, when I was startled to hear what I took to be the dull 'clung' of a stone thrown by an unseen hand, which fell into a little gully partly filled with leaves, within twenty feet of me.

"I looked carefully about me in all directions, but could see no sign of a human being, and then dismounted, and scraping back the leaves, was astonished to find a piece of ice as large as a goose egg and about the same shape. I was further astonished to discover my rifle ball firmly imbedded in the centre. I have speculated a great deal over this phenomenon since that time, and the only solution I can see is that the ball in passing through the cloud gathered the moisture and held it by its whirling motion, so that it was frozen at a higher altitude and fell to the earth as I have described."—Chicago Chronicle.

How the Elephant Sleeps.

One of the most erroneous of the many queer ideas which the layman has on the questions of natural history is the one respecting the elephant's mode of sleeping. Even the old school of naturalists declared that the elephant had never been known to sleep except in a standing position. Of late, however, say within the last century, it has been learned that the error came about by persons studying the habits of such beasts as had not been long in captivity. Such animals, when undergoing the process of domestication, have been known to stand for twelve, eighteen, or even twenty-four hours without once lying down to sleep. This is regarded as a want of confidence in their keepers, coupled with a longing liberty. When elephants are at perfect ease and reconciled to their fate, they will lie down on their sides and sleep as all other beasts do.—St. Louis Republican.

WEYLER IS NOT LOST.

News of Whereabouts of the Military Don Quixote Received. FINE POSITION OF MACEO. With Twenty Thousand Followers He Is Intrenched in a Chain of Hills, the Approach to Which Is Defended by Numerous Dynamite Mines.

HAVANA, Nov. 19.—Very little news regarding the doings of Captain General Weyler in his operations against the insurgents in the province of Pinar del Rio was allowed to escape today from the palace. Major Bazan of the Spanish command-er's staff, however, arrived today from the front. He says that the operations are most difficult and adds that the captain general slept two rainy nights on the ground and without blankets, and that he has been several times without meals. The major further says that the captain general yesterday was between Zoroa and Candelaria.

Advices from Sagua announce that Alfredo Ruiz Cepeda and two more insurgents have been shot at that place. General Munoz, who is now suffering from sickness, had two engagements with the insurgents at Sitio and Hondo. The enemy left 18 killed on the field and retired with its wounded. The troops had a captain and a soldier killed and 25 men wounded.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 1.—Captain Toronado Andrade, one of the youngest and bravest of General Maceo's staff, and Manuel M. Coronado of Havana arrived here from Cuba. Mr. Coronado says he left Havana to save himself. He had been summoned for trial on the charge of being in close communication with the insurgents and as acting as their agent.

NEW ORLEANS, Nov. 1.—Captain Toronado Andrade, one of the youngest and bravest of General Maceo's staff, and Manuel M. Coronado of Havana arrived here from Cuba. Mr. Coronado says he left Havana to save himself. He had been summoned for trial on the charge of being in close communication with the insurgents and as acting as their agent.

MACEO'S STRONG POSITION. "Are General Maceo's positions impregnable?" "Yes, I consider them so. The cordillera of hills in which Maceo is established is 200 miles in length by 16 to 24 in width, and every hill is a stronghold. The sides of these hills, which rise often to 1,000 feet above the sea level, are covered with a very thick undergrowth of mangroves. The only way to get to the mountain is by mule paths, and on these no more than two to four men can go. These places are all held by the Cubans and are also protected by mines and traps, which are unknown to any but the guides of the Cuban army.

CONCLUSION CAPTAIN ANDRADE SAID: "The sun is rising, and every day it grows brighter. I can plainly see in the no distant future a new republic, advanced, civilized, in close ties of friendship with this country."

parted for Cuba several months since. The young man writes that he is now an artillery captain in the insurgent army and tells of several hot engagements with the Spaniards in Puerto Principe previous to Oct. 16, the date of his letter. There are a number of Americans, he says, in the company.

A Memorial of Sympathy. MONTGOMERY, Ala., Nov. 19.—A memorial to congress has been introduced in the assembly expressing profound sympathy with the Cuban war and petitioning the representatives in congress from Alabama to exert every influence to render the insurgents assistance. The memorial will be adopted almost unanimously.

MISS BEHR RELEASED. The Young Woman Who Whipped Two Farmers Is Out on Bail. ELIZABETH, N. J., Nov. 19.—Miss Edith Behr, the 19-year-old girl of Lyons Farms who was sentenced last Saturday to three months in the county jail by Judge McCormack for assault and battery, was released from prison today.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 19.—The third annual convention of the National Hardware Association began in Philadelphia today. Nearly 200 members from all parts of the country were present. W. W. Supplee of Philadelphia, the president, was in the chair. The opening session was devoted to the reading of the president's annual report and the reception of the various committee reports.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 19.—The Philadelphia and Reading Railroad company reorganized today by the election of a president, a secretary and six directors. By the terms of an act of May, 1887, known as the "railroad law," the change of the name of the railroad, which was sold under foreclosure proceedings in this city Sept. 23, was made imperative. Under the plan of reorganization there will be three companies—the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad company, the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company and the Reading company.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 19.—The British steamer Memphis, from Montreal for Avonmouth, is ashore in Dunlough bay. Soon after being stranded her crew took to the rigging. The gale was blowing so hard that only the captain and part of the crew were saved. It is believed that nine men were lost. Cattle and other things of the steamer's cargo are now washing ashore.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 18.—T. L. Kelly & Co. today gave chattel mortgages amounting to $79,191 on the stock of their department store. The assets are said to be greatly in excess of the liabilities. The store was attached by Marshal & Risley, who hold the largest mortgage. The assets are said to be $150,000 and the liabilities $100,000.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 19.—The twenty-eighth annual reunion of the Society of the Army of the Tennessee convened today in the parlors of the Southern hotel. General Grenville M. Dodge of Iowa, the president, called the meeting to order. The meeting will be in session for two days.

MONTGOMERY, Nov. 19.—A dispatch from Leipzig to The Mail says that the Neueste Nachrichten of that place, said to be inspired by Prince Bismarck, int that Italy as well as Germany in 1891 concluded a neutrality treaty with Russia.

SOCIETY OF THE ARMY OF TENNESSEE. ST. LOUIS, Nov. 18.—The twenty-eighth annual reunion of the Society of the Army of Tennessee will be held in this city tomorrow at the Southern hotel. There will be tendered a reception in Entertainment hall, Exposition building, when the annual address will be delivered by General O. O. Howard of the regular army. The society will visit Jefferson barracks, where General Henry will entertain the members at luncheon.

NET A SUMMER HOME FOR MCKINLEY. BOSTON, Nov. 18.—A dispatch from Canton, O., quotes Major McKinley as saying that if the Wilder mansion at Bolton, Mass., has been purchased as a summer home for him he does not know anything about it. The place has been purchased by J. W. Jones of Englewood, N. J., and it was reported that he had bought it for Major McKinley. Mr. Jones is a brother-in-law of Mark A. Hanna.

ATTEMPTED TRAIN WRECKING. NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—An attempt was made to wreck the train on the New York and Greenwood Lake railroad due in New York at 7:45. A pile of ties had been placed on the track near Soho and was concealed by a sharp curve. The engineer saw the outlines of the obstruction and stopped his train within a few feet of the pile. The place is a lonely one. The act was probably the work of tramps.

TROUBLE OVER CREDIT CERTIFICATES. PITTSBURGH, Nov. 18.—Fifty members of the Glassworkers' union met to protest against the further issuance of credit certificates by President Burns to members of the union now on strike or lockout. The protest is the result of a legal opinion secured by the men, which says the members of the association can be held individually liable for debts contracted by its officers.

NINE MEN FROM A WRECK. NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—On board the steamer New York, from Southampton, were Captain Norwood and eight distressed seamen of the schooner Henry Souther of Portland, Me., which was abandoned at sea Oct. 15. The crew was rescued by the British steamer Belton, from New Orleans for Rotterdam, and landed at Plymouth on Nov. 4.

HE CAUSED A FATAL COLLISION. SOREL, QUE., Nov. 18.—Captain John Delsie of the steamship Tiber was arrested here on a charge of manslaughter. A Newfoundland government official swore out a warrant before Judge Desnoyers of Montreal for the arrest of the captain, holding him responsible for the collision in St. John's harbor on the 6th inst. which resulted in the sinking of the schooner Maggie and the drowning of 13 people.

FELL DOWN THE SHAFT. NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—Vito Coebon, an Italian boy, 16, was found dead at the foot of an elevator shaft in the building 7 Clinton place today. Coebon, who was employed in the building, had apparently fallen down the shaft and broken his neck shortly before his body was discovered.

THE ANCHORIA CRIPPLED. The Big Liner Disabled at Sea by a Broken Shaft. NEW YORK, Nov. 18.—The steamer Mobile, from London, brought word that the Anchor line steamship Anchoria, from Glasgow for New York, was passed at anchor in latitude 40.40, longitude 70.59, having broken her shaft. The Mobile sighted the Anchoria yesterday and bore down to her and asked if assistance was required. Captain Wilson of the Anchoria said he did not need assistance as the engineers were then engaged in placing an extra length of shafting in position, but he requested Captain Layland to give a passage to New York to his purser, Mr. Matheson. Captain Layland consented, and Mr. Matheson was sent aboard the Mobile in one of the Anchoria's lifeboats.

WHEN INTERVIEWED TODAY BY Mr. Matheson said that the Anchoria had fine weather and a prosperous voyage until 6:30 o'clock on Sunday evening, when the shaft snapped without warning. An examination showed the break to be in a length of which a duplicate was carried on board, and the chief engineer reported to Captain Wilson that he would be able to make repairs and might expect to be ready to proceed by this evening. Accordingly Captain Wilson ordered soundings to be made. The passengers were inclined to make merry over the mishap when they understood that there was no danger and only the possibility of 48 hours' delay.

MATHESON REACHED THE OFFICES of his company soon after landing. He said that there was no excitement among the Anchoria's passengers at the time of the breaking of the shaft, the accident having occurred in a smooth sea and fair weather. No tug will be sent to the assistance of the vessel. She will repair her shaft herself and come up under her own steam.

THE COURSE OF TRUE LOVE. A Romance of Fifty Years Ago Ended in Indiana. HAMMOND, Ind., Nov. 18.—The marriage of Mrs. Margaret Snyder of Omaha to Justice Ezra Dullon of Ross Station, which took place in Judge Gregory's city court, was the closing chapter of a romance begun nearly 50 years ago. Margaret Moore then lived in Schoharie county, N. Y., and her most ardent admirer was Ezra Dullon. They quarreled one evening while on their way home from a Halloween party, and the estrangement caused a separation. The boy lover packed up his belongings and came to Indiana. Four years after the lovers' quarrel Margaret married a wealthy manufacturer named Snyder and afterward moved to Nebraska. Dullon became a full-fledged lawyer and married. During the years of separation they never heard from each other, and were ignorant of each other's whereabouts until a few months ago. After the deaths of Mr. Snyder and Mrs. Dullon the former lover wrote a long letter to the western widow, having secured her address from a notice in the paper, and in reply was assured that she would accept him. The white haired couple met in the Rock Island station at Chicago and came at once to Hammond. They will live at Ross Station.

COONEY THE FOX AGAIN. The Man Alleged to Have Killed Dr. Cronin Back in Chicago. CHICAGO, Nov. 18.—"Cooney the Fox," of Cronin murder fame, is back in town. He returned to Chicago of his own free will. Cooney reached the city Saturday night. His first public appearance was Sunday night, when he visited North Side resorts which used to be frequented by the leaders of the anti-Cronin faction in the Clan-na-Gael. He refused to tell anything about his journeyings or his movements during the half dozen years which have elapsed since he fled after the discovery of Dr. Cronin's body in the manhole of the Lake View sewer.

COONEY IS STOPPING at a house on the North Side, near his former haunts. His friends say he is here to stay. The police do not want him, and there is no reason why he should longer avoid Chicago. Patrick Cooney, better known as "Cooney the Fox," is the man whom Mrs. Andy Foy accused of being deeply implicated in the Cronin murder. In her story of the crime Mrs. Foy told how the conspirators had selected by lot her husband to perform the murder. Cooney, she claimed, being unmarried, agreed to take her husband's place, since Foy had a wife and a large family of children.

KEEPS ADDING TO IT. The List of Cures Will Soon Wipe Out the List of Sufferers. In Norwalk.

First one, then two, then four, then eight. Rapid progress, isn't it? Well, it should be, it takes them all. Beginning with backache—they cure. Excess of urine—they cure. Burning in passage—they cure. Sediment or brick dust—they cure. High color and mucus—they cure. Diabetes and Bright's disease—they cure. All the same to them—they're made for it. They are Doan's Kidney Pills. They add to the list all who take them. And Norwalk's list is long. Because the cure misses none. No matter of how long standing. How complicated and stubborn. Norwalk people know it now. Mr. Daniel S. Osterbank, No. 23 Belden avenue says: "I am seventy-seven years old and a millwright by trade. In my younger days I worked very hard and for years I have been troubled with kidney and bladder complaint. My back ached so severely at times I could not move and I was compelled to get up often at night to urinate and lost a great deal of sleep. I took medicines and wore plasters but they would not cure me. I saw Doan's Kidney Pills advertised and I got a box at Hale's drug store. They were just the thing for my trouble. I have every reason to think that they are just what the manufacturers claim for them. They have made me sound and well. This is only one statement among the many we are daily receiving about the working of Doan's Kidney Pills. We will continue them. If your back is weak, lame or aching, try Doan's Kidney Pills. You can get them at your druggist's at 50 cents a box, or they will be sent postpaid on receipt of price, by Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. One to five applications of Doan's Ointment will cure the worst case of Itching Piles there ever was. Can you afford to suffer tortures when a simple, never-failing remedy is at hand? OPENING OF PROSECUTION.

The Policeman Who Arrested the Girl Tells of Her Unaccountable Actions Immediately After Killing Her Faithless Lover.

NEW YORK, Nov. 19.—Pale as death and trembling like an aspen leaf, Maria Barberi, clinging to the arm of a "Tombs angel," walked unsteadily into part one of the criminal branch of general sessions today and took her seat before the 12 men, tried and true, who will determine whether her life shall be forfeited.

The trial of the girl who killed Domenico Cataldo began in earnest today.

Two days have been spent in impaneling a jury, and the examination of the witnesses was ready to begin.

Before court was called to order dark visaged Italians began filing into the courtroom.

Many of them were witnesses, and others had come to hear the testimony out of curiosity.

Several well dressed women were scattered through the audience. They were the morbid persons who think it their duty to attend all trials where capital punishment is likely to be inflicted.

They gazed curiously at the trembling girl whose life is hanging in the balance, and several of them gave occasional affected sobs.

Around the railing were seated many lawyers. Their interest in the trial had been aroused by the knowledge that an unusual plea will be made by the defendant.

Seldom has the plea of moral incompetency been made, and lawyers are anxious to know whether such a plea will be sufficiently strong to release a person who has been indicted for murder in the first degree, and who was only saved from suffering the death penalty by a reversal of the decision of her first trial by the court of appeals.

The strain upon the prisoner is showing plainly. Each day as she appears in court she looks more wan than she did on the day previous.

Her sunken eyes, pale cheeks and bloodless lips gave her a deathlike appearance today.

At times she seemed almost ready to faint, and then only the restraining and soothing influence of Mrs. Foster was sufficient to arouse her to the present.

The Prosecution's Opening.

The case for the prosecution was opened by Assistant District Attorney Lauterbach. In his speech to the jury he cautioned them to be careful not to allow themselves to be influenced by prejudice.

He then told of the killing of Cataldo by Maria in graphic language and tried to show that the murder was committed because of the man's refusal to marry Maria or give her money.

"That girl would have killed him before April 26, 1895," said the attorney, "had she not been prevented from doing so by her mother."

"It was her desire to kill, and when Cataldo left his home, at 424 East Thirtieth street, she followed him to a saloon at 428 East Thirtieth street, and then again demanded that he marry her."

"He was sitting at a table playing cards, and turned again and refused to wed her. She seized him by the hair with her left hand, drew his head back and slashed his throat with a razor, almost severing his head."

"Cataldo fell to the floor, but managed to rise, and, clasping the gaping wound, ran to the street and fell dead."

The attorney then told how the woman had coolly washed her hands and joined a crowd of Italians in a near grocery.

"Gentlemen of the jury," continued the attorney, "there is but one verdict you can render, and that is that the defendant has been guilty of willful and deliberate murder."

The First Witness.

Policeman J. H. Hays was the first witness called to the stand.

Hays testified that he was standing on the corner of Fourteenth street and Avenue A at 10 o'clock on the morning of April 26, 1895, when he saw a man run down the street and fall dead, with a gaping wound in the neck.

"I followed the trail of blood made by the man who had fallen and traced it to 428 East Thirtieth street, to the saloon."

"I tried to get into the place, but it was locked."

"Then I went to a grocery at No. 426, where a number of persons were gathered. I went into a back room of the store and there saw Maria Barberi, surrounded by a number of Italians. She was wiping blood from her hands with a towel."

"She motioned to me, and I went with her to the first floor at 424 East Thirtieth street. A small boy was in the room into which she took me."

"When we entered the room, the woman took off her sack, which was bloody, and threw it out of the window into the street."

The sack was then shown for identification. It was a gray garment and was stained with blood.

"I then put the woman under arrest," continued the witness, "and later turned her over to Policeman O'Reilly, who had joined me."

"Cataldo died almost immediately," said Hays in answer to a question.

Policeman Hays was then closely cross questioned by Lawyer House for the defendant.

Witness testified that the prisoner was very quiet and passive after being arrested.

"It was not necessary to keep hold of her or to handcuff her," he said. "She did not speak once that I can remember."

"Is it not your custom to try to learn something of the crimes when you make arrests for serious offenses?"

"It is."

"Did you not move the woman from the Eighteenth precinct station house to the Fourteenth precinct station house after she was taken to the first place by O'Reilly?"

"Yes."

"Did she not speak once?"

"She did not. She was very quiet. She spoke to no one."

"What was the demeanor of this defendant when you were with her at the Fourteenth precinct station?"

"She was absolutely quiet. I can't say whether she was dazed or not."

To Abolish Sugar Bounties.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The Chronicle's Vienna correspondent says that Austria and Germany are negotiating to abolish the sugar bounties.

FITZSIMMONS' EVASION.

Wants a Finish Fight and Doesn't Like John Kelly, Says His Manager.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 19.—When advised of the purse offered by the Bohemian Sporting club of New York for a 20 round contest between Fitzsimmons and Corbett, Martin Julian, the Cornishman's manager, said that the offer was not acceptable. Fitz desires a finish fight and will not consent to the selection of Honest John Kelly as referee.

Now that Dan Stuart has obtained a concession from the Mexican government for athletic exhibitions, Julian believes an opportunity should be given him to match the heavyweights.

BOSTON, Nov. 19.—Regarding the offer of President Genslinger of the Bohemian Sporting club of New York of a $25,000 purse for a fight between Corbett and Fitzsimmons, Corbett said that he had replied to the following effect:

"The club that offers the largest purse by next Friday I will sign with. Your club is satisfactory to me if it offers the best terms."

He had received telegrams, he said, from Dan Stuart at Dallas and from Warren Lewis of the Greater New York Athletic club, saying that they wanted a chance to confer with him before he signed with any one.

Corbett said he was surprised at the offer; but, he added: "It goes if no one beats it. How can Fitzsimmons refuse that or anything better? He can't crawl away now, so far as I can see, although he is pretty slick at the game. There will be no hitch on my part. I'll fight on two weeks' notice, as I have said, for anything and anywhere. I'm not tied to Stuart, Lewis or any one else. All I want is to fight Fitzsimmons. I'll fight Fitzsimmons and retire. If he won't fight I'll retire after I've shown him up to the public and satisfied everybody that he is the cur I have claimed he is. Honest John Kelly suits me for referee. If he doesn't suit Fitzsimmons, I'll take George Siler of Chicago."

"Assuming that Fitzsimmons does not accept Genslinger's offer—then what?"

"Let him accept any other. I don't care what it is, or where. If he prefers Dan Stuart's somewhere else, I'll go there for the same money that he does. I don't care about Fitzsimmons says. I'm not tied to the club that he accepts. No matter what it is, I'll agree to it. As I said before, any time within two weeks and anywhere. What money satisfies him satisfies me. All I want is to clinch a match. I will divide the $25,000 any way that it suits Fitzsimmons."

EL PASO, TEX., Nov. 19.—Dan Stuart, after a chase over the country, thinks he has at last succeeded in securing a spot where he may pull off any prize fight without fear of police interference.

That place is on the Mexican side of the river, near Paso del Norte. Backed by a syndicate of American capitalists, mostly Texans, he says he recently made a trip to the City of Mexico, and there obtained a concession that places him in indisputable possession of a tract of land, on which he may erect an arena, clubhouse, etc., make such improvements as he may decide upon and pull off his fights without interruption of any kind.

Stuart will now make a bid for the Corbett-Fitzsimmons affair.

It is further said that the syndicate will guarantee money for purses, and that some of the biggest mills in the history of the prize ring will shortly be scheduled.

WARNED AGAINST SPECULATION.

Employees of Montreal Concerns Must Let Mining Shares Alone.

MONTREAL, Nov. 19.—A leading bank in this city has issued a circular to the clerks in all its branches, drawing attention to the engagement made by each of them on entering the bank's service not to invest or speculate in stocks. In view of the large number of mining shares now being put on the market at exceedingly low prices, the general manager has thought it wise to remind his subordinates that any speculation of this kind is strictly forbidden by the terms of their engagement, and that they must conduct themselves accordingly.

The extent to which the British Columbia mining craze took hold of all classes in Toronto has given concern to several large firms in this city, and it is said that similar circulars have been or will be issued, prohibiting the clerks in these establishments from investing in mining shares.

Presidents of Methodist Colleges.

CHICAGO, Nov. 19.—The Association of Presidents of the Methodist Colleges and Universities in the United States, in an annual convention at Evanston, has elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Henry Wade Rogers, Northwestern University; vice president, J. T. Goucher, Woman's college, Baltimore; secretary and treasurer, Samuel Plantz, Lawrence University.

De Windt's Journey Abandoned.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—A letter received here from Harry De Windt, dated Unwaidjik, on the Siberian coast of the Siberian straits, says he has been obliged to abandon his proposed journey by land from New York to Paris, as he finds that the straits are 40 miles wide at the narrowest point, and that they are never frozen over. De Windt expects to return in a whaler toward the end of the month.

Republican National Committee.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 19.—Secretary Mercer of the Republican congressional committee said today that there was practically no further doubt that the committee would continue active work during the next two years and probably until 1900. Mr. Mercer thinks that the national committee ultimately will join the congressional committee in the maintenance of headquarters in Washington.

Canadian Pacific Telegraphers.

MONTREAL, Nov. 19.—The Canadian Pacific Railway Telegraphers, having satisfactorily settled their grievances with the company, it is said that an effort will now be made to affiliate this order with the great organizations to which the engineers and conductors belong, which have their headquarters in the United States.

Charles Leisner Appointed.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 19.—Charles Leisner, president of the Coopers' Protective Association of Cincinnati, has just been appointed organizer of the International Coopers' union. He was prominent in the recent international convention at Evansville. He will have his headquarters here.

Registered Mail Stolen In Paris.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—The Post's Paris correspondent reports that a man disguised as a postman secured a bag of registered letters of the value of 42,000 francs ($8,400) from a mail cart in the Rue d'Allemagne and decamped.

Business Troubles.

DULUTH, Nov. 19.—The S. B. Richards Lumber company filed a voluntary assignment to the Duluth Trust company.

THE MANITOBA TANGLE

The Vexed School Questions Have Been Quietly Adjusted.

BOTH PARTIES SATISFIED.

History of the Case Which at One Time Promised Serious Results—The Most Important Conditions of the Final Settlement.

OTTAWA, Nov. 19.—The Manitoba school question, which has more than once during the past three years threatened a disruption of Canadian confederation, has been settled on terms which, it is believed, will be sufficiently satisfactory to both sides to put an end to controversy.

The school system of the province of Manitoba had afforded an element of provincial discord ever since the admission of the province into the Dominion, but assumed its national importance only about six years ago, when, by an act of the Manitoba legislature, all separate or denominational schools were abolished, so far as state aid was concerned.

A protest of indignation at once went up from the Roman Catholics of the province, who at the time, as now, constituted a minority of the population, and the cry was re-echoed from the Catholics of Quebec. The Quebec hierarchy entered into the fray, and in vigorous language from the pulpit denounced the abolition of separate schools.

The French Catholic press became very bitter over the matter, and some of the more outspoken papers openly advocated a recourse to arms to protect what they considered their rights under confederation.

The case was taken from the supreme court of Manitoba to the supreme court of Canada and finally to the last court of resort, the English privy council. The latter decided that the Catholic minority of Manitoba had a grievance, but suggested no relief. Meantime an intensely bitter feeling existed between the rival sections. The question was made a leading issue of the last federal elections, and, though neither party dared make any definite pronouncement of policy, the general belief that the Conservatives, under Sir Charles Tupper, would attempt coercion of the Manitoba majority led to the defeat at the polls of that party for the first time in 20 years and the election of Mr. Laurier, who promised, if elected, to settle the question in six months and to the satisfaction of both Protestants and Catholics.

Terms of Settlement.

Following are the main features of the terms of settlement, which has been accepted by the Manitoba government and will be embodied shortly in an act of the legislature of that body:

All schools are to be national, under provincial control and subject to the same regulations and inspection.

The same textbooks will be used, and all teachers will be properly qualified by passing the provincial examination and taking the prescribed normal school course.

School work of a purely secular character will occupy the whole of the school day except the last half hour, when the representatives of any religious denomination will be allowed to come in and instruct the children belonging to his denomination, provided the parents are willing to have them remain. In cases where the people decide not to have this religious instruction the regular school work will go on until the close of the school hours.

The principle of local option is recognized throughout.

The proviso that is intended to make the schools acceptable to the minority is that districts having an average attendance of 25 Roman Catholic school children shall be entitled to have a teacher of their own denomination, who must be fully qualified according to provincial national school standards.

In districts where the children speak French wholly they are to have a teacher speaking both English and French, so that they will learn English as rapidly as possible. The readers used in such schools will be bilingual, so that the children will grow up from the first accustomed to English.

General von Gossler Decried.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—A dispatch to The Mail from Berlin describes General von Gossler's debut as minister of war as a complete fiasco. "A more incoherent speaker," the dispatch says, "is hardly imaginable. His awkward pauses were filled in with derisive laughter and hisses." The Berlin correspondent of The Times says that General von Gossler cannot be congratulated upon his part in the debate in the reichstag.

The Election In Utah.

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 19.—County Attorney C. O. Whittemore has handed down an opinion of the legal status of the recent election. It declares that the ballot was not a secret one as defined by the provisions of the constitution, therefore the election itself is "absolutely invalid and is, in fact, no election." The board of canvassers is advised, however, that the county clerk must issue the certificates of election.

Yale Kickers Confident.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 19.—On the Yale campus today there was evident today an air of supreme confidence in the ability of the Yale football eleven to wrest the victory from Princeton on Saturday. The confidence referred to is undoubtedly due to the phenomenal showing made by the varsity eleven yesterday afternoon.

THE PRIZE KANSAS CITY MO. BABY OF

Cured of Disfiguring ECZEMA

By the CUTICURA REMEDIES

Our baby when three weeks old was badly afflicted with eczema. Her head, arms, neck, limbs, and nearly every joint in her body was raw and bleeding when we concluded to try CUTICURA REMEDIES. We began with CUTICURA (ointment) and CUTICURA SOAP, and after the first application we could see a change. After we had used them one week some of the sores had healed entirely, and ceased to spread. In less than a month she was free from sores and blemishes, and today has as lovely skin and hair as any child. She was shown at the Grange Fair, and took a premium as the prettiest baby, over sixteen others. Mr. & Mrs. PAIR, 1809 Bellevue Ave., Kan. City, Sold every where. FORRIS DRUG & CHEM. CO., Boston.
