

JC Distinguished Service Award To Be Made Tomorrow

This week the Enfield Jaycees have been celebrating National Jaycee Week. The celebration marks the 50th Anniversary of the U.S. Jaycees and the 15th year of community service in Enfield.

Here, the local Jaycees have been telling the Jaycee Story throughout the town. Jaycee Week chairman Joe Weber expressed the spirit of the week: "To tell a story often takes an excuse. Our excuse for telling people about Jaycees is Jaycee Week. By using this special week, we can show our friends and neighbors what the concerned young men in their community are doing to make it better. Telling our story is not a matter of boasting; it is an effort to promote community support."

"The fundamental rule of winning community support is gathering community respect. This can be done only if we tell of undertaking programs with a challenge. In Enfield we are doing just that, maintaining a balanced program in public affairs, health and safety, and youth and sports."

The Jaycee Story has been told in various ways. Many townspeople have seen the striking banner at Town Hall announcing the event. Jaycee speakers have presented their Story at meetings of other civic organizations throughout town, and letters of invitation to attend the Orientation Program held last night in the Town Council Chambers were sent to new Enfield residents.

Thousands of handbills describing Jaycee Leadership Training have been distributed about town and appear in store windows of more than 75 local merchants who have lent their support.

Presentation of the annual Distinguished Service Award to Enfield's outstanding young man of 1969 will be made tomorrow night at the Mt. Laurel Restaurant at a dinner starting at 7:30 p.m. Selection of the recipient from applications submitted by various civic organizations will be made by Maurice Smith, Mayor Frank Mancuso and the Rev. M. F. Shanley.

Many of the Jaycees attending this dinner will be hosting their boss in an annual custom of tribute and thanks for their cooperation in encouraging the individual Jaycee.

Public Hearing Of PZ Next Week

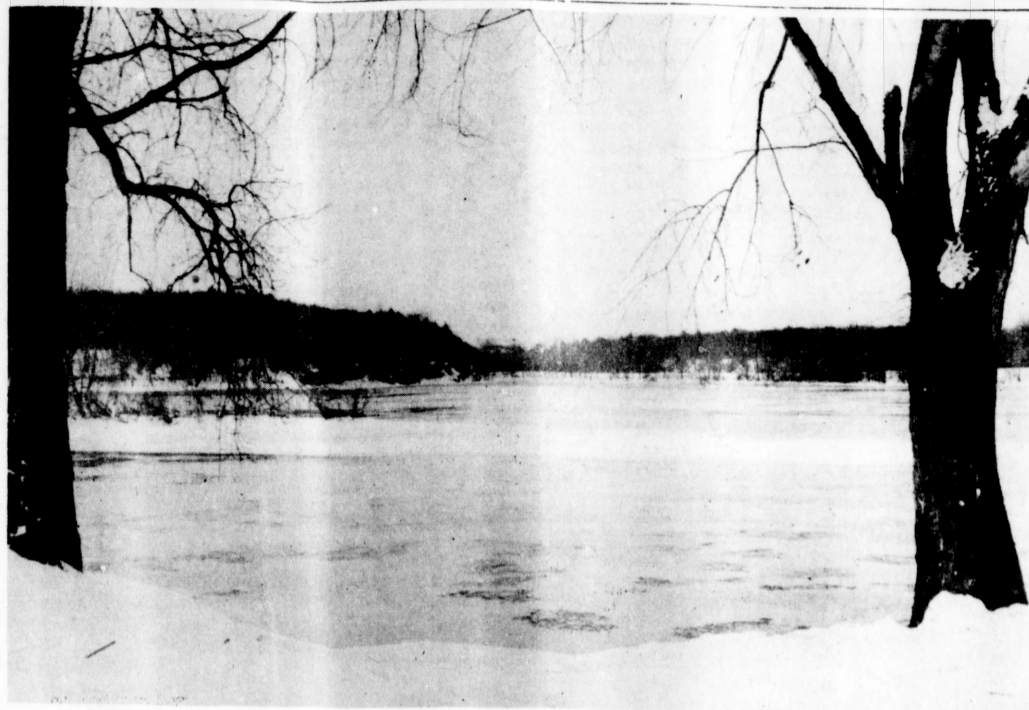

The determination of the Planning and Zoning Commission to control business zoning in Enfield is expected to be demonstrated at a public hearing to be held at 8 p. m., next Thursday, July 29, in the Town Hall Council chambers. The purpose of the meeting will be to amend certain sections of the present zoning ordinances.

Retention of the present "business special" zoning on Hazard Avenue east of 191 to Washington Road will be assured if changes in the present regulations, as proposed by town officials, are adopted by the commission.

The purpose of the proposed zoning amendments, as explained by Town Planner David Moriarty, is to control business growth and would result in more restrictive zoning in the area.

A zoning change was applied for recently by Robert Smith

Town Given Grant For 40 More Elderly Public Housing Units

A hearing was held in the Enfield Town Hall Jan. 14 by Subcommittee V of the Interim State Development Committee of the General Assembly concerning the Town's participation in programs administered by the State Department of Community Affairs, including the Community Development Action Plan (CDAP).

Stanley Bigos, Enfield's representative from the 45th District, who arranged the hearing here in Enfield — the first of its type — described its purpose as an effort by his legislative subcommittee to go out to the municipalities affected by the Community Development legislation to seek reactions, suggestions, and possible criticisms of its programs from Town officials and the citizens themselves. The programs under the community development legislation are administered by the Dept. of Community Affairs, which is headed by Commissioner LeRoy Jones, who was himself present at the hearings.

Rep. Bigos and other subcommittee members asked town officials and citizens to comment on such matters as the Town's involvement in the CDAP program, difficulties encountered in the various programs, suggestions for modifications to current legislation, and relationship with the Dept. of Community Affairs.

Speakers before the subcommittee included Mayor Frank Mancuso, Town Manager C. Samuel Kissinger, Joseph A. Rubin, Coordinator of the Enfield CDAP Program, Louis J. Ragno, Enfield Housing Authority Director, Mrs. Diana Donald of the town's consultant firm on the CDAP program, and Thomas Moore, former Planning & Zoning Commission chairman.

Mayor Frank Mancuso stressed the critical importance to Enfield of the funding of the Industrial and Business Development Program, through which Enfield is seeking to acquire a 500-acre industrial park. He urged that the Legislators and the Dept. of Community Affairs do all in their power to see that Enfield receives funds under the grant program for land acquisition, as planning and engineering for the Industrial Park is nearing completion.

The town's CDAP program was discussed with the legislators. Under this program, which was begun under a Dept. of

Town Needs State Funds To Establish Industrial Park

If new industry is to be attracted to Enfield, an industrial park must be established soon. Such a park, already proposed, would be located off lower Enfield Street east of 191 highway.

Mayor Frank Mancuso told a subcommittee of the State Interim Development Committee of the General Assembly last week, that funding the industrial and business development program planned by the town will include acquiring the 500-acre site at the above location.

Such an industrial park would help to remove the imbalance in the grand list of taxable property and stabilize the mounting tax rate, town officials believe.

Mancuso, in requesting funds for the land acquisition, said that planning and engineering for the proposed park is nearing completion.

Town Manager C. Samuel Kissinger also urged the legislators to make funds available. Kissinger pointed out that the CDAP program in Enfield is progressing satisfactorily and that relations between the town and the CDAP have been excellent.

The "Rock" Is Still Solid

By Art Landry

We traveled to the Paramount Theatre in Springfield Tuesday night to see the highly touted "Super Fight" between Rocky Marciano and Muhammad Ali. The first comment we heard on approaching the box office was, "Five dollars? I wouldn't pay that much to see any fight." This is what one fight fan said to his friend as they walked away from the box office.

At 8:30 the show started with some old films of various Marciano and Clay fights. These brought back many fond memories of "The Rock." He was shown at his prime as he defeated Archie Moore, Joe Louis, Jersey Joe Wolcott and a few others.

Ten o'clock was listed as the starting time for the computerized fight between Marciano and Clay. Marciano had actually gone into heavy training for this fight and lost 40 pounds of excess weight. He and Clay fought over 70 rounds of one minute duration in order to come up with the final edited film to be shown in 800 theatres across the country at the same time.

The filming was top secret and not many people knew of it until the press releases started to appear to tout the attraction. The action took place in Florida without a live audience; with only seconds and film crews present. Only about a half dozen people were aware of how the fight ended as the films were closely guarded and not released to the theatres until shortly before screening time. Local fight promoter Vito Tallarita, who staged the filming in Springfield, was showing a good deal of concern as fight time approached and the film had not yet appeared. It did arrive finally and we were ready for the big one.

The computer was fed information which described both fighters at the peaks of their careers with no regard to their age at the time of the actual filming. We really did not expect too much since we knew that both fighters were acting out the fight as the computer dictated it. We were very surprised to see a young looking Rocky actually appearing to slug it out with Clay. A few punches were obviously acted out, but for the most part it looked as though the men were really giving it all they had. It was much more realistic than we ever thought possible under the circumstances. It was filmed in living color and the one-minute sequences were spliced into three minute rounds.

Clay took the early lead and actually won five rounds to

Mayor Seeks Volunteer Drug Council Members

Drug pushers will have hard sledding in the Enfield area if the present plans of Mayor Frank Mancuso are realized. He has made the first three appointments to the Drug Advisory Council which was established by the Town Council at Monday's meeting.

The appointees are: Mrs. Henry C. Julian of 36 Ridge Rd., who is a nurse. Although Mrs. Julian is a fairly new resident in Enfield, her medical background and interest in the narcotics problem convinced the mayor she would be a valuable member of the new commission. Also appointed were Anthony Kula of 19 Best Road, who is the principal of a Suffield school; and Philip Blaney of Hamilton Court, who is in charge of school bus transportation in town. All three had called the mayor to offer assistance in the program.

Mayor Mancuso plans to make further appointments, especially among volunteers.

"I hope more people... will volunteer for the Council," he told the press. "We have to organize our own town program and cooperate with the Regional Task Force to wipe out this growing drug problem."

The Council's goals are to develop programs of public education toward a more informed understanding of the problem; cooperation between various parts of the community, organizations, public and private, the professions and governmental agencies so that all efforts will be directed in a straight line toward eventual solution of the drug problem in Enfield.

Mayor Mancuso plans the Council to be an "open end" group with as many and as varied persons involved as possible.

"All agencies," said the Mayor, "dealing in these problem areas (drugs, alcohol and mental health) will be asked to contribute to the drug control program in our town. No single individual effort will solve the problem. It will take all of us working together, teenagers as well as adults."

The mayor added, "We need a training program for police personnel in every phase of drugs, detection and where the outlets are."

The Enfield Council will work with the Regional Task Force, in company with other communities, as: Avon, Bloomfield, Manchester, South Windsor, Suffield, Windsor Locks and Vernon. Police chiefs in these towns, including Enfield, will accept any information from any area resident when it pertains to suspected sale of drugs, and may lead to the discovery and arrest of a drug pusher. The Regional Task Force intends to punish the pusher, the individual or individuals who sell drugs to teenagers.

In order to stamp out the narcotics problem, eliminate the pusher and save the young people from the tragedy of addiction, all police departments in the area must become involved and work in conjunction with each other, said the Mayor.

Mayor Mancuso extends an invitation to volunteers who would like to serve on the local Advisory Council and urges such persons to call him. He would like to see the new Council comprised entirely of volunteers.

If teenagers are informed that chemicals introduced into the blood cause lasting and dangerous effects on the body, they will have a potent weapon against drug addiction, believe the volunteers and others interested in the problem.

Enfield Enters Clean-up Contest

The headquarters of the 1969 National Clean-Up Contest has announced the arrival of the entry from Enfield, Connecticut.

Sponsored annually by the National Clean Up—Paint Up—Fix Up Bureau, the National Clean-Up Contest is the oldest and largest competition of its kind in the United States. Since 1929 it has been honoring and giving national recognition to the voluntary civic improvement and beautification efforts of cities and towns across the country.

Bureau Director R. H. Hackendahl said, "The outstanding achievements of Enfield and its civic minded people are to be heartily commended. Their work toward community betterment is dramatic proof of their dedicated service and acceptance of the civic improvement challenge."

The Contest entry is in scrapbook form to show graphically each aspect of the clean-up activities undertaken during 1969. It will be placed in competition with entries of other cities and towns of the same size based on the following categories representing the total number of people covered by the program: Under 25,000; Between 25,000 and 250,000; and Over 250,000.

A panel of seven judges will rate each scrapbook entry individually on the degree of achievement the community attained in relation to five major areas — (1) Community-wide Beautification, (2) Property Improvements, (3) Youth Activities, (4) Voluntary Participation, and (5) Miscellaneous Activities. Each area will be graded on a basis of 0 to 20, for a total of 100 points.

Judging will take place in late January, and the results will be announced at that time. In the final judging, the ten best entries in each population category are chosen to be trophy winners.

March Of Dimes Stages Fashion Show At G. Fox In Hartford

The March of Dimes fashion show, "March into Spring," will present the women of the Hartford area a preview of the newest fashions for spring, 1970. Representing length will be midi, mini, and MODified knee. Pants will continue to steal the spotlight for casual as well as evening wear. Smashing prints on pant and belted tunic outfits will vie for attention against wild kooky jumpsuits. Tunics with the "I can be a dress" look will be shown with pants, skirts and legs. Of course, scarves are still popular! Another point of emphasis will be those super knits that need no care and wear so well. They are the backbone of the working girl's wardrobe and a blessing to the traveler. They fit all occasions whether they be unusually elegant or more casually classic. The shapes of things to come are the free-forming shapes that relax. They replace anything multi-seamed, zippered or buttoned.

This lesson on how to be a downright devastating doll for Spring, 1970, will be taught at

GS Cookie Sale Starts Jan. 26th

The 1970 Girl Scout Cookie Sale campaign will be held from Jan. 26 to Feb. 1. Girl Scouts will be calling then to take orders for cookies which will be delivered between March 16 and

28. The annual cookie sale helps local Scouts and their programs and supports Girl Scout camps in the area.

Educational Advantages Forecast For Regional School System

"Program limitations imposed by existing buildings can be reduced and new program decisions can guide development of the expanded physical plant," according to educational program improvements forecast for a regional district school system. The forecast was made in a report presented to the East Granby-Suffield Regional School Study committee at a meeting on Jan. 14. The report was accepted by the committee as prepared by William Westervelt and Mrs. Adele Hackenberger, committee members, and the school superintendents of the two towns, Laroy Brown and Malcolm Evans.

"Construction and renovation of buildings and the opportunity to utilize the staff more effectively creates in itself an atmosphere of change and improvement," the report stated.

These advantages were listed in the report: "Sharing of specialized personnel can be improved; Administrative services for maintenance, transportation, purchasing, accounting and food services can be combined for efficiency. Instructional grouping practices can be improved to provide for individual differences. Curriculum development and supervision can be improved. It will be easier to attract and retain well-qualified teachers. Building grants will encourage renovation for program improvement. A district-wide guidance system can be developed and modern instructional resource centers can be instituted and maintained.

The most obvious change will occur at the high school level, according to the report, "where greater size of student body will permit a breadth and depth of curriculum impossible to achieve in the present high school buildings" in the two towns.

More specific programs can be provided for both the academically talented, including advanced placement classes, and for students whose education will end with high school, including expanded industrial arts, business education and vocational programs.

Drafts of educational specifications for the proposed elementary and middle schools in a regional system were accepted by the committee. A similar draft for the proposed regional high school had been accepted at a previous meeting. The drafts were prepared by the two school superintendents. They will be condensed to be included in the final report to be made to the state and both towns.

The report of professional appraisals of the schools by Thomas Kelly of Connecticut Appraising Consultants, Inc., was presented by committee member Thomas Coates, and was accepted.

The committee voted the capital contributions of each town including the following schools and land — Center, Seymour, and Junior-Senior High School in East Granby, and West Suffield, Spaulding, McAlister and Suffield High School in Suffield proportionate share of each town in a proposed regionalization.

Three policy recommendations were passed by the committee. The first one on Project Concern was amended, because the original wording was considered "too open-ended" by Coates. It was changed from "The committee recommends continued participation in Project Concern" to "The committee recommends the Regional Board give due consideration to Suffield's participation in Project Concern."

The other two recommendations were that the regional board recognize investments by school bus owners in both towns made in expectation of long-term service; and continued participation in the Cooperative Special Ancillary Services Center, East Granby and Suffield are two of the four towns now participating in the Center.

With the extreme cold weather that has plagued the northern Connecticut area so far this month, the Inquiring Photographer of the Enfield Press asked three women if they wore slacks instead of mini-skirts during the deep freezes.

Carol Wizowicz of Suffield, said, "I don't wear them too short but if it's real cold, I wear slacks."

Margo Kammerer of Montclair Drive, replied, "No, because they are in style."

Mrs. John Mooney of E. Longmeadow, answered, "No, I don't have to go out in the cold. I drive from my garage to where I'm going."

Judges Appointed

The contest theme this year is "The Disabled Veteran as a Manpower Source in My Community." The Rev. Paul J. Bartlewski, pastor of St. Adalbert's Church heads the local contest committee.

Donald Spencer, area chairman emphasized that the annual program is designed to promote the hiring of handicapped workers by employers in positions commensurate with their abilities.

"This year, the efforts will be primarily directed to assist returning Vietnam War veterans to find jobs and adjust to civilian life," chairman Spencer added.

Last year's winner of this area's contest, Kathleen Heintz of Windsor Locks High School, went on to win first place in the state-wide contest. She won a $500 cash award and an all-expense paid trip to Washington, D.C.

The contest has the approval of the National Association of Secondary School Principals and is endorsed strongly by President Nixon and Gov. Dempsey.

Yes, insists Mrs. Marjorie May of the Greater New York Safety Council, who also finds them graceless and unsanitary. Danger lurks inside and out for maxicoat wearers, according to Mrs. May, who cited the following possibilities: catching the hem in an escalator, stepping on the bottom and tripping while going up curbs and up stairs, catching high heels in the hem, having the person behind step on the dragging skirt.

"The current popularity of maxi-length garments is a fad, not a real fashion," insists the safety expert. "We believe women should be made aware of the accident potential of such clothing, but we certainly are not trying to act as fashion dictators."

For those who prefer style to safety, Mrs. May counsels instant lifting of the skirt when confronted with curb, stair, puddle, escalator or other hazard.

business general to permit a new car dealership operation on Hazard Avenue. A zoning change is sought to remove the present maximum restriction of four acres on property for another business in the Harvard Avenue area.

Still another matter to be treated at the meeting is the request by S. Leger Starr for approval of preliminary plans for a sub-division known as the Simon Road Homes. Starr plans to build about 133 new homes in the Simon Road location, if approval is granted.

The "Rock"

Marciano's three with four rounds declared even by the computer. Rocky was supposed to have sustained cuts on both eyes and his nose. Red makeup was added to his face as the cuts were supposed to get worse. His injuries reached the point where his seconds could not stop the flow of blood and he was in danger of losing on a technical knockout. This was quite true to his history as he did cut easily.

The Rock did knock Clay down three times with his solid hitting and the third time came in the 13th round when the computer declared Rocky the winner by a knockout. Clay was left hanging on the ropes and couldn't quite make it back to his feet at the count of 10.

The filming was excellent and the editing was superb. The action was so realistic that the theatre crowd reacted as they would have to a live fight. Marciano had his following and Clay had his. The ending was so dramatic that it brought down the house.

The final outcome, of course, was that Rocky Marciano was named the all time heavy-weight champion of the world. We were thoroughly impressed with the whole thing. The last comment we heard was, "That was worth every cent of five dollars and more." It was expressed by many and we have to agree.

Town Needs

Community Affairs grant in late 1968, a series of publications, containing proposals for a long-range, comprehensive development and planning program for the town, are now being completed and will be submitted to the Town Council, Citizens Advisory Committee and made public between now and the program's termination in Sept., 1970. Town Manager Kissinger urged that the legislature make funds available to the town in order to implement the proposals which result from the CDAP program.

It was pointed out that Enfield's CDAP program is progressing satisfactorily and that relationships with the Dept. of Community Affairs have been excellent. One problem that was cited was the difficulty in making the public fully aware of the complex CDAP program, and developing an effective citizen participation program. It was suggested that the legislation concerning CDAP be modified to clarify the role of citizen participation in the program.

During the meeting, Rep. Bigos announced that the Enfield Housing Authority had just been granted $580,000 from the Dept. of Community Affairs for the construction of an additional 40 units of public housing for the elderly.

A FORUM ABOUT MATURE WOMEN

By Elizabeth Stewart
Women's Medical News Service
Male Roses

As more and more men smell lovely, some develop rashes in the beard area.

A dermatologist, Dr. Ernst Epstein of the San Mateo (Calif.) Medical Clinic, says the two facts are definitely linked. Whatever the label — whether pre-shave lotion, after-shave lotion, all-purpose lotion or cologne — they all contain perfumes which bring out the rash in some allergic men, particularly after shaving has irritated and sensitized their skin.

Even men who swear they've sworn off shaving lotions on doctor's orders are suspect, Dr. Epstein says. One patient "observed" the ban by applying the pre-shave lotion to his electric razor instead of directly to his skin. Another stopped buying lotions, but continued to use a free sample!

Ex-Smokers Sleep Better

Heavy smokers sleep poorly. Ex-heavy smokers sleep better. This is revealed by research at the UCLA's sleep research facility by Drs. Anthony and Joyce Kales and T. L. Tan.

By studying the brain waves of eight chronic smokers, the researchers discovered that they rarely achieved deep sleep and they dreamed abnormally.

After giving up cigarettes, the one-time smokers fell asleep more quickly, slept better and stayed asleep longer. For the first few nights, some complained of nightmares, but these faded away within a short time. Achieving normal levels of deep sleep took longer.

Rubella Vaccine

Of the nation's 30 million women of childbearing age, an estimated 4.5 million lack a natural immunity to rubella, the ordinarily mild disease also called German measles that is frequently disastrous to unborn babies.

Although girls will be the primary recipients of a new anti-rubella vaccine, doctors will also be inoculating some of these 4.5 million susceptible women. But, as Medical World News reports, "They must also make certain that their patients are not pregnant nor will become pregnant for two months." A woman vaccinated and unaware that she is pregnant subjects her unborn child to the same terrible dangers as a woman contracting the disease.

Some doctors believe that absolute protection should be obtained by prescribing five months of oral contraceptives, for all post-pubertal girls scheduled to be immunized. The first birth control pill would be taken seven weeks before the injection.

Safari Planners Are Warned

On long winter nights, some people dream of thrilling African safaris — pith helmet on the head, white hunter to the fore and lions roaring in the bush.

For those growing numbers of adventurous Americans who translate these dreams into reality, mosquitoes and tsetse flies may prove the greatest dangers warns the National Communicable Disease Center.

The government center reports one death and three severe illnesses following two East African safaris last summer. A 42-year-old woman on a hunting party succumbed to sleeping sickness after she ignored several bites by tsetse flies. Her husband also fell ill, but recovered. Their son escaped unscathed.

On a photographic safari in East Africa, none of the 32 members protected himself with anti-malarial drugs. A 58-year-old man from Massachusetts developed malaria and may have suffered lasting damage to his kidneys. A similarly stricken 52-year-old woman from Rochester, N.Y., recovered.

Anyone traveling to an area where malaria is present, cautions the N.C.D.C., should take anti-malarial drug therapy.

Only A Pinprick

A single pinprick of blood can now yield as much medical information as an entire syringe.

At the moment, new "microchemical techniques" are used only for babies, whose blood supply is limited and precious, and only in certain pediatric centers. But Dr. Kaud Engel of Babies Hospital, who helped develop the microchemical technique in Denmark, says the technique may become routine for babies and may spread to adults within five years.

The conventional method of obtaining a blood sample involves tapping a vein in the elbow crease for a syringe. Arteries must be punctured for special tests. Using the microchemical technique, a foot or a hand is warmed, which increases the arterial blood flow. When sophisticated, miniaturized electronic equipment is used to analyze a pinprick of this blood, the results are as valid as for a large quantity of blood, Dr. Engel says.

Board Authorizes McCracken To Settle Negro Bus Contract

At Monday night's Board of Education meeting, School Supt. Alan McCracken was authorized to complete financial settlement of the George Negro bus contract which was cancelled in December on breach of contract charges.

McCracken was to meet with Negro Jan. 13 at Mabelle B. Avery School to adjust November and December bills. This entailed subtracting the cost which would have been incurred from January to June 1970, had the school retained the contract. McCracken said Town Council J. Donald Shannon did not advocate withholding funds because of Negro's negligence. Shannon advised that legal procedures would be too long and costly. McCracken reported Shannon has been asked to draw up the legal release protecting the board.

It was also noted in the superintendent's report that Negro intends to fulfill his contract for the bus service for both the vocational students and retarded children to June 1970.

The Transportation Committee, headed by Robert Millerick, was given a vote of thanks for their transition job as the bus system changed from a contract operation to a temporary leasing set-up.

While Board Member Carl Anderson, also second selectman, felt the vote of thanks was in order, he also felt the rest of the board should have been notified before any transportation agreement was made on bus driver salaries.

Specifically, Anderson disagreed with the committee's attempt to minimize absenteeism by giving a bonus. He said it is not unreasonable to expect a regular five-day-a-week work plan without bonuses. He reiterated the board should have been informed before this was carried out.

With regard to actions without informing the rest of the board, Anderson said "If you allow exception here it will permit other exceptions."

Anderson also questioned the absence of an overage charge from the bus contract with the Everett P. Hayes & Sons Co.

For example: if buses are in need of repair, says Anderson, the school should not be expected to pay for overage incurred to return the vehicle. Overage refers to extra mileage over and above regular school runs. The Transportation Committee was asked to study this commission.

The Transportation Committee was also asked to study a suggestion from bus driver, Bessie Bates, who asked if more bus turnabouts could be considered for safety sake. Some buses are backing up into Rt. 190.

When Degree Days Pile UP...

Winter, besides being a happy time for outdoor enthusiasts, is also the coldest season of the year. So when the temperature drops sharply and icy winds chill you to the bone, you know you are in degree day weather.

Degree days are simply a standard for measuring cold weather. They are figured from a base temperature of 65 F. To obtain the degree day count for any given 24-hour period, just subtract the average outdoor temperature from 65. You can add up these measurements for a week, a month, or the entire winter season to get a total accumulation.

During the degree day season, you use more CL&P service, to heat your home, cook, dry your clothes and in general, keep you comfortable.

So, while the number of degree days increases, so does the value you get from your CL&P service.

H-S Selected To Develop and Build Guidance System

The McDonnell Douglas Astronautics Company has selected Hamilton Standard to develop and build a strap-down inertial guidance system for the Delta launch vehicle, it was announced today.

The advanced system will replace the present radio controlled guidance unit in a continuing program by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and McDonnell Douglas to increase the launch and payload capabilities of Delta. The three-stage rocket has been NASA's workhorse in launching research, weather and communications satellites since 1960.

"Our selection to provide the Delta inertial guidance system firmly establishes Hamilton Standard in the field of advanced guidance and navigation equipment for space and aircraft applications," Lawrence R. Manoni Jr., manager of the United Aircraft division's System Center, said today. The System Center also supplies the strap-down inertial measuring unit for the Lunar Module spacecraft's abort guidance system.

The new Delta guidance system will have its inertial measuring unit directly attached, or strapped down, to the vehicle itself. It will employ a guidance computer to mathematically establish a fixed reference from which vehicle attitude and velocity can be measured, thus eliminating the gimbals which conventional inertial guidance systems use as stable platforms for guidance sensors.

In addition to improving the launch and orbital performance of the Delta rocket, the strap-down guidance system will be simpler, lighter and more economical to make and maintain than a gimbaled system. Highly accurate and reliable, the Hamilton Standard guidance system will be capable of operating a minimum of 90 days without recalibration of its gyroscope and accelerometer sensors and will have a mean time between failure rate of 4,581 hours.

A contract for the development and production of an initial 13 strap-down guidance systems is presently being negotiated by Hamilton Standard and McDonnell Douglas Astronautics' Western Division of Santa Monica, Calif. The firm builds the Delta launch vehicle for NASA's Goddard Space Flight Center, Greenbelt, Md.

The strap-down guidance system will guide Delta on a predetermined path and supply the steering and staging commands used to accurately inject the launch vehicle into an orbital trajectory. The strap-down inertial measuring unit, a modified version of the LM moon-landing craft's unit, will have three gyroscopes for sensing vehicle attitude, three accelerometers for sensing velocity and their associated electronics.

The general-purpose guidance computer will be supplied by Teledyne Systems Co. as a subcontractor to Hamilton Standard. Teledyne has developed the computer according to design specifications established by NASA's Lewis Research Center with the assistance of Hamilton Standard under a 1966 design study contract.

The guidance system's inertial measuring unit and guidance computer combined will weigh 73 pounds and fit in a volume of one and a half feet. Hamilton Standard will deliver the first production system early in 1971. Launch of the first Delta using the advanced system is planned for the summer of that year.

Hamrick Retires From CL & P Co.

A. Winfred Hamrick, of Enfield, has retired from the Connecticut Light and Power Co. after more than 39 years of service with the utility.

Hamrick joined CL&P in 1931 in Waterbury, after receiving a bachelor of science degree in electrical engineering from No. Carolina State College. He held various posts in the engineering department until being named line clearance supervisor in 1955.

No Bridge To Cross — On Foot

There are two bridges crossing the Connecticut River between Enfield and Suffield. One is closed to vehicular traffic but both are supposed to be open to pedestrian traffic. However, to walk across the old bridge in the north of town is difficult. Although the Enfield end of the bridge has been plowed to allow easy walking, the Suffield end has not, the narrow path at that end having been made by pedestrians as shown in the upper photo. To walk the new bridge in the lower photo is extremely hazardous as pedestrians have to use the roadway because the walk itself has been used as a snow depository by the snowplows. Even if the walk were not filled with snow, it would be hazardous to get to it because there never has been approaches built to the walk on either side of the bridge.

Letter Home...

By Congressman Tom Meskill

Soon the President will be presented with a Task Force report expected to recommend sending the oil import quota system to the graveyard. Reports indicate that the Cabinet Task Force on Oil Import Control, established by President Nixon to study U.S. oil policy and to issue recommendations for Presidential consideration, has drafted a plan to aid consumers of oil products by switching from the import quota system to a tariff program. However, until the Task Force presents its final recommendations to the President, the details of the new program cannot be definitely known.

The Oil Import Control program was begun during the Eisenhower Administration as a voluntary attempt to curb the entry of foreign oil into the United States. The program was designed to bolster the domestic oil industry and ensure that the United States developed sufficient oil reserve to meet national security requirements. The voluntary controls, which were proposed following the "Suez crisis" of 1956, proved ineffective and a mandatory import control program was ordered into effect in 1959. The mandatory controls restrict imports to 12.2 per cent of domestic production.

During the intervening years, the system has become riddled with special exceptions. The overall effect, however, has been higher gasoline and fuel oil prices for consumers.

Foreign oil sells at $2 a barrel on the world market while domestic producers collect $3.50 a barrel. Estimates are that consumers pay as much as $7 billion a year higher prices for gasoline, heating oil and other petroleum products.

New England consumers are the hardest hit of all. It is this region which pays the highest home heating oil prices in the country. Not only has this region suffered price discrimination, but fuel oil supplies during recent winters have been tight and in some areas suppliers have run out of oil. The reason for this is that in the past, the policy has been to award import quotas of foreign oil to refiners. New England has no refinery. It has no pipeline serving its needs, nor does it have its own supply of oil. This adds up to high prices since oil must be shipped long distances into the area.

I have pressed for the gradual elimination of the Oil Import Control program and for the construction of an oil refinery at Machiasport, Maine, to bring New England home heating oil prices into line with those of the rest of the nation.

I am encouraged by reports that the Cabinet Task Force on Oil Import Controls is expected to recommend an end to the mandatory import quota system. Although the switch to a preferential tariff system raises a number of questions, I believe that it is a change in the right direction. Some predict that such a change, if approved by the President, would lower the cost of gasoline up to three cents a gallon and fuel for home heating and industry by perhaps 5 per cent.

It has been reported that under the proposed system, tariff levels would be set close to the domestic price and lowered gradually over three years. Heeding the national security arguments of the oil industry, the Task Force is said to have proposed that preferential tariffs be accorded to Latin American producers where supplies are less likely to be affected by international tensions. The Middle East, where political tensions are high and the risk of an oil cut-off ever-present, would pay the highest tariffs.

Signs Proclamation

Mayor Frank Mancuso signs the proclamation proclaiming January as March of Dimes month. With him are Mrs. Edward McGowan, local MOD chairman and Mrs. Ralph Ledoux, chairman of the Enfield Association for Retarded Children.

Whether a switch to such a tariff system will truly benefit consumers remains to be seen, however. First of all, it depends on the level of the tariffs and how they are administered in the face of changing conditions. Too high a tariff will result in no significant benefit to anyone. The procedure used for arriving at the proper tariff, therefore, will be very important.

The economics of the domestic refining industry encourage the production of gasoline, jet fuel and diesel oil at the expense of producing home heating oil. For New England, this is a serious problem since it is the heaviest user of home heating oil. Unless the tariff is structured to create an incentive for the production of heating oil, there is little chance that adequate supplies of this product will be manufactured domestically at lower prices to supply the hungry New England market. A lower tariff on foreign sources of home heating oil than on crude oil might be the solution.

Another possibility, and one which I hope the President will consider before making a final pronouncement on U.S. oil policy, is to allow free access to all foreign sources of petroleum with the provision that any refiner, who intends to import from foreign sources in the Eastern Hemisphere, be required to maintain a national security inventory. This inventory would be established on the basis of the nation's national security needs. This should answer national security arguments, result in the minimum degree of interference with the free market system consistent with national security requirements, and provide the consumer with oil at the lowest possible cost.

In any event, either one of these alternatives appears to represent an improvement over the mandatory control program. Whatever action is taken regarding the import quotas, I intend to continue to press for the construction of an oil refinery for New England at Machiasport, Maine. Even if the import quota system is abolished, New England needs a refinery of its own to ensure an adequate supply of fuel oil.

It is expected that the recommendations of the Cabinet Task Force will be sent to the President in late January or early February. I hope that the President will give these recommendations careful consideration. The discrimination against New England must end.
