State Consumer Protection Head At Home Show Opening

Mrs. Barbara Dunn, who heads the state Department of Consumer Protection, and Mayor Frank Mancuso, will share the ribbon-cutting honors opening the three-day 7th annual Greater Enfield Home Show at Enfield High School.

Vella and John Morrison; members of the Town Council; Greater Enfield Chamber of Commerce President Francis A. Burke Jr.; the show's general chairman, Bob Starr and his staff; directors of the CofC; entertainment committee chairman Dexter S. Burnham; and other invited guests.

It will be Mrs. Dunn's first appearance at the home show. Her department is the watchdog on consumer products and conditions under which they are sold, assuring purchasers that what they buy meet regulations laid down by her department. She has made numerous appearances on radio and television, some in question-answer shows, and has personally gone into the field to inspect merchandising outlets and check out complaints.

The show will be open to the public March 23 from 6-10 p.m.; Saturday from 1-10 p.m.; and Sunday from 12:30 to 5 p.m., during which there will be a constant round of entertainment, prizes and give-aways, while those attending browse among the 60 booths which will display products to make family living more attractive and comfortable. Among the entertainers will be Sam Collura, 18 Abby Ave., Enfield. He is a one-man band, playing the banjo, horn, harmonica, bass drum and cymbal, all at the same time.

Another feature will be the return appearance of the Britmore Dixieland Band, led by Wayne Moore of Enfield, which proved a popular attraction last year with its bouncy, toe-tapping music. The band will make appearances Friday and Saturday nights from 6-10; while Collura will be heard Friday night and Sunday afternoon.

Johnnie Mac, also of Enfield, a nationally known guitarist, composer and recording artist, will contribute to the enjoyment of those who visit the show. His country music and classics have been issued by Decca records, and have been heard in his personal coast-to-coast appearances. Johnnie will be a Saturday feature, from 1-5 p.m.

League Makes Complaint

The Ecology League has become gravely concerned over the new procedures adopted by the Connecticut State Legislature. Under these procedures the legislative committees have been holding hearings on bills that have not been available for study and consideration by the public and public-interest groups who are expected to comment on these bills at the hearings.

Because the league feels that good government is not well served by flying blind, the Ecology League opposes on principal all proposed legislation brought to a legislative hearing before the bills have been publicly distributed with enough lead time to permit careful study and rational consideration.

Alfano Scores Action Of General Assembly

Senate Minority Leader Charles T. Alfano said the General Assembly has not given the public a very heartening performance during the first half of its 1973 session.

"Governor Meskill's Republicans have complete legislative control for the first time in 17 years," Alfano said. "When their leadership assumed the helm in January, they told us they were going to open up the legislative process and make government more efficient.

"Thus far, they have succeeded only in stifling the legislative process to the point where, after two months, we have yet to act on a major issue."

The Senate leader said a new administration - imposed procedure for introducing bills is partially to blame for the Assembly's lack of action.

The Senate leader says he sees a major decline in the quality of the government's responsiveness to the needs of the public during the first half of the Assembly session.

"The administration has retarded the legislative process by having its Republican-controlled committees 'box' and attempt to kill our bill proposals. We have been forced to petition nearly all our legislation out of these committees just to win a shot at a public hearing."

Alfano said the Republican approach to government "now that they have the power" is resulting in a loss of public confidence.

"The Governor continues to refuse to recognize the crisis in mass transit," he added. "His abdication of responsibility during the bus strike has been appalling."

"He is attempting to shift extra tax loads onto consumers and homeowners while touting his so-called tax reform when what he is really doing is building a huge surplus at our expense so he looks good at election time."

"State hospitals and mental institutions are in grave danger of losing their accreditation. The University of Connecticut can't attract a new president. Our road maintenance program has been shifted into reverse."

"If the General Assembly's Republican leadership does not find the courage to vote its convictions instead of the Governor's political desires, the outlook for restoring quality to state government during the second half of this session will not be bright," Alfano said.

Post 80 Holds Anniversary

Commander Nathan Heferman and Jr. Vice Commander Orville Hecke head the committee that has planned the fifty-third birthday dinner of Tanguay-Magill, Post 80, American Legion to be held this Sunday at the legion home. Pfannenstiel Made New Youth Worker

The youth group meetings that have been held at Noah Webster School since the Barn closed are over and small planning groups of youth and parents are being held in various homes.

A survey of Whitacres as to adult feelings on the reopening of the center has resulted, so far, in 85 returns, of which only one person was opposed. Many people offered to help if the center was reopened and these people are being contacted.

As soon as the doors, windows, and electrical wiring is completed, the center will be open to the youth, who, with adult help, will renovate and repair the center.

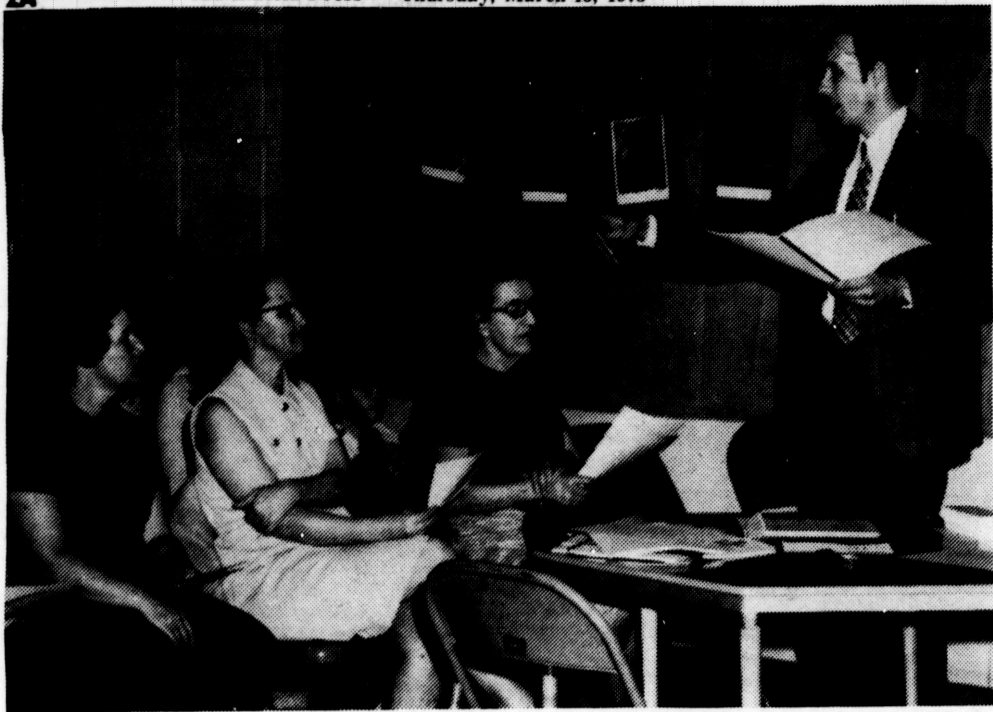

Tony Pfannenstiel of 100 Brook St., Willimantic, age 24, was hired as the new youth worker.

Key 73 Program

Rev. Richard Purchase instructs group of women on procedure for religious census by telephone planned for Enfield from March 19 through 28 at the Enfield Congregational Church, where a bank of phones will be installed for the census.

Telephone Religious Census For Enfield To Begin Next Monday

Final arrangements are being made for the religious census of Enfield by phone, which will begin next Mon., March 19, and continue through March 28. This planning is being done by the Ecumenical Committee for Key '73 formed by representatives of Catholic and Protestant Churches in Enfield.

A new sub-committee has been named under the chairmanship of the Rev. Kenneth Schwengel of the Lutheran Church of Our Redeemer. This committee, the Tabulation and Distribution Committee, is responsible for having the completed cards properly tabulated and then distributed to the churches. (Key sort punch cards will be used to tabulate the information gained from the census.) Other sub-committees are — Preparation, Arrangements, Publicity, and Home Visitation.

Mrs. William O'Neill, Chairman of the Arrangements Committee, has been responsible for the recruitment and scheduling of around 200 persons, from 15 local churches, who have volunteered their time to do the telephoning and related jobs, such as hostesses and supervisors. Training sessions for these volunteers were held earlier this week at the site of the census headquarters — the Enfield Congregational Church. A bank of nine phones has been installed at this church for the duration of the census.

The purpose of the census was explained to census takers at the training sessions by census co-ordinator, Rev. Richard Purchase of the American Baptist Church. According to Rev. Purchase, the changing characteristics of a growing town like Enfield affect the programs and services offered by the churches, and the rapid turnover in population is also a factor in the churches' planning process. The census will reveal how long families have resided in town and the percentage of families moving each year to Enfield. Questions in the census will cover general subjects relating to length of residence in Enfield, occupation, number of children in the family, and local church preference.

Rev. Purchase also explained that similar censuses have been taken in Ellington, Rockville, Vernon, Manchester, East Hartford, Rocky Hill, Newington, Branford, and other area towns. A census is being planned in Suffield for later this year.

Information gained from the census will provide a general profile of the town, while the individual census cards will be given to the parish church specified by the person called. The cards will be used for no other purpose.

Residents may expect a call in relation to the census between 10 a.m. and 9 p.m. from March 19 through 28, and are asked to cooperate in furnishing information to the callers.

Enfield Soldier Faces Army Court-Martial

S. Sgt. John D. Layton of Enfield, will face a general court-martial on charges related to the death of a recruit who collapsed and died during a five-mile hike last January, it was announced by a spokesman at Fort Dix, N. J.

The decision to hold the court-martial was reached following a pretrial investigation concerning the death of Pvt. John Ostergren of Norwood, Mass.

Ostergren was one of a platoon of recruits on a five-mile march to a rifle range Jan. 15 when he began falling behind and collapsed of an apparent heart attack.

If convicted of the maltreatment charge, Layton could receive a dishonorable discharge, forfeit all pay and allowances and be imprisoned for a maximum of one year.

Layton, 34, has been in the Army 12 years including a tour of duty in Vietnam. He is married and has three children.

The Army said the date for Layton's court-martial has not been set but that the witnesses, now graduated from basic training, are remaining on "casual duty" at Fort Dix until the hearings end. The witnesses allege that Ostergren was abused and kicked after failing to keep pace with the others.

An investigation into the incident was launched by Penn. Congressman Edwin Eshleman who read a letter in his hometown newspaper from recruit Pvt. John Kreider of Lancaster, Pa., one of those on the march.

organizations to participate in a hearing next Monday on his bill providing for a commission to recommend public policy in regulating cable TV.

The hearing will be held at the State Capitol at 1:30 p.m. by the Governmental Administration and Policy Committee.

Rep. Vella said he proposed the commission in response to complaints that the state has not made adequate provision for assuring that the public will be well served by CATV. Forty million dollars is expected to be spent on CATV facilities in the next three years, he said.

The Vella bill calls for a one-year study by a 15-member commission comprising public-interest representatives and persons with expertise in various areas of telecommunications.

The commission would review present standards for granting CATV franchises and propose ways "to assure maximum public participation and to protect the public interest," Vella said.

It would also examine the state's regulatory role in the light of present and proposed rules of the Federal Communications Commission, and would propose standards for determining whether the quantity and quality of public-interest programming is acceptable.

Standards for determining installation and monthly charges would also be proposed by the commission under the Vella proposal. The Governor would appoint eight commission members and the House speaker and Senate president pro tem would each name three. The chairman of the Public Utilities Commission, which now oversees CATV, would also be a member.

Next Week Is National Poison Prevention Week

The third week of March is observed as National Poison Prevention Week. For 1973, March 18-24, will be the period when we are to be reminded of the need to develop those safety habits that will prevent accidental poisoning in our homes during every week of the year.

Most poisoning incidents in and around the home involve youngsters from one through four years of age. The normal child in this age group is curious about anything he can pick up and examine. He will often check it out by putting the object or substance into his mouth. It may not taste good; if so, the toddler may swallow it rather than spit it out in order to get it out of his mouth quickly. The consequences may be serious for the child and worrisome for the parents.

In advising parents on poison-proofing their homes, we always come back to the need for preventing these accidents. The most effective way to prevent poisoning in children is to keep the offending products — medicines, cleaning compounds, pesticides, hobby chemicals, or whatever — out of the reach of children. The parent can usually determine, from his own knowledge or from label warnings, which items can poison a child. These should be locked up so the children cannot get at them at any time. Don't forget the toxic chemicals in the basement or garage. This may be even more harmful than anything in the house itself. Another source of danger to children is often overlooked. This is a woman's handbag, which may contain potent medications. The toddler loves to explore the contents of these bags.

Many an adult has taken a bottle of medicine from the cabinet in the bathroom and swallowed some of its contents before he realized that he had the wrong bottle. Within the past few weeks, a man drank an ounce of a medicated skin lotion that he mistook for a liquid antacid because he failed to put on his glasses when got out of bed at 2:30 a.m. Luckily, he only developed a mild stomach upset, but he might have been less fortunate if he had swallowed a disinfectant or potent liniment that some people keep in their medicine cabinets.

Many persons who have emotional problems that could otherwise prove disabling, can control them with medications prescribed by their physicians. To make sure that the doctor's instructions are carefully followed, another member of the family should have control of such drugs and give them to the patient as necessary. This is especially important if the latter is subject to moods of depression.

Craft Show At Enfield Square

The Enfield Square shopping center will be the scene for the American Crafts Exposition's presentation of "Craftorama" March 14-17, from 10 a.m. to 9:30 p.m.

From clock sculpture and puppetmaking to silvercraft and leatherwork, the American Crafts Exposition is drawing guild craftsmen from all over the East to participate in this Craftorama at the Square.

"When I go to craft shows myself, I usually have to go to Vermont or New Hampshire. Connecticut has not usually been too big on them, so the members of the craft guilds were very enthusiastic about doing the show at Enfield Square," explained Rudy Kowalczyk, organizer of Craftorama. Kowalczyk, the owner of a gift store in Farmington, attributes his interest in this type of show through his own business.

The craftsmen themselves represent a variety of backgrounds and interests. Some hold master's degrees and PH.D.'s in various fields. Many are "free people" traveling from craft fairs throughout the country earning their living.

Two of the participants in this four day, craft show are from Farmington. Bernice Grossi and Ruth Johansen create a variety of decorative household items including dried flowers and grape clusters on shingles, country painting on boards, shell roses, and wall hangings.

The show, open free of charge to the public, will feature the work of craftsmen from Connecticut, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Pennsylvania, and New York.

This professional Arts and Crafts Show will delight all ages. The public is invited to browse and talk with the artists and purchase works of art.

Let 'Em Eat Cheese

The rise in food prices is one of the most critical problems facing the United States of America, but recent dialogue on the subject in Washington unfortunately has taken a comic opera turn.

There was, for example, the wild thrust by Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz the other day. Mr. Butz insisted even before the figures were published that the press would distort figures showing an unusually high rise in the price of food during January by multiplying the monthly figure by 12 to get an inordinately high annual total. Under pressure, Washington spokesmen were forced to admit ruefully the following day that they themselves sometimes extrapolate figures they consider favorable for 12-month totals.

In much the same category as Mr. Butz' outburst was the Marie Antoinette-like suggestion by Federal Reserve Board Chairman Arthur Burns that if housewives are outraged about the high prices of meat "let them eat cheese" one day a week. It might save a little on the food budget, but eating cheese is hardly the cure for inflation at the marketplace. On still another front George Meany, president of the AFL-CIO, advocated strict government controls of food prices, down to raw agricultural products. Ironically, labor opposes wage and price controls generally — and the history of controls on food products is one of black marketeering and profiteering.

The widespread concern over the price of food is well taken. What the housewife pays at the marketplace has a direct relationship to the success or the failure of Phase III economic controls, the size of the wage contracts that will be negotiated by more than 5 million American workers in 1973 — and perhaps even on our relations with the Soviet Union and Communist China whose purchases of American food have an effect on its prices.

The Administration has taken some positive steps to curb rising grocery prices. It has eliminated export subsidies, permitted more imports of meat and released idled land for farming. Unfortunately, these measures take time to become effective.

On a longer range scale, the Administration also is on solid ground. It is moving to reduce the federal tinkering with the economics of farming and food prices through such things as withdrawing from the direct subsidy and land management programs, and by refusing to spend money on outdated farm agencies and functions. If the President succeeds in these efforts, the United States will have taken a large step toward more competition in the marketplace — the surest formula known for maintaining quality and lowering prices.

If the housewife wants to give the Administration support, after she complains to her local store about the price of food, she might write to her congressman, suggesting that she is fed up with paying twice for the high price of food — once at the grocery counter and again when she pays taxes for farm subsidies.

Rep. Grasso Introduces News Protection Bill

U. S. Representative Ella Grasso (D-6th Dist.) has introduced a bill, to be known as the "Newspersons' Information and Source Protection Act," which is designed to both protect newsmen and their sources, and "better insure that an individual's rights as a journalist do not conflict with his or her duties and obligations as a citizen."

Mrs. Grasso said the bill overcomes the major hurdle in the development of such legislation which is reconciling the "freedom of the press with the legitimate interests of the State."

The legislation would protect a newsmen from being forced to reveal information or the source of information to Federal grand juries, executive agencies or commissions, and the Congress and its committees.

In addition, the bill would establish a procedure to allow an individual seeking disclosure of information or sources of information from the media to petition for waiver of the newsmen's privilege in certain trials before a Federal court involving a crime against person, espionage or an established breach of national security. In district court, the petitioner must specify the information sought, indicate its relevance to the central issue of the trial, and demonstrate that attempts have been made to gain the information by alternative means. If all the criteria have been met, the judge may waive the privilege.

In a statement prepared for the House floor, Mrs. Grasso said that the nation has witnessed in the recent past "an ever increasing, almost systematic attempt by government to intimidate, belittle, and even suppress both the printed and electronic media." She said the 1972 Supreme Court decision, coupled with similar rulings by lower courts, has created "a foreboding atmosphere" when it comes to Americans' right to the free flow of news. "Adequate protection of a newsmen's opportunities to gather information is essential to enable the reporter to fulfill his or her public trust and responsibilities freely, fully and without fear of government intimidations."

Mrs. Grasso said her legislation does not imply that the press is above reproach. She said that enactment of an absolute newsmen's privilege bill, one which would prohibit accessibility to a newsmen's confidential information under any circumstances, would leave "unanswered vital questions involving the protection of society and national security. However, meritorious it may at first viewing appear, an absolute bill would leave unreconciled the relationship of the first amendment right of a free press with the right of a fair trial and the right of the State to 'establish Justice, insure domestic Tranquility, and provide for the common defense.' A qualified newsmen's privilege bill may better insure that an individual's rights as a journalist do not conflict with his or her duties and obligations as a citizen."

Mrs. Grasso said she regrets that this type of legislation is needed in this country. However, she said it has become necessary to protect the press from unnecessary and unwarranted interference by government. "The historic and adversary relationship between government and the press is essential if we are to have responsive, responsible government. Both government and the media have not only survived these tilts; both have clearly benefited from the recurring experience."

Girls Basketball Tourney Finals

The Four-Town Girl's Basketball Tournament will come to an end Sunday afternoon in the Enfield High School gym. It will be Enfield vs. Tolland in the Midget Division and Enfield vs. Stafford in the Junior Division.

The Tolland Midget team made it to the finals with a very convincing win over the Stafford Midgets. High scorers for the Tolland Midgets were Diane Bane with 16 pts. and Karen Toppi with 12. The Enfield Midget team qualified for the finals by defeating the Ellington Midgets. High scorers for the Enfield Midgets were Mary Block with 8 pts. and Lauren Salva with 6.

In the Junior Division, the Stafford girls were victorious over the Tolland girls by 8 points with Lori Lorenzet and Kim Mordasky each scoring 11 points. The Enfield Juniors, playing with a balanced attack, had five different girls scoring as they upended the Ellington Juniors by 7 points. Scoring for the Enfield Juniors were Elise Keller, Sue Evans, Cindy Turcotte, Lynn Edmonds, and Ann Bottomley.

Action will begin at 12:30 p.m. with two consolation games to be played before the championship games. In the first consolation game, the Stafford and Ellington Midgets will meet and the second consolation game will have the Tolland and Ellington Juniors playing.

There will be no charge for admission to the games and all are welcome to attend.

The Enfield Parent's Sports Association will meet April 3 at 7:30 p.m. in the All-purpose room at the Central Library on Middle Rd. Action will be taken on a proposed by-laws change concerning two additional board members for the Association's Board of Directors. All members are urged to attend.

The Medical Iceberg Examined!

By DR. ARMANDA A. FUSCO
(Part III)

Last week's column examined milk allergies, lead level and blue-blindness as factors which can significantly affect learning, but this is only the tip of the medical iceberg.

Narcolepsy — a constant state of drowsiness or tiredness — is yet another medical problem to be added to the list.

In one group of children having school difficulty, who were all above average in intelligence and had no known sensory impairments, eighty percent were found to have "unequivocal" narcolepsy and another ten-percent probable. The research study concludes with the fact that there is "widespread disinterest in or rejection of the narcolepsy problem by the medical profession." I ask, under these conditions, how many children with learning problems are diagnosed for narcolepsy?

The BAD syndrome is not meant to mean a "bad" boy, but rather one who is Blond, Allergic and Dyslexic (a term used to describe a non-reader with no identifiable cause). Dr. Wunderlich, who coined the phrase, also states that these children usually have hearing problems as well.

Interestingly, it leads to hearing problems in the lower frequencies which means that a child will hear male (deep) voices more poorly than female (high) voices. He is also likely to hear vowels (low frequency) more poorly than consonants (higher frequencies).

Ordinary medical examinations will not pick up one possible cause which is swollen adenoids (allergies can also cause the problem). Adenoids cannot be seen with typical medical procedures because the soft palate hides them. I ask them, how many children having school problems are examined for the BAD syndrome, swollen adenoids, etc.?

Oh, there is a lot more to this medical iceberg which seems to be hidden below the surface and, thereby, is missed by too many. One reason for the problem is because the available information is found in bits and pieces in a variety of written materials, and also because the language used to explain the research is usually too complicated to understand.

Hypoglycemia — a deficiency of sugar in the blood — is one such example. It is considered to be somewhat of a real rarity. However, its cause is perhaps not so rare. Diabetogenic hyperinsulinism (D.H.) seems to be the culprit and it is estimated that one-third of the population is susceptible to it. When individuals with D.H. take in sugar, have excessive physical activity, prolonged delays between feedings, or any combination thereof, hypoglycemic attacks can result.

It is with this condition that explains for the first time onsome rational, objective and logical basis why far more boys are afflicted with learning and reading problems than girls. The androgens — a hormone that stimulates male characteristics — is a D.H. factor predominant in the males. Thus, male non-learners are medical problems first rather than educational-remedial problems. I ask, however, how many children are diagnosed for D.H.?

Several studies are in process concerning the problem of sugar and there seems to be some consensus that our problem is increased today because of the massive amount of sugar taken in by children.

What must be realized is that when many of these medical problems go unrecognized and, therefore, untreated, secondary complications result which then add to the problems. Some secondary factors include vascular headaches, cerebral dysrhythmias (disturbance of brain rhythm), obesity, overt diabetes mellitus, amphetamine abuse, and psychologic trauma resulting from failure and misdiagnosis to mention just a few.

Complicated, isn't it? But it all tells a very vivid and profound story which is clear. Children with learning problems have medical problems which have gone undiagnosed; and, it is for this reason, more than any other, that remedial programs in schools have limited success with the vast majority of children with learning disabilities of all kinds.

The important question now is whether these children can be successfully treated medically. The answer is a very positive and emphatic, "yes."

Part IV next week will look at the Medical Prescription for Learning Problems.

Be Careful, You'll Bruise The Gin

The Bank of America sent me copy of a survey it had made on the packing methods, habits and idiosyncrasies of various celebrities, past and present. The thing has been buried under a pile of other material on my desk and I'm glad it has been unearthed.

If it hasn't, I'd never know that W. C. Fields always carried two pieces of luggage. The second was to replace the first in case of breakage. His suitcases were always marked "Handle with Care."

According to the story, Fields usually counselled against travel, claiming that if you "stay home with a bottle it will take you anywhere." He also advised travelers: "Pack gently and carry carefully!"

Quoting Fields' son, the story says W.C.'s suitcase always included three bottles of Gordon's Gin, three bottles of vermouth, a jigger and a shaker, mixing spoon and aspirin (usually for the porter). Always very meticulous, Mr. Fields never forgot his toothbrush, which he found useful for removing any foreign matter from an olive.

The ingredients listed above certainly don't help to create the image of a meticulous drinker. Who ever heard of a martini made of half vermouth and half gin? Fields must be spinning in his grave at such a list, for he was a man who took his drinking very seriously.

There are some people who make a martini by pouring the gin into the mixer and waving a vermouth bottle cork over it. It gives it just the proper flavor, they feel, without overpowering the gin.

I watched a fellow on a tv play pour the vermouth over the ice, pour it out and then add the gin. There is no sense in going overboard.

Actually, no two people make a martini the same way. For such a simple drink, everyone has his own theory. The basic recipe for this not so exotic drink is one part dry vermouth, two parts gin. A dry martini, the old books instruct, is one part vermouth, three parts gin. And you serve both with an olive.

Lou Edman Describes

Now, the purists will have none of this. Serve a dry martini with an onion or two, and it becomes a Gibson. Or you can order your martini with a twist of lemon peel instead of the olive. This is supposed to give a subtle taste change. Some imbibers like their martinis or Gibsons "straight up," meaning it is stirred with ice and the result is poured through a strainer into a cocktail glass.

Others order their drinks "on the rocks," which means they get stirred martinis or Gibsons over ice in their glasses.

The worst thing that can be done to a martini is shake it. You never, no never, shake a martini, because it is supposed to bruise the gin. And who wants a black-and-blue martini?

One restaurant owner I knew used to come over to your table when you ordered a martini and with a flourish, take a small bottle and eyedropper out of his vest. He'd ceremoniously unscrew the dropper from the bottle and put three drops of golden liquid into the cocktail.

"Try that!" he'd say.

"Tastes great," you'd reply, whether it did or not. "What is it?"

"Scotch," he'd tell you. "Makes a martini perfect."

So here was another theory, mixing Scotch and gin, a horrible thought. But do you know, it did add something to the drink, like a taste of Scotch.

In the interest of accuracy, I've dug up a volume from my extensive library entitled "The Calvert Party Encyclopedia." Don't ask me where it came from, but it's dated 1964. Under a chapter headed "Gin" is listed the following:

"100 per cent Dry Martini: 2 oz. gin, 1/2 oz. dry vermouth."

The brand of vermouth I favor is marked "Double Dry." Do you suppose I've been making 200 per cent Dry Martinis all these years, without being aware of it? In truth, my preference has always been Gibsons, but I never liked onions until I found this way of serving them.

Consumer Advocates Powerless As Utility Rates Climb Higher

The exposed tip of the Public Utility "iceberg" is under scrutiny on Capitol Hill. Members of the Assembly's Banking and Regulated Activities Committee are currently holding hearings on proposed legislation to prohibit the present practice of passing on rate fluctuations to customers.

Also under discussion is a bill to sharply limit promotional advertising and public relations activities by the utilities. Unfortunately, most critics contend that the lawmakers are indulging in superficial remedies rather than coming to grips with basic reforms.

The reluctance of the legislature to follow the lead of more progressive states by altering the legal structure of the State's Public Utilities Commission is puzzling to many consumer advocates. The Connecticut Citizens Action Group, the Ralph Nader affiliate, to no one's surprise, has long favored an adversary system in which the investigative function of the PUC is transferred to an independent public lobby representing consumer interests.

This is a proposal that has gained much support among more moderate elements in the state. New Haven attorney

Edward Becker, a spokesman for the Connecticut Conference of Mayors, has repeatedly pointed out "There is a conflict of interest between the (PUC) commission and the staff — because they (the staff) are subordinated to those three impartial commissioners. There is little incentive for the staff to assert initiative with vigorous investigations and tenacious cross-examinations".

The PUC — the folks who brought you the bus crisis, the cable television giveaways, holding companies, fuel rate adjustments and — ever increasing rates — seems, however, impervious to change.

Appointment to the three-man commission is a political plum — a $25,000 per year part-time position which carries with it the enormous power to regulate everything from taxicabs to power companies.

PUC Chairman Howard Housman, a Meskill appointee and former Republican State Chairman, has been charged by CCAG Director Toby Moffett of "not forgetting that some of the utility executives are important Republicans". Moffett may be "shooting from the hip", but the public record does show scant PUC criticism of utility performance despite many obvious shortcomings.

Perhaps the strongest charge made by PUC watchdogs, however, is rate favoritism shown to large industrial users. These reductions of up to 40 per cent are not sufficiently justified in terms of actual costs, contend these critics. More importantly, they point out, these concessions are principally responsible for the almost complete lack of organized opposition to rate increase applications by the industrial and commercial community.

Connecticut Spotlight

By RICK DIAMOND

PUC reformers maintain that only concerted action by business interests, or preferably a public advocacy lobby, is capable of matching the sophisticated presentations made by the well-endowed utilities.

One PUC staff member confided, "Under the present system the utilities are only scrutinized on the basis of financial statements. Engineering studies and full investigations are extremely limited. A public lobby would have a field day uncovering some of the unnecessary expenses absorbed by the customers."

Other critics are concerned with the passive role of the PUC. The bus crises, they point out, never should have been allowed to reach this sorry state. The PUC, they contend, which had the regulatory power over the bus companies should have taken the initiative in providing solutions.

Commissioner Hausman, however, in stressing that "the cities are at fault for not implementing transit districts", seems to imply that creativity and problem solving are not the functions of a regulatory agency.

Cable television (CATV), heralded as the electronic communication wonder of the next quarter of this century, is regulated jointly by the PUC and the Federal Communications Commission.

The PUC, which has issued 15 franchises to date, has been repeatedly criticized by a coalition of citizens groups for the heavy concentration of political figures in the new CATV companies. Kinder words have been offered by some critics who simply maintain that the PUC has insufficient time, staff and expertise to properly regulate this new complex industry.

CRITICISMS of present PUC regulatory approach are endless. Approval of out-of-state holding companies such as "The Hydraulic Company, which owns the Bridgeport Hydraulic, has drawn heavy fire.

THC is now engaged in manufacturing and real estate, which, combined with its monopolistic control of water resources, gives it unfair competitive leverage, contend critics. Some auditors also maintain that it is most difficult to a Hartford based regulatory agency to accurately allocate costs and revenues for multi-business holding companies. The danger, they point out, of some non-regulated business costs being absorbed by utility customers is a very real one.

A spokesman for Connecticut Light and Power, the state's largest utility, defends their base rate, over ten per cent higher than the HELCO and the UI, as partially resulting from the helter-skelter geographical distribution of their franchise.

Despite the current legislative hearing, the best bet is that the cost burden of PUC shortcomings will continue to be shouldered by the average consumer.

Remodeling Upgrades Old-Fashioned School

Adding a fourth "R" — remodeling — is one way to update an old-fashioned school.

In school renovation, as in home improvement, the purpose is to add comfort and convenience and subtract upkeep. And, while beauty may not have the top priority for schools that it does for homes, a good remodeling job is sure to upgrade school appearance.

Windows are a necessary part of school modernization. Old schools have old windows, and they tend to be ill-fitting, drafty and difficult to operate.

Today's windows, however, have graduated to a new high in quality and features. The Andersen Corporation of Bayport, Minn., a leading window manufacturer, says the trend in new and remodeled schools is toward windows that combine wide glass areas for good visibility and maximum natural light, with ventilating capability. Even in air conditioned schools, fresh air ventilation is considered essential to classroom comfort.

Modern quality windows are precision-made for good fit, factory-weatherstripped to seal out drafts, equipped with smoothly-operating hardware for easy operation and tight closure, and available with welded insulating glass as well as safety and tinted glass.

Of increasing importance are windows with low-maintenance features. Many schools are specifying Perma-Shield windows with vinyl-clad sash and frame that don't need painting and have the convenience of welded insulating glass.

A recently remodeled high school in the Mid-West, for example, used Andersen Perma-Shield fixed-sash windows over operating awning units. The windows suited the traditional character of the 1929 school, and needed only minimal adjustment to fit existing openings. Welded insulating glass, which eliminated the need for storm sash, cuts heat loss and helps keep the classrooms comfortable year-round. Resultant low maintenance and increased efficiency for heating and cooling systems mean substantial savings in school operating costs — an accomplishment that rates an "A" from taxpayers.

In window washing "derby" using professional housecleaners, Andersen windows with removable grilles and insulating glass (right top and bottom) took less time to clean (2½ hours for 30 windows) than multi-light windows with self-storing storm sash (left top and bottom). Latter took three hours for 15 windows. Time and work-saving were also reflected in lower cleaning costs.

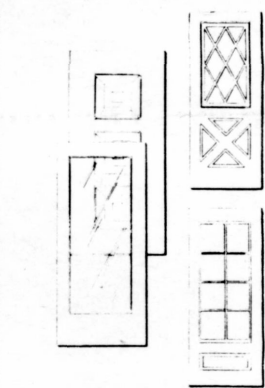

Quick-Change Combo Door Wins Year-Round Applause

Want to be a quick-change artist and win applause for front door beauty? Consider wood combination storm and screen doors.

These are modern doors of ponderosa pine fitted with interchangeable glass and screen panels. Unlike old-fashioned metallic storm doors, which tend to detract from or hide the front entrance, wood combination doors are designed to blend with wood panel entries. They can even be painted or stained to match. Some styles feature large glass panels to give full views of the front door.

Available at lumber dealers in stock sizes and a variety of styles, wood combination doors require virtually no maintenance. They are permanently installed and preservative-treated against weather abuse.

A quick change of panels adjusts the door to the season.

Combination storm and screen doors of ponderosa pine (with interchangeable glass and screen panels) give a home elegance as well as protection. They are designed to match and "show off" wood panel entry doors. A factory treatment protects them against weather abuse.

Prefinishing Means Less Fix-Up Mess

There's less mess in do-it-yourself remodeling these days. The reason is the availability of prefinished building materials — a virtual boon to home handymen.

Materials that are finished in the factory don't need finishing at home. This saves the time and labor of painting, staining or varnishing and the mixing, mess and clean-up that go with them. Prefinishing also eliminates the need for large work areas at home, and gives more professional-looking results.

Wall paneling, for instance, is a consistently popular do-it-yourself project. Materials such as hardboard panels which can be easily handled, worked and installed make the project feasible for "amateurs." But, it's prefinishing that makes paneling walls convenient and assures worthwhile results.

The factory finishes in which hardboard panels are available — woodgrain designs, textured patterns, hard-wear decorator colors — can't be duplicated outside the factory. "Basic" finishes (stain, paint, varnish) can be applied at home, though several days may be needed for a sufficient number of coats and drying time between. Also, since it's inadvisable to finish panels "on the wall," clear floor spaces or large work tables are needed.

One of the biggest problems for handymen is installing and finishing panel moldings. This job is made easier with prefinished moldings that match woodgrain-design panels.

The bother of countersinking nails can be avoided by using color-matched nails. Special adhesives do away with nailing altogether. Because the designs in prefinished hardboard panels are uniform, they can be matched at random — a great saving in time . . . and sanity.

HOME BUYER'S PARADE OF VALUES

One way to add a touch of individuality to your home is through the selection of doors that set a tasteful tone. Shown above are multi-paned French doors of ponderosa pine, available in stock sizes at local lumber dealers.

This handsomely-rugged home, modeled after Alpine chalets, was built as a summer residence. But the owners—charmed by its beauty, comfort and scenic surroundings—decided to live there year-round. The house was planned for maximum visibility and minimal maintenance. Windows and patio doors are Andersen vinyl-clad Perma-Shield units that don't need painting and offer the comfort and convenience of insulating glass.

Summer Home Has Year-Round Appeal

What begins as a summer romance, can become a year-round way of life.

That's what happened when a strikingly handsome vacation home developed so much appeal for its owners that they decided to make it an all-year residence.

The house, located on scenic Cape Cod, was designed by the owner following a trip through Europe where he'd seen and admired classic examples of Bavarian architecture. The Alpine influence shows in a massive roof, rugged fieldstone facade, and the sturdy "set" of the large house on its rustic site.

Architectural design wasn't the only aspect Frank Fewore handled himself. A structural engineer familiar with blueprints and building products, he also determined the type of windows to be used. The 11½-room house has lots of glass areas and is electrically heated, so window choice was important for home comfort. Fewore also wanted the windows to provide maximum visibility to take advantage of the views. He selected Andersen Perma-Shield windows and patio doors.

The units offer the convenience of insulating glass, which substantially cuts heat loss without the need for storm sash. This assures more efficient and economic fuel use, and comfortable indoor temperatures year-round. The vinyl-clad wood sash and frames of Perma-Shield units don't need painting — a low-maintenance benefit Fewore learned to appreciate in an earlier home.

The front of the new house has eleven casement windows—some single, some double units. A special architectural feature is a huge gable overhanging the entrance that emphasizes the home's chalet appearance.

The back of the house is wide-open to the outdoors. Virtually every room has an expansive view through double or triple units of fixed sash and awning window combinations. Three sets of double gliding doors open the rear wall of the family room to a spacious patio. A triple patio door leads from an upper-floor bedroom to a rustic balcony.

One of the visual attractions in the rear yard will be a rock garden built close to the patio. Well water is being routed to flow over the garden and trickle down to a pond at the edge of the one-acre property.

Accent On Youth: The Harsh Realities Of College Acceptance

By judy white

At this time of year thousands of high school seniors feel suspended in a kind of limbo, as they wait to hear whether or not they have been accepted by the colleges they would like to attend. One can sympathize with their impatience without agreeing with one Ethan Gorenstein.

"Why is college application such an upsetting and frenzied process for high school students?" asked Ethan in a valedictory speech as he graduated a June or two ago from Birch Wathen School in New York City. "The reasons are many and varied, but the basis for the most upsetting ones is the relationship that exists between the applicants and the colleges and those who represent the colleges. This relationship emphasizes the college's strength and the student's weakness. It is in fact the same relationship that exists between an adult and a child."

This adult-child relationship, Ethan continued, "is one between protector and protected, teacher and pupil, and, most important, between controller and controlled. Because children hold such a weak position in society, college admission boards have found it easy to declare their applicants children."

How many sixteen- and seventeen-year-olds feel as Ethan does about the actions of college admissions people? Is it an adult-child relationship that exists, or more one normal between an institution and an individual? The situation undoubtedly varies from college to college, but I doubt that in crucial ways Stanford University treats its undergraduate applicants very differently from the way it treated me when, at forty-five, I wanted to matriculate as a graduate student.

The teenager applying for college admission indeed is not a "child." Neither is he a full-fledged adult. What is Ethan's hurry, that he wants himself and other high school students to be considered adult before their time? Adulthood lasts for most of one's life. What is the rush?

"Another outrageous abuse of the student's rights," said Ethan, "is the system of informing him of how he has fared over the months of consideration and reconsideration of his application. As is well-known, the great majority of colleges keep him in the dark until that day in April when he learns his ultimate fate. It would not seem too difficult to at least keep him posted during that long period as to what his outcome may be."

Ethan claims that the way the system stands now, the college does not have to justify any of its admission procedures. "First of all, colleges do not have to give criteria for acceptance. Secondly, they are not required to give structured interviews in which meaningful questions are asked. Thirdly, the colleges can notify students about their decisions at their own leisure. And finally, a student need never be told the reason for his rejection."

It has long seemed to me that after Presidents of the U.S., mayors of American cities, and presidents of American colleges and universities, the admissions personnel of those colleges and universities must have the country's most thankless jobs. For a number of years I interviewed California applicants for admission to the college from which I graduated years ago, and so acquired a limited firsthand insight into some of the problems.

One year more than two thousand high school seniors applied for acceptance in a freshman class limited to two hundred fifty. A report after all the decisions were made stated that eighty per cent of the applicants were of the calibre the college sought. A college's main obligation is to enrolled students; budgets are tight. How many times, in this particular case, would Ethan have the admissions office keep those two thousand students posted? In such a situation reasons are found — with great difficulty, I'm sure — for accepting the fortunate minority. (My alma mater is small enough that they try each year to replace certain strengths lost through graduation: a first violinist, a half-back, a brilliant chemistry student, a good all-around brightener of other students' lives.) But it would be wastefully time-consuming, if not impossible, to explain to those who technically qualified, why they were not accepted.

The world does not pamper people as Ethan thinks colleges should pamper those who apply for admission. Like it or not, the individual young person usually needs the college more than the college needs him. Part of becoming adult is learning to cope with often-harsh realities, accepting the fact that one no longer is the center-of-universe one may have been as a child.

Christ-Drama At St. Alphonsus

Students at St. Alphonsus College will present an original Christ-drama, written by the Rev. Max Pauli, C.S.S.R., of the college faculty, at the end of March and during the remainder of the Lenten season through Easter.

The drama, entitled "The Son-Of-God Show," will be presented in the college chapel in Suffield and has been specifically written for that purpose. It differs in tone from the familiar "Godspell" and "Jesus Christ Superstar." It is a reverent expression of Christian belief and so the author, Father Pauli, refers to it as "a witness play." The cast of 11 seminarians give witness to what they believe is the truth: that Jesus of Nazareth is the Son of God.

In order to dramatize the message, several songs have been written by Father Pauli and Brother Frederick Brinkman (also a graduate of St. Alphonsus) and have been used to heighten certain scenes, especially the raising of Lazarus, the agony in the garden, and the resurrection of Jesus Himself.

Unique lighting and sound effects, such as chains, bells, rocks, hammers, pipes and leather belts, will be used to further underscore the action and heighten the drama.

The choir and orchestra will be directed by Brother Steve Wolpert, a first-year student at the college.

Key scenes in the play include: the coming of Jesus; the message of the Baptizer; Jesus' inaugural address; the curing of a cripple; the cleansing of the Temple; the confrontation with the devils of Geresene; the beheading of the Baptizer; and raising of Lazarus during the first act.

Act Two includes: the condemnation of Jerusalem; the betrayal by Judas; the Last Meal; the agony in the garden; the arrest and trial; the scourging; the Way of the Cross; the Crucifixion and death; the burial; the Easter Sunday earthquake; and the Resurrection of Jesus.

THIRD LENTEN PLAY

The "Son-of-God" drama is Father Pauli's third Lenten play in three years. His first two efforts included "Ceremony in Darkness" and "Masque of Triumph." Father Pauli's interest in play writing was coincidental with his interest in the revival of the old form of the "chancel" of church-drama when he became involved with the Suffield Council of Churches, an ecumenical group which cooperates in holding several religious events yearly.

Father Pauli has long been associated with college and the religious interests of the surrounding community. He was a member of the first class to graduate and receive a B.A. degree from St. Alphonsus College. He received his Master of Religious Education and Master of Divinity degrees from Mount St. Alphonsus Seminary (Esopus, N.Y.) and his Master of Arts degree from St. Louis University. He is the Author of one book, "Prayers for the Time Being," and is presently working on two others. Presently he is a professor in the Department of Philosophy at St. Alphonsus College.

The "Son-of-God Show" will be open to the public. There is no admission price but a free-offering is asked to help cover the costs of staging.

New Property Tax Proposed

"The current tax proposals being considered by the Connecticut General Assembly include a new tax on real property, however, we find that most homeowners do not realize that it means them," stated Realtor Donald Stevenson, president of the North Central Connecticut Board of Realtors.

The tax in the one per cent real estate conveyance tax to be paid at the time of transfer of title by the seller. Technically, it is 1 per cent of the gross consideration, meaning the full sales price. The funds would accree to the state's general fund.

Presently, there is a $1.10 per $1,000 documentary stamp tax paid to the local towns and cities at time of transfer and filing. On a $30,000 sale this amounts to $33. This would be allowed to continue, however, then the state would tax based on $8.90 per $1,000. On this sale it would amount to a new tax of $267 payable to the State of Connecticut.

This is a new tax that would apply to every sale of real property, homes, commercial property, industrial property, all types of land with or without buildings. It would also be assessed on sales where the owner might suffer financial loss.

"It is important that every homeowner in Enfield, Somers, Suffield, Windsor Locks, East Windsor and all areas recognize this proposed new tax bill will effect his or her pocketbook. While you may not be thinking of selling now, there is little question that you will move next year, the year after, or sometime. We do not need more real estate taxation, we need less", said Realtor Stevenson.

When you switch on in 1983 will we be ready?

We're working on it today. It's part of our job to keep a watchful eye on growth patterns in the area we serve and to plan at least 10 years ahead to meet them with adequate supplies of electricity.

For example, we're building today to make sure there'll be enough electricity for schools under construction . . . new hospitals . . . for the more than 200 thousand additional dwelling units that may be built in the Northeast Utilities service area in the next ten years . . . for environmental clean-up programs . . . and for the new jobs our growing population requires.

In the next two years the companies of the Northeast Utilities system will add close to two million kilowatts of electric generating capacity to serve our customers. Our new Northfield Mountain pumped-storage hydroelectric station in Massachusetts and a new oil-fired unit at our Middletown, Connecticut, plant will be completed before the end of this year. A second nuclear unit at our Millstone Nuclear Power Station in Waterford, Connecticut, is scheduled for 1974.

Planning for these generating facilities was started years ago in anticipation of requirements that are almost upon us. Today we're continuing to plan ahead, getting ready to serve the next decade's power needs.

While dependable energy supplies are indispensable to this area's well being, they can't be taken for granted by any of us. It's our responsibility to make sure there'll be enough electricity. But we must all share the responsibility of using America's limited energy supplies wisely.

R-20 Zone Proposed

Amendments to the Zoning ordinance to provide for a new single family category, to be known as R-20 zone, will be presented by the Zoning and Planning Commission at a public hearing Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. in the town hall hearing room.

The proposed new R-20 zone would be smaller than the present R-25 zone, but larger than the R-11. It would have an area of 20,000 square feet; a minimum frontage of 100 feet, minimum depth of 125 feet; minimum side yard of 10 feet and aggregate of 25 feet compared to R-25 zone with an area of 25,000 feet; minimum frontage of 125 feet; minimum side yard of 20 feet and aggregate of 40 feet.

Other amendments to the zoning ordinances to be considered at the hearing concern adding retail and personal services in a Neighborhood Shopping Zone and site plan for planned development zones.

Zoning regulations will be heard in order to establish a legal effective date on junk yards, cemetery or memorial park; residential use and retail sale of alcoholic liquors; and sale of alcoholic liquors in business and planned development business districts.

Interested persons may appear at the hearing and be heard and written communications will be received by the commission.

Edward Allen Presents Powder Hollow Legend

"The Legend of Powder Hollow", a 45-minute slide lecture will be presented by Edward C. Allen of Hazardville at the meeting of the Suffield Historical Society, Mar. 20 at 8 p.m. in Kent Memorial Library. Public is invited.

Powder Hollow is a 400 acre tract in the eastern part of Enfield which was the site of the Hazard Powder Co., makers of black gunpowder. The plant supplied 40 per cent of the gunpowder used by the Union Army in the Civil War. The business was founded by Allen Loomis of Suffield and flourished under the ownership of Col. Augustus Hazard.

Allen's slides include color photographs of Powder Hollow today and copies of pictures made when the mills were operating. A noted photographer, he is active in the Springfield Photographic Society, the Photographic Society of America and has been named a Master Member of the New England Camera Club Council.

The Hazardville powder works and gunpowder were both well-known in Suffield. In "Suffield Notes", Sam Lathrop recalls in the 1880s:

"Twice each week two heavily loaded powder wagons, each drawn by a pair of huge horses, would pass down High St. on their regular trip from the Hazardville powder works to the fuse factory at Simsbury. Youngsters would gaze in awe at the drivers nonchalantly sitting over these tons of potential destruction. Sometimes a slight tremble of the ground would be felt, followed by a rumble in the distance. Presently a huge balloon-like cloud of smoke would be seen rising in the east above Hazardville and someone would shout "There goes a powder mill."

"Gunpowder was sold in stores as freely as sugar or salt is sold now. Muzzle loading shotguns were very common and many a Suffield hunter then carried a flash of powder, a pouch of shot, and a box of Caps."

There will be a brief business meeting and refreshments will follow the talk.

Crime Rate Increase Continues

According to a report from Det. Lt. Edwin Sheldon burglaries and larcenies in February continued to increase over those in the same month in 1972, as had been true of the compared figures of January 1972 and 1973.

In February 1972 police reported three burglaries. That rose to nine this year. The report showed nine larcenies in February 1972 and 15 this year, a 66 per cent rise.

Value of property stolen also climbed. Last year's February total was $1,728.75 and this year's came to $5,312.08, a jump of 207 percent.

However, arrests showed a decided decline, as was true in the January report figures. There were eight arrests reported in February 1972 and only four this year for the same month.

Suffield May Receive Reimbursement

State Representative Astrid T. Hanzalek, R., 61st District, announced today that the Town of Suffield will receive approximately $14,000 more than last year if the proposals concerning reimbursement of towns for state property requested by the Governor in his Budget Message are adopted by the State Legislature.

Rep. Hanzalek, in announcing this revenue benefit for the citizens of Suffield, said: "The Governor's recommendations to assist local governments and property taxpayers will greatly increase the revenue of Suffield. The total increase of payments in the State will be almost $2 million, with Suffield receiving about $28,000. A resulting local tax decrease will then be possible for the citizens of Suffield."

"This property tax reimbursement program," added Rep. Hanzalek, "combined with increased grants to cities and the Governor's proposal to enable towns to charge tax-exempt institutions for services rendered, truly demonstrates Governor Meskill's deep concern for the economic well-being of our towns and cities. I hope the legislature will support the Governor in his efforts to bring this much needed relief to the taxpayers in our communities."

Hartford Ballet Plans Spring Repertoire

The Hartford Ballet, Connecticut's resident professional dance company, will present its Annual Spring Repertoire Weekend on Friday and Saturday, Apr. 6 and 7, at Bushnell Memorial in Hartford.

Highlighting the performances will be the first Hartford appearance of Michael Uthoff, artistic co-ordinator of the company, with his wife, ballerina Lisa Bradley. The couple will dance in Uthoff's lyric love due, "Windsong," to be seen on the Friday evening program at 8 p.m.

The Uthoffs came to the Hartford Ballet last year after winning international acclaim as principal dancers with the City Center Joffrey Ballet and the First Chamber Dance Company in New York.

Adding to the excitement of this major dance event will be the Hartford Ballet premiere of "La Malinche," Jose Limon's powerful staging of the Mexican folk tale. Limon, who offered the modern dance classic to the Hartford troupe just prior to his death last fall, is considered one of the great American choreographers of the century.

Other ballets to be seen on the Friday night program are the premieres of Uthoff's "Concerto Grosso" and "Dusk" and the return of Enid Lynn's popular rock ballet "Grandstand."

The Saturday matinee program at 2:30 p.m., geared to a younger audience, will feature Joyce Karpiej's romantic ballet, "Concerto for Harp" to music by Gliere and the children's favorite, "Peter and the Wolf" with new choreography by Uthoff. Completing the Saturday program will be "Dusk" and "Grandstand."

Members of the Hartford Symphony Orchestra will be conducted by Dr. Moshe Paranov, musical director of the Hartford Ballet.

EHS Band Gets New Uniforms

The Enfield High School Band took delivery of 71 new band uniforms last week after the completion of a year-long fund drive to raise the $8700 needed to buy the uniforms. An allocation of $1600 from the Enfield Board of Education, combined with proceeds from a benefit basketball game between the Harlem Wizards and the Enfield A.C., brought the fund drive to an end last week.

The fund drive was begun in February of last year when it became apparent that the town education budget would be unable to meet the band's needs for new uniforms. The E.H.S. Band-Parent Assn. was formed by Band Director Dana Hawes and several parents of EHS and JFK Junior High Band members to provide support and assistance to the band members. Through profits from a raffle, tag sale, two band concerts, candy sale, bake sale, and a car wash, the drive had reached the $3700 mark by the closing of school in June.

The balance grew over the summer through donations from various clubs and PTA's. Since last fall the drive continued to grow rapidly, with help from various fraternal groups and a private donation in the form of contributions for complete uniforms. Those who donated these were the Enfield Lions Club, Enfield K of C, Enfield Jr. Women's Club, Enfield Raiders Booster Club and Leger Starr. The Band-Parent Assn. conducted a door to door appeal in November which netted over $900. Other events this winter included a Red Garter Night, a bake sale, candle sale, candy sale, and the basketball game mentioned earlier. The Bd. of Ed. allocation followed an appeal by Band-Parent President Jayne Stroup, at one of the regular board meetings. Leo Yaconiello, EHS principal, was also able to provide $1000 from student activity funds at the high school. The total amount raised came to over $9500.

The band will make its first appearance in the new uniforms at its Spring Concert at the high school April 6. The first outdoor appearance by the band in the new uniforms will be at the Enfield Memorial Day Parade May 30. The uniforms are being issued to the band and color guard members this week.

Now that the uniforms have been received and paid for, the Band-Parent Association plans to turn its efforts toward other areas of need by the band. Of particular immediate concern is the equipment shortage being faced by the color guard. It is doubtful that the color guard will be able to wear the new uniforms next Fall due to increasing numbers in the band. However, since many color guard members have worked diligently in the uniform drive, it is hoped that some new flags, poles, and flagpole holsters can be purchased for them.

(referring to the Quebec Nationalist movement), and Godfrey L. Hearn, Minister and Deputy Permanent Representative of Canada to the U.N., on "The Beaver at the United Nations".

Kardouche, Manager of Economic Research, Royal Bank of Canada, on "Dollars Over the Dike", and William M.
