Large Attendance At CRT's Nutrition Program Opening

The Elderly Nutrition Program of the Community Renewal Team of Greater Hartford (CRT) began serving meals to the elderly in Enfield Monday at the Enfield Neighborhood Center located in the old United Presbyterian Church at 100 High St.

The program was the first of its kind in the state and serves 524 meals a day, five days a week to some 1,100 participants.

Many state and local officials attended the opening program which operates under federal funds.

Among the guests attending were Governor Thomas Meskill, U.S. Representative Ella Grasso, Town Manager C. Samuel Kissinger, Mayor Frank Mancuso, CRT Executive Director James G. Harris, Jr., CRT Director William Knopf, Mrs. Kailash Ahuja, the program's dietician; Dorothy Allen, Director of Enfield Social Services and Sue Noonan, Director of Enfield Elderly Nutrition Program.

Following a welcome of guests by Harris, Knopf presented an outline of the program's aims and scope. Mrs. Ahuja gave a description of menus and the program's dietary aims. Comments were made by Mayor Mancuso, Mrs. Allen and Sue Noonan followed by comments by Mrs. Grasso.

Mrs. Grasso, who was credited by Mrs. Allen as being instrumental in obtaining the funds for the program, made a concise and interesting analysis of the program.

She stressed the nutrition program is only one of many state and federal projects which are a part of the "great spirit of Connecticut which represents the deep and abiding respect the state has for its residents".

Gov. Meskill arrived while the meal was being served and went from table to table shaking hands with senior citizens and signing autographs. He spoke to many in attendance and prior to his departure, posed for photographs with Mrs. Grasso.

Morrison Files Bill To Increase State School Aid

Rep. John Morrison, D-58th Dist., has filed legislation which would increase state aid to education from the present $215 per pupil to $300 per pupil. The Morrison bill is lined with the recommendation of the State Board of Education which calls for responsible state aid to education.

"It is regrettable, said Morrison, that our skiing governor, Jaan Claude Meskill, fails to recognize this problem. It should be an easy problem for him to understand, for aid to education in Connecticut is a lot like the ski slopes of Vermont, both going down hill much too fast to suit me and the people of Enfield," said Morrison.

The Enfield Democrat praised the efforts of Mayor Frank Mancuso and Board of Education Chairman Bill McWha, for spearheading the drive for increased aid to education. Morrison also praised the Enfield PTA Council for its planned lobbying effort for an ADM increase.

"The time has come," said Morrison, "for those who annually tell the Town Council not to cut the education budget, to instead tell the state that it is not meeting its responsibility to local education. This can be done," said Morrison, "by signing the petitions that are presently being circulated by the PTA Council."

As a former councilman, Morrison said he fully realizes the problems that the Town Council and the Board of Education face at budget time. The same problem will occur time and time again unless the state takes a leading role in financing education. The Enfield Representative said his recent conversation with the chairman of the education committee has led him to believe that the education committee of the General Assembly will definitely recommend an ADM increase, but only if proper pressure is applied.

"It must be remembered," said Morrison, "that increased state aid to education also means possible lower local property taxes."

State Holds Public Hearing On Energy Proposals Friday

"I feel confident that this committee will carefully consider the public's best interest," commented Rep. Con O'Leary in referring to a public hearing scheduled on energy proposals by the Environment Committee of the General Assembly.

O'Leary pointed out that the meeting is scheduled for tomorrow at 10 a.m. in the Hall of the House of Representatives. The Representative from the 60th district (Enfield-Windsor Locks) added that he has trust in the Environment Committee as he has worked closely with that committee on the King's Island and Scantic River projects. He noted, however, that 10 a.m. in the morning is not a convenient time for the average constituent to attend the meeting.

"I think it would have been more representative of the public sentiment if it had been held at night or late afternoon," he said.

The freshman representative urged all who have interest in the energy situation or who have thoughts on the matter to try to attend and make their feelings known at the public hearing.

O'Leary felt that some of the more important measures which the committee will be considering include:

— Granting the governor emergency powers to respond to energy shortages in the state; including the power to ban display lighting.

— Creation of an energy board whose task will be to gain information regarding energy supply and demand projections.

— Requiring the posting of information in all retail establishments regarding the energy consumption of products for sale.

— Modification of the state building code as it relates to insulation, ventilation and lighting and providing incentives for public transportation.

— Modifying the charter of the Public Utilities Commission to require the PUC to consider energy supply and conservation when it establishes rates and rate structures.

"This last proposal," O'Leary noted, "will be strongly opposed by utilities and business groups."

The representative concluded that he will attend the hearing, but that he hoped interested constituents would also attend if possible.

"The representatives of business and industry will have no problem getting to an early morning public hearing but I think the general public will.

"I am confident of the Environment Committee's good intentions and I can only hope that the Legislature as a whole will listen carefully to both sides on this very delicate issue."

Motorists Should Be Cautious Of Pupils

In view of the fact that daylight saving time started Monday, the Connecticut Safety Commission is requesting that all the news media in the state make mention of the fact that many school children will either be walking to school or waiting for school buses before daylight.

Motorists should be alerted to this fact and should be extremely vigilant in watching for school children who will be walking by the side of the road wearing dark clothing and who will be difficult to see.

School authorities should make every effort to alert parents to the need of having the children wear multi-colored clothing with some type of reflectorized tape and especially the use of "hot dots" which are circular reflective dots the size of a nickel which will stick to shoes, books, briefcases and clothing.

Parents should instruct their children that when it is necessary to walk on a highway without sidewalks, they must walk on the left side of the road being ever watchful for oncoming cars. At bus stops, they must be instructed to refrain from horseplay and to stay not only off the travel portion of the road but far enough away for added safety.

New Law Will Change School Bus Transportation Vehicles

Noting confusion among local school officials over new school bus seating requirements and the "outlawing" of van-type vehicles for school transportation, Motor Vehicle Commissioner Edward J.

Kozlowski has sent clarifying letters to superintendents, bus administrators and bus contractors.

In the letter to superintendents, Kozlowski said there is "apparent confusion as to whether districts must purchase or contract for new school buses in order to meet new seating requirements to become effective Sept. 1, 1974."

The seating requirement, he wrote, "actually relates only to those buses manufactured after Sept. 1, 1974. School buses manufactured after that date, when transporting children in grades seven and above, must provide such pupils with a minimum of 15 inches of seating width." Younger students must be provided 13 inches of seating space.

Kozlowski's letter notes one present exception to the seating space regulation.

"Any school bus manufactured prior to Sept. 1, 1974," he said, "must provide students in grades seven and above with 15 inches of seating width on field trips."

The field trip requirement will mean only that fewer upper-grade pupils can be seated in buses built before Sept. 1, 1974. The regulation does not require the installation of new seating.

The commissioner further pointed out that state law will require school districts to begin using only regulation vehicles for school transportation as of Sept. 1, 1974. This provision, in effect, "outlaws" van-type or other non-regulation vehicles for use when transporting more than nine students.

To provide for a small regulation vehicle, the MVD recently issued regulations establishing a "Type II" school bus. The new class of bus is comparable in size to a van, but is specially constructed to meet strict safety standards.

Kozlowski added that after Sept. 1, 1974, each school bus must have padding on the backs of seatbacks and on certain other interior surfaces. This requirement applies to all buses, regardless of date of manufacture.

Increase In VW Sales Predicted

Volkswagen expects to sell over a half-million new cars in the United States in 1974 and Peter J. Corey, president of Corey Volkswagen Inc., authorized VW sales, service and parts facility at 1551 King St., Enfield, predicted sales locally would increase by more than 25 per cent over last year.

According to Corey, even though most auto industry spokesmen forecast a decline of at least 10 per cent in new car sales in 1974, VW believes its sales will rise because of changing marketing conditions and the company's ability to meet the challenges created by the energy crisis. He said there had already been a shift of new car buyers towards high fuel-economy models and that the trend would accelerate as gasoline becomes scarcer and fuel prices become higher.

Among the chief reasons for his optimism, he said, is the fact that fuel economy, reduced overall size and lower maintenance costs will be more important to 1974 buyers than initial cost. He noted that most VW models are capable of averaging 30 miles to a gallon at a speed of 50 miles an hour and "more and more people are going to want that than anything else if things don't get any better."

Enfield Teachers Association Circulating ADM Petitions

The Enfield Teachers' Association, because of a move endorsed by its Representative Assembly at its December meeting, is currently involved in circulating petitions among its 500 members toward increasing the state's A.D.M. payment to towns.

The association has taken the action to encourage Gov. Meskill and the Conn. General Assembly to increase its payments to towns for education.

The association petition "strongly recommends" that the A.D.M. payments be increased to $398. This figure has been suggested by the Connecticut Conference of Mayors. If the $398 figure is not accepted, the Association petition asks the Governor to support "at the very least" the $300 A.D.M. proposed by the State Board of Education.

Newspaper Reporter Is Arrested At Town Hall

Refusing to leave a town council "work session" Monday night, Journal-Inquirer reporter Dennis Hogan, 27, was arrested by Enfield police officer Sgt. Richard Meunier and charged with disorderly conduct.

The incident occurred when Mayor Frank Mancuso asked that the room be cleared to allow the council to discuss privately items referred to on the agenda as "Legal Matters."

Instructed by his editor not to leave until a vote was taken to go into executive session, Hogan remained in his seat. Hogan cited state statutes requiring commissions and committees with administrative power to vote before asking reporters or public citizens to leave the room. He was referring to Public Act 499 of the Freedom of Information statutes adopted in 1971.

Town Atty. John D. Adams told Hogan that the council is not an administrative committee or commission, rather a legislative body that does not adhere to those statutes.

In a Press telephone interview, Atty. Adams reiterated his claim that the statute repeatedly recited by Hogan was not "applicable to the Town Council which is a legislative body."

He further stated that "no vote may be taken during a work session" or "conference session" as it is called in the Town Charter.

The agenda item, "Legal Matters", Adams said, is merely for discussion of personnel problems or matters in which the town is involved in litigation, suits or claims against the town.

If a decision is reached during a "work session", Adams explained, it must go to a regular session, open to the public, for a vote.

He concluded by saying, "The Town Council has never taken a secret vote since I have been town attorney." He further remarked, "We're not trying to hide anything just unwilling to adhere to a procedure that is not applicable."

Town Manager C. Samuel Kissinger, who ordered Hogan's arrest, made this statement to the Press, "When the work session of the council reached the last item of the agenda, called "Legal Matters", all spectators were asked to leave the council chamber. All did, including newspaper reporters, except Hogan, who contended the council had not voted to go into "Executive Session" and, therefore, the meeting was still an open one. When he persisted in staying, the council requested that I call a police officer, which I did."

Sgt. Richard Meunier and Police Chief Walter Skower came to the council chamber at Kissinger's request. Skower asked Hogan twice, "Are you leaving?" and when he refused Meunier arrested Hogan.

Skower told the Press that he was required to have Hogan arrested, the only other recourse being to use force. He said that Hogan offered no resistance.

Meunier booked Hogan immediately posting a $150 non-surety bond for his appearance in Circuit Court 13 on Feb. 28. Hogan, who admitted he was "scared" throughout the proceedings in the council chamber, said the police "treated me very nicely."

Council D. Carl Scarfo, R, was reported saying, "that the JI sent "a kid to do a man's job."

Mrs. Elizabeth Ellis, publisher, said that Hogan acted in accordance with "the policy of this newspaper" and that the JI supports Hogan's position and will assume full responsibility for his defense "to the Supreme Court of the United States, if necessary."

Atty. Adams said yesterday the town will not press the case against the reporter. "All we wanted to do is remove him from the room."

HARRINGTON'S POT - POURRI

By BOB HARRINGTON

Some time ago guitarist Doug Watson said, "Bob, you've been around the music field almost as long as I have and as a collector of recorded popular music, you more than likely have heard more music than I have. Now, here's what I have in mind — why don't you write a column, listing your ten all-time favorite songs?"

It sounded like a good idea and so one night recently I took two hours out of my reading time and started to make a list. What at first seemed like a snap of the fingers soon turned into a monstrous task. By scratching out many a favorite song I finally worked the list down to 53 songs. Ten? Never!

Well, the next night I went after that list in dead earnest, crossing out many more favorite melodies and, near to midnight I finally limited the list to ten popular songs and the odd thing about the remaining ten is that they were all composed before I was 18. And now, some forty years later they remain the ten that turn me on whenever I hear them.

First — "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles," because it was the first phonograph record I ever heard and I played it so many times until it became a part of my thinking.

The next two came together as they were on the same recording. Paul Whiteman's, "Whispering" and "Japanese Sandman." To digress for a moment here, I've a little anecdote that in a way will let you in on how a musician thinks. A well-known jazz pianist was seriously wounded early in WW II, while fighting in the South Pacific. A Japanese sniper's bullet shattered his right knee and he was to limp ever after. He returned home and began playing in a New York supper club. When he heard the news of the surrender of Japan he said, "Thank God! Maybe now I can play 'Japanese Sandman'."

Song four is Berlin's hauntingly beautiful, "What'll I Do?" But, hauntingly beautiful only when the pianist plays it exactly as Berlin wrote it. Years ago, when I used to work in the old Tip Toe Inn, in Bridgeport, Annie and I would always get there early, hoping that pianist James P. Johnson would be on hand. Before the show began, before the crowd came in, Jimmy would play, "What'll I Do?" for Annie and me. His playing of this song was so wistful and blue that the barkeeper would stop polishing the glasses and lean on the bar and the waitresses would sit at tables, all completely entranced by his music.

In 1921, when we moved from Hartford to Brattleboro, Vt., someone in our block was playing "Margie," over and over again. When we moved back to Hartford in 1928 the first song I heard, as we were moving in was, believe it or not, "Margie." There is a gay, infectious charm about the song that turns almost any gloomy time into a happy one.

Let's see now, we've reached the halfway mark — five songs. Number six just has to be Dick Whiting's, "Sleep Time Gal." More than almost any other song this one seems to capture the quintessence of the Roaring Twenties. The moon-June-honeymoon-happy ending theme weaves into the melody a sweet little love story, told in 32 bars.

It was the trombone of the magnificent Miff Mole that made, "Peg O' My Heart," a great favorite. I remember one night when Miff and I were working in a supper club. Miff was having an off night. His injured hip was acting up, his sweet wife Peg was ill and to top things off, his lip just wasn't doing what it was supposed to do. When it came feature time I said, "Ladies and gentlemen, many of you think that Miff Mole wrote 'Peg O' My Heart,' he didn't. It's just that he plays it better than anyone else in the whole wide world."

Miff stepped up to the mike, tried a few chord changes, then played the most beautiful trombone solo I have ever heard. The audience rose to its feet and gave him a long standing ovation.

Later, when Miff and Annie and I were walking out of the club, ol' Miffer said, "With a build-up like that I had no choice. I still don't know how it came out so good." Miff is no longer with us, but the sweet lilting beauty of, "Peg O' My Heart," mellows with the passing years.

Now, the waltz. Once, long, long ago, Annie and I spent an evening listening to Guy Lombardo's orchestra. As the evening drew to a close the orchestra played, "Three O'clock in the Morning," and as we danced the beauty of the song became more apparent with each passing chorus. And to this day I maintain that it is the most beautiful of all American waltz music.

Because I have seen the musical comedy, "Irene," so many times the song, "Alice Blue Gown," owns a part of me. Every time I hear it the song brings back enough fond memories to fill half of Broadway.

I have no explanation for the last number on my list of ten other than to say that, "My Buddy," brings back so many dear old hearts now long gone — brings them back with a wistful warmth, laced with love.

So then, the above are my ten favorite popular songs. But oh, how I wanted to include such great numbers as — Up The Lazy River — Sleepy Time Down South — Shanty in Old Shantytown — Linger Awhile — Mood Indigo — Breezin' Along With the Breeze — Sweet Georgia Brown — That Dreamy Melody — Suez — Just A Love Nest — and My Isle Of Golden Dreams.

The songs are oh so old — but the melodies linger on.

Enfield blasted Vernon in another non-league contest 12-1. Crompton and Hughes both had the hat trick. Flanders netted two goals and Blackwood, Miller, Kracunas and Nasto each had one. Crompton had four assists and Mark Patsky and Janney had two each.

Kracunas and Flanders each scored a goal in a 2-1 win against West Hartford. Crompton, Hughes and Nasto each added assists. Outstanding goal tending by Cris Gatto and Bob Foley has been a major factor in the victories.

Put Up Or Shut Up LETTERS

President Nixon is being asked to document his charges of a couple of months ago that he was the victim of "outrageous, vicious, distorted reporting" in network television news programs.

The request for documentation is coming from a newly established organization, the National News Council, which decided to continue its investigation of the President's charges, although so far it has been unable to get from the White House any specifics on alleged bias.

Ned Schnurman, associate director of the council, said the group voted to seek additional meetings with presidential press secretary Ronald Ziegler and White House deputy director of communications Kenneth Clawson. They will be asked to supply specific examples of biased reporting during the period between the resumption of bombing of North Vietnam, in November of 1972, and the firing of Archibald Cox as Watergate special prosecutor in October.

It was during that period that Mr. Nixon said the unfair reporting about him and his administration occurred.

The National News Council is itself something of a controversial organization. There has long been heated debate within the journalism profession as to the desirability of having a national council that would judge the fairness of media, and publishers of some of the largest newspapers in the nation have announced they will not cooperate with the council.

However, the group, which is financed by eight foundations, does have some of the nation's most distinguished citizens serving among its 15 members. It is headed by Roger J. Traynor, former chief justice of the California Supreme Court. Vice chairman is Robert McKay, dean of the Law School at New York University. With nine members representing the public and six representing the media, it has members representing philosophies ranging from that of the publisher of the conservative National Review to that of a leader of the civil rights movement.

The council concerns itself with the fairness of news reporting at the national level and will not be involved in matters of only regional or local concern. It has no power to redress grievances other than its capacity to influence public opinion.

From the standpoint of getting itself known, the council could not have a better opportunity than the Nixon charges. What is decided in regard to them is certain to get considerable public attention. However, the council is faced with a tough and emotionally charged issue, and if it finds strongly for one side or the other its own credibility is likely to be called into question. The fact that much of the press has been critical of the council idea could be used in an effort to destroy the organization's effectiveness with the public.

Whatever happens, it will be interesting to see if the White House does cite the specific instances of "outrageous vicious, distorted reporting" which Mr. Nixon referred to. If the President is going to make that kind of charges, he should document them.

Maybe the National News Council can make him either put up or shut up.

Defends Son

To The Editor:

To that person or persons who wrote that editorial letter to The Enfield Press last week, 1-3-74, signing it, "Someone Who Cares, Enfield". I say if someone cares so much for Enfield, why is he or she ashamed of his or her mysterious name? To me, any person who is ashamed to sign his or her name, I have no use for such a person. But I will Christen such a person as "Mr. or Mrs. Ashamed". I say to you, Mr. or Mrs. Ashamed, for your information, about my son, David. He has God's right to be there in the cold to defend our home and property. If you knew what is in store for us when those Birds from Town Hall come around to steal our home and property, you would change your tune about your "eyesore". If you were in our position, it would change from an "eyesore" to a heart attack. You do not know that we cannot move if we wanted to. But, until that time comes, I'll see to it that David is not alone.

Mr. or Mrs. Ashamed, for your information about your eyesore, look at my building. I believe you should get yourself a new pair of glasses, so you can see better because my buildings are on the best street in Thompsonville and my buildings are the newest ones on the street. Some are still under construction. For better information to you, the professional appraiser, whom the town paid $125,000 for the job, rated my assessment at more than $30,000. They did not complain about "eyesore", but I believe you like to complain. You should go down Main St. especially those toilets and all those boarded up stores. You are the smart one. Tell me, whose fault is it? Why don't you do something about that, if your eyes bother you so much. Why don't you go to the Town Hall and complain to our town officials about it. I say it is all their fault by allowing the destruction of the Connecticut River bridge. That killed all the Main St. merchants, including Bigelow Sanford Carpet Co., worth $4 to $5 million in taxable property and about 2,000 jobs, by not planning a good truck route straight from the river bridge (every effort should be made to replace it), through Main St., straight up to Route 5 and 191, the way my plan calls for. That would eliminate destroying a good number of taxable properties and hardship on anybody, with better accomplishment that fooling around with that wet land, Memorial Industrial Park. It will be a memorial all right, for at least 20 or 25 years to come. Look at all the tax money we are losing until it is finished, if it will ever be finished.

Time Of Need

On Caring

To The Editor:

I wonder if "Someone Who Cares" realizes that by anonymously criticizing David Vesce, he/she is self-branded as a person who doesn't care.

A person who truly cares, cares about everybody, including David Vesce. The mark of a compassionate person is the capability of showing respect for the feelings of even the opposition — especially if that opposition is not a threat to anyone's life, liberty, or property.

By failing to sign the letter, the writer puts himself-herself into the same category as the 6,578 sneak thieves who voted in secret to authorize the theft of the Vesces' property.

Despicable

To The Editor:

There is nothing more despicable than the person who is to cowardly to sign his or her name to the letter criticizing a brave man like Dave Vesce.

Small Claims Court System Seen Having Many Drawbacks

By REP. ROSARIO T. VELLA

(This is the second in a series of articles on Connecticut's small claims courts and proposals to make them more effective forums for consumers with grievances.)

"Very few consumers know how to use the small claims court," said Atty. Stuart Bear of West Haven in response to a query by State Rep. Rosario T. Vella (R-59), House chairman of the legislative State and Urban Development Committee and author of a bill providing for sweeping changes in these courts.

"They are both unsure as to the mechanics and pessimistic as to their chances for success.

"When I was practicing in the small claims court," said Bear, a former New Haven Legal Assistance Association lawyer, "a suit against a corporate or business defendant was almost invariably removed to the regular docket of the Circuit Court.

"This left the consumer in a position of having to get a lawyer for what was sometimes a very minimal claim, or attempting to prosecute the case pro se (on his own), not a very pleasant task even under the best conditions."

Procedures in the various small claims court, and the ease or difficulty with which a lawyer-less consumer may pursue his legal remedies, vary greatly with the judges assigned to the sessions, according to Bear.

"Some judges are very formal to both parties and concerned about evidentiary rules. Other judges are very informal and attempt to elicit the necessary facts with a relaxation of the evidentiary rules."

Bear recalled that when he was practicing in small claims, "default judgments were entered against defendants on many occasions without lawyers or other representatives of the plaintiff being present.

"Some lawyers, primarily those who processed a volume of cases in the small claims court, worked out de facto arrangements with the clerk to expedite handling of their business.

"On some occasions," Atty. Bear continued, "defendants would appear in court only to find out that the lawyer representing the plaintiff was not present in court to proceed with a hearing on the merits."

Bear feels, however, that with changes of the kind for which the Vella bill provides, the small claims courts "can be successfully utilized to provide justice for the consumer."

What mainly blocks justice for consumers with grievances involving sums too small to warrant hiring a lawyer is that they are, as Winsted-born consumer crusader Ralph Nader has put it, "unavailable, unusable or invisible to a majority of consumers."

Washington Post editor Leonard Downie, Jr., has observed that "most citizens do not know that the small claims courts are there; but businessmen do, and they use them to sue for uncollected or disputed small debts.

"By taking the consumer by surprise and throwing lawyers up against him, the businessmen usually win."

The Post found, said Downie, that business firms which lose in the small claims courts of Maryland and Virginia do as their Connecticut counterparts do — "simply appeal to a higher court, where the consumer is required to have a lawyer anyway and pay for an expensive transcript of the original case."

Similarly in Connecticut, where an individual plaintiff is suing without a lawyer, "his claim can easily be defeated by a defendant who knows enough to transfer to the regular docket," according to Joanne S. Faulkner, an attorney with the New Haven Legal Assistance Association.

"The plaintiff must either give up his claim or hire a lawyer, probably at a fee costing more than the claim is worth," Mrs. Faulkner noted. The advantages of small claims court are thus lost to the consumer.

Connecticut attorneys, as well as the National Institute for Consumer Justice, the Ralph Nader organization, and other attorneys who have studied the small claims courts from a national perspective, have made a number of proposals for overcoming the defendant's unfair advantage and other drawbacks in the present small-claims operation.

These proposals, which have been incorporated in the Vella legislation, will be discussed in the third installment of this series.

Raiders Win 1 And Lose 1

By LARRY AVERY

The Enfield High School Basketball Raiders split two games last week as they lost 70-59 to Norwich and beat Fermi High 91-72.

The Norwich Wildcats led 22-11 after the first period and this seemed to be prophetic as the Raiders eventually lost the game by the same 11 point margin. Each team scored 18 points in the second period as the team traded shots. Norwich increased the lead by outscoring the Raiders 13-8 to give them a 16 point bulge. Tim Murphy came back for Enfield in the final stanza with 10 points as the Raiders brought the score to within seven points with just a minute and a half left.

Two Wildcat buckets ended Enfield's hopes in this one as Norwich just put the game out of reach. Co-captain Paul DaSilva led Enfield with 21 points and Co-captain Tim Murphy added 18. Tom Distasio led all scorers with 22 points for Norwich. Major Williams had 14 for the Wildcats. Enfield made 41 percent of their field goal attempts while Norwich hit on 43 percent. The Raiders scored seven of eight from the foul line while Norwich went 12 for 17.

The Fermi Falcons traveled over to Enfield High for their game last Friday night and the Raiders came out on top 91-72. The Raiders scored the first nine points of the game and added 10 more to the margin before the game was over. The Raiders led 28-17 at the end of the first period but the Falcons managed to come to within three at one point in the second period.

Hayden rallied the Raider attack with 14 points of his own to give Enfield a 52-39 lead at the half way mark.

The Falcons rallied in the third period to outscore Enfield 15-10 on the strength of John Koperniak's 10 points. The Falcons were only trailing by nine with 2:45 left in the game and with DaSilva, Shirley and Boucher all on the bench with five fouls each for Enfield. Hayden and Carm Conte again rallied the Raiders as Enfield outscored the Falcons 24-13 in the final stanza to win 91-72.

Hayden scored 42 points for Enfield. Murphy netted 17 and DaSilva was held to just 11. Conte also had 11 for the Raiders. John Koperniak led the Falcons with 25 points as Jerry Lepore netted 14 and Dave Laraway had 17. The Raiders shot 48 percent from the floor while Fermi only shot 35 percent and that was the difference.

Laurence Climan, Music Man

John F. Kennedy Jr. High School's music man, Director of Bands Laurence Climan, doesn't have to tell you that he loves music, education and working with young musicians because it shows . . . on his face, in his mannerisms and from the intense excitement in the atmosphere at his home away from home, the band room he designed and decorated.

Director Climan should be best known for his involvement in music education in the Enfield school system but perhaps is better known for the controversy that surrounded him last year when he dropped a student from A Band because the boy failed to attend the Veterans' Day parade because of family obligations.

The intent of this article is not to rehash old news, rather to profile the man to better understand his motives and actions.

Climan On Discipline

Disappointed with general attitudes towards discipline Director Climan feels "nobody is pushing responsibility" these days. In music, he impresses upon his young musicians, discipline is what makes "their (the musicians) music happen."

Climan talks about self-control and responsibility, disciplines without which a band would lose its cohesion, damaging irreparably the end product, the music.

To his group of aspirant musicians, Climan stresses an "individual, personal discipline", which he also applies to himself as musician and educator.

When criticizing his students musical output, Director Climan makes the distinction between "professional criticism" and "personal attack". His approach is to criticize the "act or mistake" not the individual, counterbalancing the objection with an appropriate correction.

Background

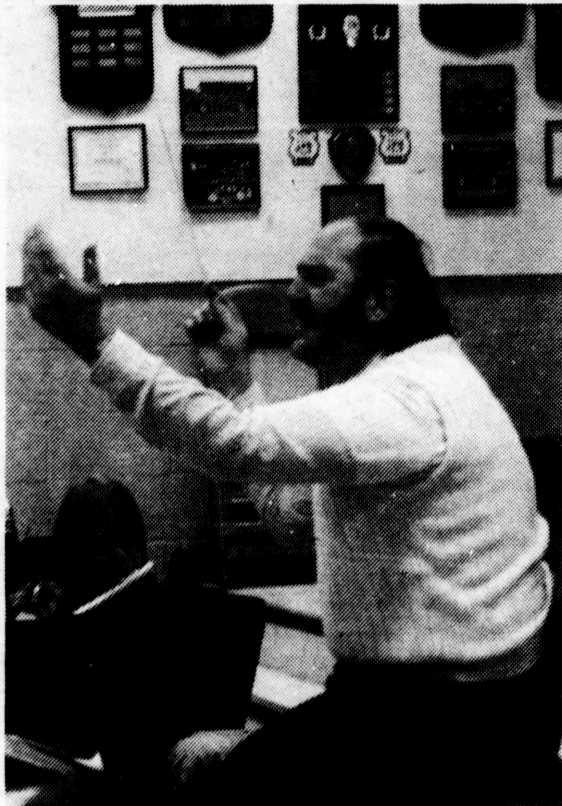

Self-control and responsibility were instilled in Laurence Climan early in life by his European born, Russian Jewish parents. The moment young Laurence picked up his first musical instrument, a $10 trumpet, he was encouraged to take lessons, mindful of the fact that no practicing meant no lessons.

By his own choice, the fledgling trumpeter practiced every morning before school, at lunchtime and after school. He built up to a discipline of four hours practice per day as an undergraduate at UConn, plus an additional four hours each night playing in a dance band. Remembering the times when he failed to practice, Climan admits today, "I wish I'd put in a little more time, I'd be better."

Of his four brothers and

sisters, Laurence was the only child to develop an interest in music. His father loved listening to music, until, at age 45, he took up the clarinet when Laurence began trumpet lessons.

Musical History

Climan began playing the trumpet, which he found in a closet at his Hartford home, while in fourth grade. At Weaver High School, Hartford, he joined the band and also studied at the Hartt School. He became an expert after-school shoe salesman to support his "musical habit".

Encouraged by his family and relatives to become a management man, he registered at UConn in Business Administration. Less than two weeks into the semester, he switched from management to a major in music, with a minor in education.

As an undergraduate, Kennedy's educator musician played in the orchestra and Huskie band, becoming president of both in his senior year. During his junior and senior years, Director Climan played first trumpet for the orchestra.

In 1955, Climan joined the Army not knowing that the trumpet he carried with him for good luck and companionship would be blarring for two years. He was assigned to the Third Armor Division Band, touring as a public relations group throughout Germany, Holland and Belgium.

He met his wife Trudy in Germany, where she was fleeing from Czechoslovakia during WW II. The Climans live in Enfield with children, Dan and Heidi, who have travelled to Germany twice with their parents to visit relatives.

Climan accepted his first teaching job in Enfield, where his parents, Mary and Frank Climan, had moved while Laurence was in college. He taught general music to a self-contained seventh grade at A.D. Higgins School. He later taught at Kosciuszko Junior High in the school's band program.

As director of J.F. Kennedy bands A and B, Climan introduces his students to all styles and forms of music, swing through rock, as well as the typical Sousa marches.

He lives music most of the week, instructing in a subject he enjoys most, and on weekends he relaxes listening to good music.

Elementary Students Read Best-Seller

Reading classes at Enfield Intermediate School have recently been introduced to their first best-selling novel, "Jonathan Livingston Seagull" by Richard Bach.

Since most books, if not all, making the best-seller list are too advanced for elementary school children, Stanley E. Strycharz, reading teacher, seized the opportunity to deviate from the usual textbook material.

In a letter recently sent home to parents, asking for permission to allow their children to attend the "Jonathan Livingston Seagull" movie, instructor Strycharz acknowledged that "curriculum cannot be limited to the boundaries of a classroom or the contents of a textbook."

Every student in the school listened to the best-selling novel in record form, while half that number participated in the curriculum which included an introductory book on seagulls, "Look At Gull" by Dave Wright, the novel and album, plus many classroom discussions on what was being said by author Bach in his story about a special seagull named Jonathan.

Learning vehicles were mimeographed papers with questions about seagulls, the novel and the meaning of the story. The most poignant question asked perhaps was "Which are you, the flock or Jonathan?"

Mr. Strycharz said that most students felt that sometimes they were the "flock", one of the crowd, while other times they were Jonathans, leaders and individuals.

The program culminated with 250 students attending the movie version of "Jonathan Livingston Seagull", adding yet another dimension to their understanding of the story's message.

Strycharz saw three levels of possible comprehension, "literal, interpretive and practical or applied" with a student's advancement to higher levels dependent upon his ability to comprehend.

Teacher Chris Pigot said some children took the story literally, as a story, while others delved more deeply into its meaning, applying the message to their own lives.

Instructor Strycharz likes to introduce new teaching material because he feels, "the more you know the better you understand", in other words, "The gull sees farthest who flies highest."

'Lamplighters' Stresses Closeness Not Rivalry

When Enrico Fermi High School was dedicated three years ago, Enfield then had two high schools in the system and the rivalry began.

One club, existing for almost 20 years at Enfield High School, decided to forego the competition because it had no place in their organization.

Consequently, the Lamplighters' Drama Guild extended itself to include both high schools, retaining the original name.

The students in the Lamplighters have always believed that rivalry has no place in the theatre and remaining true to their word, the two high schools produce jointly one show each year.

Presently the "Fermi wing" of the Lamplighters is staging "Sunrise At Campobello", which tells the story of the early years of Franklin Delano Roosevelt's battle with polio and his emergence as a major American political figure.

The Enfield High School Lamplighters will present in February, "Flowers For Algernon", a play inspired by the popular movie and Broadway play "Harvey".

Faculty Advisor for the Fermi Lamplighters, Franklin Gross, is pleased to admit that the students do most of the work. "The Lamplighters", he explains, "is a theatre guild run by the kids."

The students involved act as producers, directors and as Gross put it, "they (the students) really take over." Total production of every play is the responsibility of the students.

Duties include production and direction, acting, set design, lighting, costumes and the other essential tasks, often less glamour, in preparing for opening night.

The Lamplighters' Drama Guild is regarded as an extra-curricular activity though student participation far exceeds the one hour per week requirement.

Many months are devoted to production with students spending all of their free time, evenings and weekends preparing for curtain time.

One student explains her dedication. "It's hard work but nobody minds because it's also fun." Students say they share a "special closeness" unique to their organization. They are somehow changed when they leave the Lamplighters, having a more mature outlook on the world.

The Fermi Lamplighters will present "Campobello" Jan. 19 and 25, 26.

A new Lamplighter, Mark Davis, is portraying the invalid Roosevelt with veteran Lamplighter Terry DesRosiers playing his wife Eleanor.

Other leads now in rehearsal are: Betty Derosé, Chris Faille, Mike Mule, John Targonski, Jim Magee and Don Whiteway.

Launching the play into production is Ken Andrews; producer, and Bob Jones, director.

A Press reporter talked with student director Jones and members of the cast at a recent rehearsal in the school auditorium, equipped with professional theatre lighting, catwalk and a stage large enough for an operetta.

To the cast, membership in the Lamplighters is a maturing experience because students are required to assume almost total responsibility, to work as a theatrical team, to discipline themselves to learn scripts, to attend all rehearsals and to behave as professional theatre people.

Faculty advisor Gross sees a great "esprit de corps" in the group, which helps them attack difficult scripts with confidence and arrive early Saturday mornings for rehearsals without complaints.

The students interviewed describe their advisor and theatre teacher as the "personification of the Lamplighters' spirit." As one girl confided, "Mr. Gross is one of the most beautiful people in town."

They all agree that "he (Gross) has fought for us . . . trusts in us . . . believes in people."

With such sincerity in leadership, the Lamplighters, which not only boasts longevity but also an alumni guild, promises to be a continuous stimulus to creative thought and action for Fermi and Enfield High students and alumni.

Listening to the words and music based on the novel, "Jonathan Livingston Seagull", left, John Belorit, Joni Legasse and Ronald Albrizio discuss what they here and read. Enfield Intermediate School students, from

Basketball Jamboree Is This Saturday

The Enfield Athletic Club is sponsoring a basketball jamboree this Saturday night at 6 p.m. at the Enrico Fermi High School gym. Three games will be presented for the price of one. Admission is $1.00 for adults and 50 cents for students. Children under 12 are free when accompanied by an adult.

The first contest will be between the Windsor eighth grade basketball team and the Farmington eighth grade basketball team.

The second game will start at 7:15 when the Stone Age Basketball League All-Stars will face the league leading, unbeaten Barnes Construction combo.

The Enfield Athletic Club will wind up the action against the East Hartford Explorers with an 8:30 starting time. The Enfield Athletic Club plays in the National Amateur Basketball Association's Southern Division under the sponsorship of Techni Products of Longmeadow.

The Windsor and Farmington eighth grade teams are considered to be among the best in their age group in the area.

Playing for the Stone Age All-Stars will be Tom Tyler and Mike Angelica of the Amvets, John Porcello and Dave Petrusson of Enfield Dairy, Gus Carlander and Jim Lyver of Vic's Cafe, Bob Zawada and Steve Caveralli of Enfield A.C., Joe Conway and Rich Nolan of Fran's Restaurant, and Bernie Curry and Ken Kalva of Kelly Trailer.

The Enfield Athletic Club features some fine college and high school basketballers such as Nate Adgar of the University of Rhode Island and Steve Waterman of Springfield College. Dwight Tolliver of the University of Rhode Island, Jim Akins of Wesleyan, Rich Kuhlbars of the University of Hartford, Tim Vincent of Babson College, Bill Andrews of Clemson, Bob Tetreault of St. Michaels, John Benson of UConn and Ken Phelan of Fairfield University make up the rest of the college contingent.

Joe Vesce of Enfield High and Leon Craig and Jake Edwards of Hartford High School make up the rest of the team. Alfred Davis is the team's head coach and Frank Gage is his able assistant.

The East Hartford Explorers have always provided some exciting basketball in the area and the game looks like a good one. Playing for the Explorers will be: Don Lewis, Hank Brown, Tim Kolodajeiz, Doug Melody, Bill Hollowaty, Billy Jones, Russ Tyler, Stan Pelcher and Al Vaughn.

The first game starts at 6:00 p.m. with the feature at 8:15.

Joe Conway was high scorer for Fran's with 11 points on 5 baskets and a foul shot. Rich Nolan had 10 points on 5 baskets for Fran's.

Nixon Thanks GOP Women

Mrs. Rosemary de Ganahl, editor of "Trunk-Lines", the Suffield Republican Women's Club Newsletter, has received a personal thank you note from President Nixon for support of the President expressed in an editorial she wrote in a recent issue of the newsletter.

Nixon wrote: "This is just a note, but it comes with my personal appreciation for your forthright support. I am deeply grateful for the understanding and sense of fairness expressed in your statement. Your encouraging words are indeed welcome and deeply reassuring, and I hope you will pass along my sincere thanks to all the members of the Suffield Republican Women's Club who joined you in your heartening message. With my best wishes to each of you. Sincerely, Richard Nixon."

In her editorial, Mrs. de Ganahl had stated that "As with all our Presidents, this man was chosen from the people, by the people and elevated to highest office in the land, to fulfill a mandate given him by their votes . . ."

"President Nixon was elected by 60 per cent of the American voters. He was the people's choice — not that of a Parliament, or a Politiburo, or even a Congress. We don't know of any other man who could have done a better job, laboring under such pressing circumstances, and he certainly should be getting a fairer shake from us than he is."

"He deserves our support and he deserves to know he has it."

The editorial came to the attention of Republican officials and resulted in telephone calls from other parts of the state and letters also, including one from George Bush, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, who said "Words of support such as expressed in your Newsletter cannot help but be a source of inspiration and encouragement, not only to all of us at Republican Headquarters, but also to the President."
