Hallmark Offers Stock To Workers

A significant portion of the stock in Hallmark Cards Incorporated will be made available to employees, as a group, under a trusteeship representing the Hallmark Employee Stock Ownership Plan (ESOP), Donald J. Hall, president and chief executive officer, announced.

The program to convert the holdings of the company's profit sharing program to ESOP was developed, Hall said, "in order to give Hallmark employees participation in the growth of the company and to permit the firm to remain privately owned and locally controlled."

The announcement, he added, "represents the most significant change in the ownership of Hallmark Cards Incorporated since its founding in 1910."

In a letter to employees, Hall said "my parents, Joyce and Elizabeth Hall, myself and other members of the family want all Hallmark employees to participate in the ownership of the company and to share more directly in its success and good fortune.

"Eventually, most of the stock in the estates of my parents will go into this fund, replacing the general investments the major bank trustees have made with corporate profit sharing contributions in the past."

The elder Hall, founder and chairman of the board, and Mrs. Hall have signed agreements under which ESOP will purchase more than 75 per cent of the stock in their estates. It is planned that virtually all of the cash received for their stock will be included in the long range charitable provisions of their estates.

New Location Needed

With the slated demolition of the old Smyth Dairy barn on Hazard Avenue in Enfield, (above), the Enfield Jaycees and Jaycee Wives have to find another location to resume their glass recycling program, the only ecology program of its kind in the area. Glass recycling has been a project of the Jaycees since the program was initiated in November, 1971. In the past three and one-half years, the two organizations have combined efforts and worked approximately 3,500 hours. The work involves sorting and crushing the glass to ready it for delivery to a glass recycling plant. Because of this effort and community willingness to deposit glass, approximately 90 tons of glass a year has been diverted from the town's landfill. In order that this program be continued, a new location is needed. Anyone with a suggestion is asked to call 745-9981.

Town Resident Wins $100,000 In Lottery

"I won't be in work today," stated Terrance Dorsey of 41 Till Street, Enfield. "I've just won the $100,000!"

The nervous Dorsey was completely overwhelmed as Captain Cash called out his name as the winner of the $100,000 Lottery Jackpot Prize. The event took place at the Irish American Home, Commerce St., Glastonbury, on Mar. 13.

Dorsey, age 28, works for the First National Stores Bakery in East Hartford. "I had many plans for the money before I came here," said Dorsey, "but now I don't know."

Dorsey started on his $100,000 journey to the Lottery's Jackpot Prize with a $5 win for a 2-digit match on a weekly Double Play ticket dated Feb. 13. He chocked up an additional $250 when his name was drawn as one of twenty Double Play finalists at the Mar. 6 Jackpot Drawing. The $100,000 prize Dorsey captured on March 13, brings his total winnings to $100,255.

Lawrence Cacciola, deputy comptroller, was on hand to present Dorsey with a $10,000 check at the drawing ceremonies, along with a certificate guaranteeing payment of $10,000 a year for the next 9 years.

Magazine Article Features Rapid Growth Of Enfield

A long, detailed and interesting article on Enfield will appear in next month's issue of the Country Journal.

The article, entitled, "The Town That Wanted To Grow" tells of the phenomenal growth of Enfield, in population, home building and regional shopping centers. It tells of the change since World War II from a sleepy, country "bedroom" town to the present and of its change from a selectman form of government to the manager-council form of government.

The eleven-page article is generously interspersed with many maps and photographs. Some of these include lower Enfield Street, Enfield Square, the old and new town halls, aerial views and Albert Vesce in front of his bicycle shop on North Main Street.

The opening paragraph of the article reads:

"Time was, if you mentioned Enfield, Connecticut, someone might have the vague notion that you could fish for shad there in the spring. Or they might half-recollect passing through on its lovely old main street before the interstate was built. A news buff might remember it as the place where the selectman pulled the gun on the assistant building inspector."

Another paragraph reads: "But Enfield will never again be a small town, and its staggering rate of change has left some important gaps to be filled. One young professional told me that although he works in Enfield, he could not live there. It has the size of a city, but none of the traditional richness of a city environment — aesthetically, culturally, gastronomically."

The article was written by Anne S. Warner of East Windsor. While watching Enfield's linear city creep north, Mrs. Warner looks after a twenty-room farmhouse, two children and a husband. This is her third article for the Country Journal, the most recent being "The Varmints Are Back!" which appeared in the March issue.

The Country Journal is in its second year of publication. It is published monthly except February in Brattleboro, Vt.

Its publisher is William S. Blair and the editor is Richard M. Ketchum.

"The Magazine of New England" as it is called, is a slick-paper publication dealing with people, events and places in the New England countryside. —EAM

Permission Granted

The Somers Conservation Commission has given permission to an Enfield man to build driveways across Schanade Brook to Turnpike Rd. from three already built houses.

Wilfred Eigenbrod had built two houses off Turnpike Rd. in Somers before the town's wetlands ordinance was approved so the commission has little control over the development.

Eigenbrod, however, is complying with the commission's recommendations and has room in the parcel to build three more houses.

Other recent action by the Conservation Commission included a decision to ask the Board of Finance for a $1,000 budget increase to pay engineers for 1975-76. The commission has a $1,500 budget this year.

The commission also has sent a letter to the Board of Finance asking for a $1,000 donation to the Tolland County Soil Conservation Service. The Zoning Board also made a similar request.

Joe Vachon Re-Elected

Recently-elected officers of the Enfield Fish and Game Club are, Joe Vachon, president; Bill Desso, vice-president; Bill Thompson, secretary and Ed Olschafskie, treasurer.

Somers' State Scholars

William B. Atkinson, Principal of Somers Jr.-Sr. High School, has announced that six students at the school have been designated as State of Connecticut Scholars for 1975. They are: Diane Abbe, Carolyn Benson, David Buckley, Craig Clark, Margaret Lynch and Cecilia McElheron.

These students were among 3500 scholars who were selected from an applicant group of approximately 8900 students. Selection was based on a combined score which weighed academic ability and potential for academic success in college.

Randall Resigns

Housing Authority chairman George Randall has submitted his resignation to the selectmen and has given no reason. Randall has served as commission chairman since its formation seven years ago. He has said that he would continue in the position for about 30 days to allow an orderly transfer of authority.

During Randall's term, Somers has had tremendous growth including 24 housing units built in the Woodcrest complex on Battle St. Plans for 30 more units are expected to be completed in the near future.

Resisting Septic System

Resistance to a giant septic system ran high at a recent meeting or property owners and residents of the Somers area.

Several Somersville property owners have objected to the limitations the system will put on future development. The community septic system is designed to handle only the existing buildings.

Residents from other parts of the town have objected to being forced to pay part of the bill for a project from which they will receive no benefits.

The Somersville opponents have opted for sewerage the section and connecting to Enfield sewer system in the Green Manor line or putting a small treatment plant in town that could handle future developments.

The proposed system is designed to fill the requirements of an eight-year-old State Department of Environmental protection order to the town of Somers to stop polluting the Scantic River.

A $6 million municipal sewer system was turned down by referendum last year because it would allow uncontrolled development of the town.

For the proposed septic system Sewer commission officials are expecting that state and federal grants will pay $416,000 of the estimated $916,000 to cover the cost of the system if approved. The town's share would then be about $500,000 to be divided equally between taxpayers throughout the town and owners of the property served by it.

Cohen Campaigns

Somers Republican David W. Cohen has indicated that he, as a conservative, is an advocate of smaller government, the smaller the better. He has already begun campaigning for the Republican nomination to oppose newly elected Democratic State Sen. Robert Houley, D-35th Dist., in the next election.

The 34-year-old electrical contractor feels that the move is the only way to beat a man "as firmly entrenched as Houley."

Cohen is president of the Electrical Construction and Maintenance and is chairman of the state board of electrical examiners.

He is married to the former Lynne Sayet of Vernon and the father of four children ages eight months to 12½ years. He was raised in New Haven and attended Hillhouse High School and Hofstra University in Long Island, N.Y., as a political science and history major.

Social Security Crisis

More and more economists are forced to admit that the Social Security System in the United States of America is heading into bankruptcy.

Social Security trust funds currently total $45.9 billion, but that is far from the comfortable "reserve" it is supposed to be. By conservative estimates, the government will have to start dipping into the reserve next year at a rate which would exhaust it in 15 years. More gloomy forecasts of the outlook for inflation and recession could raise the deficit to the point where the reserve would be exhausted by 1980 — five years from now.

Congress must recognize the implications of these projections and put Social Security's fiscal house in order. It is hard to see how this can be accomplished without remodeling the program from the ground up. In the scope of its benefits and eligibility, it has strayed too far from the concept that brought it to life 40 years ago, as a means for American workers to supplement their pensions, savings and other retirement income by paying into an "insurance" plan during their productive years.

That concept is still good, but it is not going to work if Congress keeps burdening the system with commitments the system cannot keep. That is what it has done in providing for benefits to increase automatically with the cost of living while making no allowance for fluctuations in the amount being paid into the system.

The current combination of inflation and recession in our economy is producing one crisis. Benefits are climbing, while high unemployment reduces collections from payroll taxes. Another deeper crisis looms further in the future, when the recent decline in the birthrate begins to affect the size of our labor force in relation to the number of Americans who will be drawing Social Security benefits — or expecting to.

It has been suggested that the trust fund be abandoned altogether, and that Social Security simply be added to the federal budget to be financed each year out of income taxes. If Congress goes down that path it will have to admit that it has wrecked Social Security and is deciding to put all Americans over 65 on welfare. That, in a word, is what such a proposal really means.

Giving American workers a chance to build up a personal account in Social Security to help them through retirement was an honest program. If they find on retirement that their personal account does not exist, and they are dependent instead on Congress to vote them a welfare check in their old age, they are going to feel cheated, and they'll be right.

'TRIPLETS'

Letters To The Editor An Unconstitutional Law

To The Editor:

An open letter to Paul A. LaRosa of Hartford:

I am opposed to Bill No. 6209 which you have proposed to the State Legislature. This bill would deny the right to trial by jury for motorcycle operators. The alleged intention of your bill is to clear the Court of helmet cases.

Persons arrested for so-called helmet violations should not even be required to appear in Court, much less to be accused of violating a null and void statute.

Your bill is repugnant to the United States Constitution and the 1818 Connecticut Constitution.

U. S. Constitution: Art. 3 Sec. 2 Par 3: "The trial of all crimes... shall be by jury..." Art. 6: "In all criminal prosecutions, the accused shall enjoy the right to a speedy and public trial by an impartial jury..." Amend. 7: "... the right of trial by jury shall be preserved." Amend. 9: "The enumeration in the Constitution of certain rights shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people."

Conn. (1818 legal) Constitution: Sec. 21: "The right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate."

This means that unless a defendant, when called upon to plea, clearly waives his right to trial by jury (of 12), a legal trial cannot be held. (Sec. 54-82 and Amend. 9.)

The mandatory helmet law is itself in direct violation of the United States Constitution: Art. 4 Sec. 2, Amendments 4, 5, 9, 10, 13, and 14; Connecticut Constitution: Sec. 2, 8, 9, 10 and 12, of Art. First.

The General Assembly, having adopted and passed the tyrannical and dictatorial helmet law, is itself in violation of United States Criminal Code: Title 18, Sec. 241 and 242.

May I remind you that when you became a Representative of the State, you took an oath under Article 6 of the U. S. Constitution, which obligates you to preserve the liberties and rights of motor cycle operators (under Amend. 14) to operate their motor vehicles.

"The Constitution provides for a system of courts by which the citizens can test unconstitutional laws and strike them down. Citizens have not only the right but the obligation to challenge unconstitutional laws. When they fail to do so, unconstitutional laws are permitted to remain in force, to the detriment of liberty and safety of the citizens."

"No one is bound to obey an unconstitutional law and no courts are bound to enforce it." (16 Am Jr 2d Sec. 177)

If we are to be recognized as "The Constitution State", let us learn, revive and preserve our Constitution and stop passing arbitrary, unconstitutional laws.

I will file suit and/or support any suit against this bill if it is adopted.

Try It, You'll Like It!

To The Editor:
As the season of Lent started our children brought home a small box with a slot on top. The box is for our mealtime offering for children without enough to eat. This box on our table is a mealtime reminder for us to help children in need. It asks us to share our love and our food; and also to express our thanksgiving to God for our blessings with just a little more than a mealtime prayer.

That small box is staying on our table all year round. We feel great because suddenly, it is so easy and painless to "do something". When we see pictures of starving children, it still hurts, of course, but the pangs of conscience are milder for, at last, we are trying to help in a small but constant way.

We put a small, thin dime in the box at each meal... but that little bit adds up to nine dollars a month. At times, a generous friend or relative may visit and seeing the box on the table will choose to put a dollar into it. People want to help but just don't know where their help will do the most good; therefore this little box presents a perfect opportunity to "do something" and without any fuss or bother. The money will be brought to our church-school and the nuns will send it along to the missionaries (Holy Childhood) serving-helping the hungry children of the world.

In time, perhaps we will try to increase our mealtime offering to make a $15 dollar monthly donation, the cost of "adopting" a needy child in a desolate country.

Most churches can provide the names and addresses of reliable organizations that help the needy and perhaps this newspaper would print some of them for us. I do wish that every interested family could be provided with a mealtime offering box by their favorite charity.

But we can always make our own boxes, pasting a picture of a starving child on it and then making that particular child your very own — to help. Gum ball machine banks are great for the kids who wish to send their penny-a-day. Also, now that Spring is here, the birds won't need our birdseed, we could feed the children instead of the birds. That little box of usually bird-seed money might help some child sing a song of joy.

Those little boxes filled with pennies, nickels and dimes given faithfully, day by day could change some little someone's world. Share your love with a child that hasn't enough to eat.

Try it — you'll like it. You won't be sorry you invited that child to your table.

Public Hearing On 6 "Blue Law" Bills On March 26th

Ever since the 17th century, the Sabbath has been a legal, as well as religious, day of rest in Connecticut.

In the General Assembly, debate over the "blue laws" that enforce Sunday business closings has always been as sure a sign of spring as the first robin.

On March 26, the Legislature's General Law committee will usher in this year's blue law controversy with a public hearing on six different bills to allow some, or all, to stay open on Sundays.

While attempts to repeal the laws have always failed, the legislature has regularly tinkered with the ban on Sunday business.

The result is a complicated maze of exemptions. For instance, antique, but not gift stores can do business seven days a week. You can buy fresh, but not canned carrots in your local grocery.

"You can buy a plant on Sundays but not the pot to put it in," complained General Law chairman Rep.

Al Webber (D-New Haven). "You can buy a dirty magazine, but not Pampers for your baby."

Most legislators acknowledge that the laws are "archaic." But many say they'd like to find a legal way to permit neighborhood stores to operate on Sunday but keep large chain and discount stores closed.

Senatore Charles Alfano (D-Enfield) has voted against any attempt to change the Blue Laws for the past 16 years.

"Ever since I've been up here, I've been opposed to changing them. But right now, my position is flexible and I might be able to make a change," Alfano said.

He explained his opposition in the past was because "labor unions and the Chamber of Commerce are all in agreement, there would be a problem if they were repealed. People would have to work on Sunday, increasing cost of operations."

"However, violations have been so flagrant it might be time to vote for changing," Alfano said.

Representative John Morrison said "there's a lot of silly stuff in the law."

But the Enfield Democrat added, "I don't want to see the act completely repealed. If we open those stores on Sundays, people from Massachusetts will be flooding over. There will be traffic jams. And people will have to work on Sundays."

Representative Astrid Hanzalek (R-Suffield) is looking for "a compromise between the people who insist on keeping stores open seven days a week and those who are perfectly happy with the present system."

"There's no question that the blue laws are an anachronism. But there are areas where people feel very strongly about keeping them," said the legislature whose district includes Enfield.

The bills that will be discussed at the public hearing range from Enfield Representative Richard Cressotti's call for a study of the issue to complete repeal of the blue laws.

A "local option" bill would permit each town to decide for itself what business and employment would be allowed on Sunday.

There's a proposal to let religious groups who observe the Sabbath on Saturday conduct bingos, bazaars, Las Vegas night and games of chance on Sunday. Merchants whose religion establishes Saturday as their day of rest can already close their stores on that day and conduct business on Sunday.

Senator Stanley Page (R-Guilford) has introduced a bill aimed at cleaning up the laws by permitting entertainment, travel, public information and health-related businesses to remain open on Sundays.

Webber is proposing a one-year trial plan that would allow stores to stay open from one to five p.m. He claimed that most of the advocates of total repeal of the laws are willing to go along with his measure.

Twin-Trailer Bill To Come Up Again

Supporters of twin-trailer trucks will get another chance this year to argue in favor of allowing the vehicles on state highways.

A bill to allow the double-trailer trucks on limited access highways in Connecticut has been raised for public hearing by the General Assembly's Transportation Committee.

The measure probably qualified as the most eagerly-opposed bill in the legislature last year. The House, in fact, took a special roll call vote on sending it back to committee so that lawmakers could go on record as being against it.

So far there isn't much indication that the sentiment against the twin-trailer trucks has subsided. But supporters of the bill say that the state's economy and energy problems make the vehicles attractive.

State Senator Richard Schneller (D-Essex), the bill's sponsor, says that the twin-trailer trucks make hauling freight cheaper and could mean lower prices for some consumer goods.

"I fully realize these are not necessarily popular bills with automobile drivers," he acknowledged. "I can understand when people get annoyed with trucks."

"But the question is how much of a price we're willing to pay to keep these trucks off the road. All I'm interested in doing is getting that question to a public hearing."

Schneller's bill would increase the present maximum length of trucks permitted on state limited access highways from 55 to 65 feet, and increase maximum weight from 74,000 to 80,000 pounds.

Arguments against the twin trucks usually stress safety, road wear and the future of the state's rail service.

Supporters of the trucks say those claims aren't really logical. "It seems to me to be more of an emotional issue than one based on fact," said Transportation Committee Chairman Sen. J. Martin Hennessey (D-Wethersfield).

The Motor Transport Association of Connecticut has been one of the chief supporters of the bill.

Their lobbyist, John Blascow, claims that twin-trailer trucks have a better safety record than regular trucks — and only a tenth as many accidents per mile as cars.

"They reduce the wear on highways rather than increase it because they spread the weight out over a greater distance," he added.

Blascow claimed that his group also supported better rail service. But railroads, he claimed, will not take shipments under 10,000 pounds. "The only way these shipments can move is by truck."

Since 35 states, including those bordering on Connecticut, he added, the state's ban on the vehicles constitutes a problem for shippers.

"We've lost a heck of a lot of business and industry because this state doesn't have a viable transportation system," he said. "I'm talking about both railroads and trucks."

None of these arguments, however, have made much impression on Enfield state legislators.

"I'm absolutely against the twin trailer trucks," said Rep. Cornelius O'Leary. "They're dangerous and unnecessary."

Rep. John Morrison said he was concerned that using double van trucks might mean "taking jobs away from some drivers."

"I'm not totally convinced that they're safe, either," he added.

Rep. Richard Cressotti said he had mixed opinions on the subject. "I haven't decided yet," he said. "There are advantages as far as savings go. But I'm concerned about the elimination of jobs and the safety factor."

The Senate did not go through the twin trailer truck debate last year, since the bill was killed in the House. Veteran Democrat Charles Alfano said last week that he did not have enough information to make a decision.

"The decision should be based on the impact to highway safety and repair and maintenance costs," he said.

Seven Per Cent Sales Tax Effective April 1

Enfield legislators split 3-to-2 last week on the bill to increase the state sales tax to seven percent.

Three out of four of the area Democratic lawmakers voted for the increase. Representative Richard Cressotti was the exception. Representative Astrid Hanzalek (R-Suffield) voted with her party against it.

The Democratic majority in the state House and Senate won approval of the April 1 sales tax hike last week despite defections by many members of the party in both chambers.

The House approved the increase 85-57, with a number of Democrats voting no, and three Republicans splitting with their party to support the tax hike.

The Senate approved the raise 22-12. All the Republicans and five Democrats opposed the measure.

Senator Charles Alfano spoke on the floor of the senate telling the body, "if anyone has justification to take the floor and say I'm going to vote against it, I feel I have."

The Suffield Democrat whose district includes Enfield, explained that passage of the bill "has probably a more severe impact upon my constituency than any other."

"Almost all the merchants in the area are at a disadvantage. Consumers can cross the state line into Massachusetts and pay no tax on clothing. So, the 7 percent sales tax is going to have a real severe, serious impact — especially in Enfield where we have one of the largest shopping centers in Connecticut."

Alfano said Enfield merchants he spoke to "are not concerned with other alternatives. They're concerned this increase will have a serious impact on their businesses."

However, Alfano announced he was going to vote for the increase because "I have to be responsible."

"I have to consider the state of Connecticut as a whole," he said. "It should make every effort to pay its debts."

Alfano added that he will review his position on the subject in July when the General Assembly will be presented with a complete tax package.

In one of the more dramatic speeches of the long House debate, Rep. Cornelius O'Leary defended the increase in taxing "out of concern for the less privileged groups of the state."

O'Leary attacked GOP arguments that the Governor should avoid any new taxes by making drastic cuts in state spending.

"I thought that philosophy had been dead since Franklin Roosevelt took office — that the most important thing is the large pocketbooks of the well-to-do," he said.

The state needs income, O'Leary said, in order "to do for people what they cannot do for themselves."

He criticized the Republicans for asking voters in a recent survey whether they would prefer cut-backs in service or new taxes. "Any taxpayer would opt for a decrease in services when faced with such a flat choice," he said. "But we in the legislature know better — we know that the heat has to be paid, people have to eat and groceries have to be bought."

"We're not trying to be responsible at the expense of the needy. We're trying to be responsible because we know there are people who are needy."

O'Leary claimed that "all the fat has been trimmed away from the budget."

But, he continued, the state is still faced with a deficit "and the only solution we've heard from the other side of the aisle is cut, cut, cut regardless of who gets hurt."

"I can't support that philosophy," he said. "The state has a responsibility and as a legislator I'm willing to face up to that responsibility."

Two Enfield Democratic representatives are members of the Legislature's Finance Committee which voted to bring the question to the floor of the House and Senate for consideration.

Richard Cressotti voted to defeat the proposal in committee and John Morrison voted to send it to the General Assembly.

Cressotti cited increased unemployment and the effect he predicts the increases have on Enfield businesses as the reasons for his action.

"Before raising the tax, I hoped we would review all the legislators' proposals for increasing revenue," Cressotti said.

Morrison claimed he had "not received any correspondence from any consumer" on the sales tax.

"I've just been pressured by the Chamber of Commerce and stores. Every store sent the same form letter and said the same thing."

"If people are not going to buy, it's not going to be because of the sales tax, but because of the economy," Morrison said. He pointed out that when the state had a seven percent sales tax before, "the shopping centers were filled with Massachusetts cars."

He added he believes the only alternative to raising the tax would be a state income tax "which my constituents don't want."

Another highlight of the evening was the presentation by the Commander of Post 18, Amvets, a check in the amount of $200 to the scoutmaster who told the audience that the money would go toward the cost of sending the scouts to summer camp.

On leave from the Air Force and attending was John Gadarowski who was the first Eagle Scout in the troop.

Following the program coffee and cake were served. One of the cakes was made by Mrs. Maggio in the shape of a scout.

The scoutmaster also thanks the members of the troop committee and all other parents who helped make the past year a success.

An Orthodox Easter

The date of Easter was determined by the First Ecumenical Council of the Christian Church in the fourth century, meeting in Nicaea. It was this Council in 325 A.D., with three hundred eighteen Bishops, representing all of Christendom, assembled to discuss some of the problems facing the early Christian Church.

One of the stipulations of that Council was that Easter must be celebrated on the first Sunday following the first full moon of the Spring Equinox (March 21st) but always after the Hebrew Passover.

These stipulations were corroborated by the Council of Antioch in 341 A.D. and supported by such well known churchmen as Athanasios the Great and St. Epiphanius of Cyprus.

In the year 360 A.D., the Jews adopted a new calendar which affected the calculation of the date of Passover and the date of the Spring Equinox. The beginning of Passover was changed from the 14th to the 15th of Nisan. The Jewish lunar year is shorter than the solar year by ten days. This necessitated the addition of one month every leap year, which occurs seven times during a 19 year cycle. Next year, 1976, the Jews will observe a leap year, thereby adding one month to their lunar year.

G. Fox Craft Classes

G. Fox & Co. announces the Spring schedule of Create-a-Craft classes to begin Mar. 31.

Highlighting the session of classes which will include courses in sewing, needlecrafts, exercise and decorating for the home will be a new cooking class in Basic French Cooking. Elizabeth Benson, owner-operator of a cooking school in Essex and translator of the classic French cookbook "Gastronomie Pratique" will instruct the four-week class featuring the easy, versatile, tried-and-true methods that have been used by generations of French chefs. The class will be held on Tuesdays in Hartford from 10:15 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. and will include sampling and recipes.

Terrarium Nurseries will also be introduced this session. In workshop classes, author and terrarium expert, Robert Baur, will show the easy and inexpensive way to start annuals and vegetable seeds in miniature window greenhouses to set outdoors later. This four-week course will meet Thursdays in Hartford evenings beginning April 3 from 6:30-8:30 p.m.

Sewers will have the opportunity to enroll in several different classes including beginner sewing, Sew Easy with Knits Basic 6, swimwear or sewing sport-jackets or slacks for men. Sewing for the home will include six week courses in custom drapery making, slipcovering, special window treatments (valances, Roman shades, swags, jabots) and a special three-week course in making throw pillows and replacement covers for worn-out seat cushions on chairs and sofas. Upholstery, wallcovering installation clinics and interior decorating round out the offerings for those interested in learning money-saving do-it-yourself techniques for home improvement.

Exercise and shape-up classes will take in belly dance, dance aerobics, yoga, Weight Watchers and tennis. The three two-hour tennis course featuring the Graduated Teaching Method will teach the forehand, backhand, serve, scoring and rules of the game.

Needlework, bargello, crochet, quilt classes will be back by popular request along with several cooking classes and cake decorating.

A brochure listing times, dates and the nominal fee for each course is available by calling or writing the Public Relations Department in the G. Fox Hartford store.

The "Mouse Will Roar"

Today, through Saturday the Enfield Lamplighter Drama group will present the smash comedy hit "The Mouse That Roared."

The story is mainly about a tiny 14th century European country, the Duchy of Grand Fenwick, and their troubled economy. As a result, Tully Bascom (played by Brian Smith) is ordered to invade the United States by his Grand Duchess Gloriana (played by Wendy Houlberg.) Hysterical scenes and an even stranger outcome make this production not one to miss.

Tickets are $1.50 and will be sold at the door. Alumni tickets will be honored and refreshments will be available. For more information contact Enfield High School.

Unique Program At Kosciuszko

Kosciuszko Junior High School will feature a new program for students in the seventh and the eighth grade beginning next fall. Administrators are planning to develop an interdisciplinary program through team teaching.

The new program is designed to provide the kind of educational atmosphere which will possess more structure and continuity in your child's social and academic development. After many months of research and study teachers and administrators at Kosciuszko feel confident that such a program will more efficiently develop the child's self-concept. The child will develop better communications among his peers. Behavior and attitude towards school will improve. Such a program will lend itself more consistency in handling discipline in school. Student attendance will improve.

Each grade level will be divided into teams of 125 students. There will be four teams in the seventh and the eighth grades. Four academic teachers will be assigned to each team. At the outset the students will be grouped heterogenously. The team teachers will then take the students and regroup them homogenously according to interests and ability. Such an organization will allow for greater flexibility and teacher planning.

The ninth grade program will not be changed.

The administration and the staff at Kosciuszko are still developing the program. They have been visiting other schools with similar programs and attending conferences pertaining to this type of program.

Culture Day

Enfield High School's International Club will hold a Culture Day tomorrow when students will have the opportunity to "visit" countries from around the world to experience a taste of foreign cultures. Presentations from Japan, Thailand, Greece, the Soviet Union, Latin America, Germany and Africa will feature exotic cuisine, folk dancing and native music, slides, and native costumes, and other activities indigenous to these cultures.

Culture day will use passports which will enable participants to enter these "Islands" of culture, temporarily transplanted to Enfield High. These passports will be sold to students so that the proceeds may be turned over to the Enfield American Field Service Organization, which sponsors foreign exchange students. Parents and friends are invited.

Students Prepare For 200th

Suffield Academy student projects include several which will highlight the nation's Bicentennial and the town's part in its observance. Headmaster Paul G. Sanderson said the students are encouraged to develop projects which may contribute to the general Suffield Bicentennial effort.

Judy Fun, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas E. Fun, of Mountain Rd., Suffield, is working with Fred Stevens of Ridgefield on a town reconstruction which will include pictures of existing historical sites and labeling of sites of former important industries such as the first cigar factory and the paper mills.

Two groups of students are interested in the development of colonial architecture. Tener Goodwin, daughter of Mrs. Susan Goodwin of Russell Ave. and Kate Kennedy of Windsor Locks are working on one project, and Alejandra Longarini of Pottsville, Pa. and Alvie Batiste of St. Croix, U. S. Virgin Islands on a similar one.

Miss Goodwin and Miss Kennedy are collecting artifacts of the Suffield area, which Longarini and Batiste are concentrating on a slide presentation with commentary.

Timothy Rice, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles M. Rice of North Main St. is making a photographic study of the town and producing post cards.

Frederick Lane of Wethersfield is making an in-depth study of the town government to offer a picture of Suffield "now", as compared to Suffield "then". He expects to be a frequent visitor at town meetings, as well as board and commission meetings and public hearings, as he gathers data for his project.

Robert Zaczynski, son of Dr. and Mrs. Edward J. Zaczynski of Hill St., is using the academy as the hub for a series of historical bicycle tours fanning out in six to ten-mile loops. With each tour will be appropriate commentary, and each loop includes points of historic interest and scenic and picnic stops.

Joins Project VOTE

Suffield High School is among approximately 20 percent of the state's some 270 high schools who has agreed to date to participate in Project VOTE, a statewide voter registration program for Connecticut's 18-year-olds, being sponsored by the Secretary of the State's Office and 17 statewide community groups.

"While I am pleased that 57 schools so far have decided to participate in the voter education and registration contest aspects of the Project VOTE program, I am hopeful that as the contest deadline draws nearer the number of schools participating will substantially increase," Mrs. Schaffer said.

"The community groups participating in Project VOTE have agreed to launch a local effort to assist schools in voter education and registration programs. I would also urge any members of the general public who are interested in assisting in school registration programs to contact their local school principals."

The deadline for the contest aspect of Project VOTE is May 9. Schools are competing for six statewide prizes based on percentage of registration of eligible students.

KML Needs Volunteers

Because of the extended hours and increased programs offered by the Kent Memorial Library of Suffield, more volunteers are needed to help the limited staff. Budget requests to the town for the coming year include one additional full-time employee, but even if this request is granted, more volunteers will be needed.

The library has extended hours to include Wednesday morning and the response has been overwhelming and will be continued. Other morning hours are Friday and Saturday at 10 a.m. Programs for senior citizens are offered Friday morning. A film "Romeo and Juliet" will be shown tomorrow at 10. Refreshments and minibuses transportation are provided for these programs.

Anyone interested in volunteering two hours or more at the library is asked to contact Norann Coggins (668-5450) or the Library Director Maxine Beckwith at the library (668-2325).

The Friends of the Library's chief money-making project to assist the Kent Memorial Library is the booksale held each year at the Octoberfest. It is not too soon to start sorting out books now for the sale. The Friends can use any kind of a book and will be happy to pick them up. Contact either Helen Densem (668-2377) during the day, or Irv Fiedman (668-7023) in the evening and they will pick up any books you may have to contribute.

Flower Show

Mrs. Charles F. Donaghy, chairman of the Suffield Garden Club's Spring Flower Show, has announced the club's show will be held May 15 from 2 to 8 p.m. at Suffield Village. The Flower Show is considered a "civic project" by the Garden Club, the chairman said and it will involve other organizations in the town as well. The club has had a good experience with other organizations participating in the show, such as Girl Scouts, in the past, she added.

Schedules of the spring flower show which include divisions for entries and general rules were distributed to members at the March meeting.

Rte. 190 Relocation

State Rep. Astrid Hanzalek, R-Suffield, will hold an informal hearing March 25 at 7:30 p.m. in Town Hall to discuss the proposed relocation of Route 190. The hearing is open to the public.

Special Election Set

Action on selecting a new First Selectman to succeed the late Daniel F. Sullivan, has now started, since the 30 days waiting period for the present two selectman, Second Selectman J. Henry Zavisza, R. and Third Selectman George Butler, D. to choose a successor to Sullivan expired with no one chosen because both men want the position themselves.

Butler's petition for a special election for the position met no difficulties in receiving the required signatures from 5 percent of the voters.

The special election has been set for June 25 and caucuses for both the Republican and Democratic parties are set for Friday, March 21 to nominate candidates for the town's top administrative position.

Butler has already been endorsed by a Democratic nominating committee but Zavisza has not received such a party endorsement.

In fact, there are now two declared Republican candidates for the GOP caucus to consider Friday. Chester A. Kuras, currently chairman of the Suffield Conservation Commission, is seeking the office as well as Zavisza.

Kuras has received the personal endorsement of GOP Town Chairman James Whitten, but in his statement of candidacy made Friday, March 14, Kuras declared "he is running his own campaign through letter, door-to-door and telephone calls."

In endorsing Kuras, Whitten emphasized the issue of the need of a "full-time" administrator. Kuras is able to be such an administrator, having retired last October as Lt. Colonel of the Conn. Air National Guard after serving as director of operations of the Tactical Fighter Group at Bradley Airport from 1968-1974. (see Bazaar for Feb. 11, 1975 for picture of Kuras receiving Air Force Commendation Medal).

Both Zavisza and Butler have their own businesses to conduct and are not free now to devote full time to administering the town's business.

Both have said they feel that the job of First Selectman can be satisfactorily filled on a part-time basis as they have been doing together since Sullivan's death on February 10.

A special GOP committee of town officials elected at the same time that Sullivan was — Town Clerk Harold Remington, Town Treasurer Lewis Cannon and Registrar of Voters Murlie Fields, has appointed Zavisza to serve as "acting" First Selectman until the June election. This gives Zavisza an opportunity to show how he can function as a part-time First Selectman.

In formally announcing his candidacy, Kuras said he believes the complexity of the first selectman's office demands full-time commitment. Citing his 12 years as director of operators for the Connecticut Air National Guard, Kuras said he has had exposure which will prove invaluable in working with federal and state grants and revenue sharing.

He said he opposes enlargement of Bradley International Airport and joining the proposed health district. "I feel the district should be made up of towns of equal size", he said.

Commenting on Suffield's future, Kuras said "As everywhere else, we face some financial difficulties, but Suffield draws a great amount of pride from its residents. Whenever a problem is discovered, in no time a committee is set up to solve it. "There is never any lack of concerned volunteers from townspeople", he added.

Zavisza has issued a statement on his qualifications through his press coordinator, Faith Roebelen, president of the Republican Women's Club. She said "He has been Suffield's second selectman for five and a half years and has demonstrated his administrative abilities. He has made it clear he will devote the necessary time to do a thorough job as Suffield's first selectman." She added "Henry has emphasized that if he is elected he will work with the other selectmen to run the town. The town will not be run by one individual, but by one board."

Nutritional Workshop

Parents of pre-school children are invited to a workshop to be held Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. at Spaulding School by the Anisa Staff from the University of Massachusetts. Focus of the workshop will be to provide a sound nutritional and general health care program at home for the pre-school child.

Dr. Pattabi Raman, Coordinator of Very Early

Anisa Program (VEAP) for Suffield, Miss Elizabeth Bowen and other Anisa staff members will be joined by Mrs. Nancy Mondeschein, a registered nurse, teacher and health educator in East Ramo Central School District, N.Y.

Nutritionally sound recipes will be provided during the meeting as well as refreshments.

Palm Sunday Concert

An ecumenical choir concert will be presented by the Suffield Council of Churches on Palm Sunday at 7:30 p.m. in Second Baptist Church. Members from the various churches in the Council will be singing under the direction of Mrs. Allen Case, the Second Baptist Church choir director.

of Everisto Fontenez, the college choir director.

An offering will be received at the service to combat world hunger through the "Meals for Millions" ecumenical project.

The Rev. Daniel Fiehler, of Good Shepherd Lutheran Church, who is the president of the Suffield Council, will give the meditation for the service.

Nathan Hale Drums Anew

The Nathan Hale Ancient Fifes and Drums will perform as part of "A Day in the Life of a Continental Soldier" to be presented by the Suffield Bicentennial Commission on Apr. 12 on the Suffield Academy grounds.

Organized in 1965 to commemorate the patriot martyr-spymaster born in Coventry, Conn., the musicians play music that, with very few exceptions is from the period 1760-1790 and as it was originally written.

The musicians are attired in the regimental uniform of Colonel Webb's 19th Connecticut Regiment of Foot, in which unit Captain Hale first served during the year 1776. The regimental coat is snuff-brown with white facings; the waistcoats and breeches are buff-colored linen. A black leather stock with white shirt ruffles, long white knitted stockings, hand-cast pewter buttons and matching shoe buckles complete the uniform.

In advance of the fifes and drums and their colors — the Cambridge flag of 1776, the red flag of the Connecticut Colony, the gold regimental colors of Webb's regiment, and the corps color derived from the Hale family coat-of-arms — march Knowlton's Connecticut Rangers, in which Captain Hale was serving at the time of his capture. They are dressed in fringed linen hunting shirts and slyders (trousers) of the period, and carry "Brown Bess" muskets.

While in the field, the corps is under the direction of a drum major wearing the reverse colors of the regiment, typical of the musicians in British military units. He directs the corps with a mace patterned after one used during colonial times by the English Brigade of guards.

The Nathan Hale Ancient Fifes and Drums and their companion units, Knowlton's Connecticut Rangers, the First Artillery Detachment and the Company of Artificers (smiths and other supporting crafts) who will perform here, have participated in historical enactments and pageants, parades and music musters throughout the Northeast and received "Authenticity" trophies.

Following a tradition of long standing, men will gather at 7:00 for a Communion Service led by pastors of the two churches. After the service they meet in the Fellowship Hall for breakfast.

Sewer Funds

Approved

The Suffield Board of Finance has voted unanimously to recommend appropriating $80,000 to expedite the Suffield North Sewer Plan.

Sewer Commission chairman Robert C. Stewart asked for the funds to begin the necessary paper work to apply for federal grants. The proposed sewer lines would aid residents in the areas of Randall Drive, Long View Dr. and Pleasant View Dr. who have been seeking a solution to their sewerage problems ever since they underwent massive leaching field failure in 1969. The Sewer Commission has proposed several other solutions as a result of several studies, but the residents have fought for an extension of sewer lines to the affected areas as the best solution.

The Finance Board also voted approval of an appropriation not to exceed $4,500 for completion of minor high school addition items. These include minor electrical repairs, regarding of certain terrain, correction of small architectural omissions, and repainting of track lines.

Additionally a $2,000 appropriation was approved for dog pound expenses. Dog Warden Kenneth Holcomb said the pound has been running at a deficit because while license and redemption fees haven't changed, the cost of keeping the dogs has climbed steadily.

Enfield Hockey Action

The playoffs for the championship of the Squirt Division of the NCYHL began this week between the division champs, Enfield and Wethersfield. The first game, played in Enfield, went to the local squad by a 3-1 score. Good defensive play by Enfield's four regular defensemen; Marc Parent, Kevin Hoffman, Billy Noll and Kevin O'Coin, and great forechecking by Kevin Meunier held Wethersfield to the lone goal. Scoring for Enfield were Bobby Berozsky, assisted by Mitch Kraucunas; Kevin Meunier, assisted by Dave Grigely, and Bobby Berozsky, assisted by Eddie Johnson and Mitch Kraucunas.

The second game, played in Glastonbury, caught Enfield off-guard and Wethersfield took it 10-0, with Enfield suffering its second shut-out of the season.

The third game of the two out of three series was again on home ice for the Enfield squad. Fast and furious hockey followed the starting whistle and with every player giving his best, the third period buzzer found the two teams tied 2-2. Two overtime periods were then played, with each team holding the line and allowing no goals. Only one team could enter the state finals, which began the next night and the NCYHL rules provide that in such cases the championship be decided on penalty shots. Wethersfield was the victor in this area and a heart-breaking decision was rendered, giving Wethersfield the championship. Mike Ucello scored both Enfield goals in this game, one unassisted and one assisted by Kevin Meunier and Kevin O'Coin.

WHALERS WIN EAST DIVISION

I finally got to see the Hartford Civic Center and it was well worth the trip. I took the family last Saturday night to see the Whalers and the Edmonton Oilers in action. The Whalers were at their best and led throughout the game. They led 2-0 after one period, 3-0 after two stanzas and finally won the game 6-2.

The win gave the Whalers at least a certain tie for the East Division and the game Sunday night gave them the East Division Championship. This doesn't mean that the Whalers will let down though since they are still trying to get the home ice advantage in the playoffs. They can only do this by continuing their winning string.

If you haven't seen the Whalers play yet you had better hurry up since they don't have too many games left to play and the tickets are going at a pretty good clip.

Saturday night marked the sixth time this season that the Whalers have played to a full house of 10,507 fans. The way tickets are going they should play to a few more full houses before the season is over. It is nice to have a winner in Connecticut. This is the third year that the Whalers have won their division.

The fans kept yelling for the coach to send Nick Fotiu out and the Coach satisfied them by doing just that. They probably expected Nick to start some action but it was a relatively calm night. After the game Nick told me that his hand was still swollen from Thursday night's action and he wasn't about to injure it any further. He couldn't tape it up either since that is against the rules.

Whether there are fisticuffs or not the Whalers do put on a good show and it is worth anybody's money to go and take a look at them in person. I do wish they would

Satch Worley Enters The Spring Sizzler

Something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue. That just may be the formula that Virginia driver, Satch Worley, and New Jersey car owner, Don Cranmer will use to take the 4th Annual Spring Sizzler at the Stafford Springs Motor Speedway, April 12 and 13.

This unique Yankee-Rebel combination have filed their entry for the $18,000 affair, joining a list that nears the 100 mark for the 4th consecutive year.

When quizzed about the traditional bride's phrase Cranmer explained, "We have kinda married each other for the event." "This really is only a one race deal, inasmuch as each of us have another regular partner."

There really is nothing very old about the team except for the fact that the car, a 1973 Gremlin, is registered in NASCAR's oldest division of racing, the Modifieds.

For the second straight year the Sizzler will run under NASCAR's Sanction.

Many of the aspects of this year's race will fall into the "something new" category including the fact that the race will be run under Stafford's new weight and tire rules that are distinctly different from the NASCAR norm.

The fact that Worley will drive for Cranmer fulfills the something borrowed portion.

Worley's regular ride is the William Mason Gremlin from Rocky Mount, Virginia.

According to the 26 year old driver, "When Bill told me he was going to stay home, I asked Don to lend me his car." Cranmer added, "Yes, and wouldn't you know the car is blue."

The Sizzler will be the honeymoon for the team. A series of heats and consolation will determine the 33 car starting field for the 80 lap affair, on April 13, while practice has been reserved for April 12.

Something old, something new, something borrowed, something blue. The team fits the phrase, now all they have to do is make it work.

Tips On Cheese

When you're planning your food budget, remember to put cheese on your list. It can be the start of many delicious but inexpensive meals.

The delicious natural flavor of cheese is best maintained when the cheese is kept refrigerated and wrapped, either in the original polyfilm covering or in a plastic wrap. Should portions dry out, they can be frozen, but when thawed will often be mealy and therefore more suitable in cooking recipes.

Always remove cheese from refrigeration about one-half hour before serving to fully enjoy the delightful flavor, aroma and texture.
