Law Of Eminent Domain Questioned

Andrew Melechinsky, recently announced candidate for the Town Council, has joined with Albert Vesce in an effort to strike down the law of eminent domain. Melechinsky, who is noted for his knowledge of the Constitution, says that the Vesce incident is one of "the biggest injustices" that he's ever seen.

He also states that the town has Vesce so intimidated that he is "afraid to go to his attorney." Melechinsky accuses town officials, acting in the name of the Enfield Redevelopment Agency, of bribery in their attempts at collecting rent money from Vesce's tenants. According to Melechinsky, Donald Ball, relocation director, and Roland L. Dufault, property management officer, committed criminal acts while attempting to secure Vesce's property.

In a letter to Chief of Police Walter Skower dated July 12, Vesce alleges that Ball "has committed" a criminal act (fraud) by sending me a letter telling me that the Redevelopment Agency owns my property. He has produced neither a deed nor a jury decision to back his claim." Vesce goes on to say that Dufault "has committed criminal acts (trespass and attempted larceny) in attempting to collect the rents from my property. The letter is undersigned by Melechinsky and Vesce's son, David, who "have personal knowledge that the above crimes have been committed."

Skower's reply to the letter was a discord on other possible avenues open for Vesce if he wished to pursue criminal prosecution. Skower informed Vesce of the state and town regulations dictating the agency's action and advised him to take his complaint to Common Pleas Court.

Vesce and Melechinsky have been constant opponents of the Freshwater Pond Urban Renewal Project since its inception in 1972. In December of that year, Vesce read a letter to the Town Council following a discussion of the renewal project. In the letter, Vesce stated that "Your plan to seize my property for 'Urban Renewal' against my will violates God's law and is unconstitutional." Vesce added that the only case in which the government should assume ownership of private property would be for "the protection of the life and property of all citizens." Further down in the letter Vesce maintained that "Under the provisions of Article Nine and Ten of the Constitution of the United States, I am the sole judge of what shall be done with my property. I choose to keep it."

Two weeks later, Melechinsky said that the town council had voted to "steal it (Vesce's land) from him." He added, "There is no honest or honorable way that the government can acquire his property. That won't stop the town, though. Every trick in the book will be used in an attempt to bulldoze Mr. Vesce's (sic) civil rights . . . into the ground."

In a Statement of Compensation filed in Superior Court in July by the Enfield Redevelopment Agency, the ERA reiterated its right to private property. "The said Town Council has approved the acquisition of real property within said redevelopment area by the said agency by eminent domain." The town claimed the Central Street parcel and appropriated $30,300 as a compensatory payment." Melechinsky states that this is "ridiculous" and adds that the property is worth close to several hundred thousand dollars.

In his Response to Statement of Compensation filed on July 14, Vesce stated that there "is no authority in the Constitution of the State of Connecticut or in the Constitution of the United States of America for confiscation of said property."

Vesce also said that without his express consent, the "Statement of Compensation is null and void and of no legal or moral merit." Also in the Response, Vesce listed 12 violations of what he maintains to be his constitutional rights. The 12 included two from the 1818 State of Connecticut Constitution, which Vesce asserts is the only legal one notwithstanding the ratification of a new Constitution in 1966. He, along with Melechinsky, has repeatedly declared the

Town Officials Oppose 'Bookie' Window Concept

Following a report that the State Commission on Special Revenue is considering Enfield as one of nine possible sites for off-track betting parlor, town officials reaffirmed their opposition to the proposal.

Last year, the town council approved a plan that called for the installation of a teletheater; however, after learning that its arrival was several years off, the council came out in opposition to the betting window concept and informed the state that another resolution would be required for its approval.

The other possible sites mentioned are Bloomfield, Windsor, Vernon, Farmington, West Hartford, Fairfield and Norwalk.

The commission is interested in Northern Connecticut because the northernmost betting parlor planned at this time would be in Meriden. The first teletheater will be located in New Haven.

Some town councilmen are opposed to the betting window because it would bring in substantially less revenue to the town than the teletheater. Town Manager William L. McDivitt stated that he is still studying the proposal because he is unfamiliar with the plan.

Many Enfield residents who are undecided on the betting parlor have expressed a feeling that the town should have a referendum on the OTB, but, as of this date, none has been scheduled.

William L. McDivitt, Enfield Town Manager, said that the Council has not requested a special hearing concerning the surprise choice of Enfield as an off-track betting site.

He added, however, that one control that the town had over the controversial application was Planning and Zoning restrictions.

The state Commission of Special Revenue recommended the site for Enfield and if it had been approved, it was expected to bring the town more than $300,000 annually in revenue.

However, several months ago, the Commission announced that it had severely reduced its plans for Enfield to simply a storefront betting window. The window would be operated much like a teller's window at a bank.

Council reaction to the proposal was mostly negative with one member calling it a "bookie joint."

Merchants Given Month To Comply

Fire officials have given merchants in Enfield's largest shopping areas another month to establish fire lanes before they enforce a local ordinance.

The Town Council passed that ordinance in June which states that a 20-foot wide pathway with a turning radius of at least 50 feet must be kept clear of all obstructions for fire fighting equipment.

Some stores in the older sections of the town do not have 20 feet in front of their stores, and these areas have been given special consideration.

Most of Enfield's malls and plazas will be in compliance with the ordinance as soon as some special equipment arrives.

Failure to maintain a fire lane is cause for a daily fine of up to $250, and parking violations within the zone will result in $15 to $25 fines.

MVD Reports Office Hours

All motor vehicle department offices will close at 12:30 p.m., tomorrow, for the Labor Day holiday weekend, Commissioner Stanley J. Pac has announced.

The offices will reopen at 8:30 a.m. Sept. 2, and will be open regular hours the remainder of the week. MVD hours are 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., each Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday.

The department remains open until 7:30 p.m. each Thursday, and from 8:30 a.m. until 12:30 p.m. each Saturday.

School Note
The Enfield school bus route schedule begins on Page 16 and the school calendar appears on Page 15 in this issue of The Enfield Press. School begins Sept. 3.

Ready To Roll

These buses of the E.P. Hayes, Inc., stand ready to roll next Wednesday to transport Enfield's children to and from school from that day to next June. Some 45 buses, 14 station wagons and two wheelchairs will be involved in the transportation program. The average bus covers three schools each school day.

Many Attend LEGO Systems Dedication

Last Thursday's dedication ceremony of the LEGO System's new Enfield home was really a dual celebration, said company President Jack Sullivan.

The large toy manufacturing company unveiled its new 73,000 square foot quarters as well as broke ground for an expansion — originally planned for completion in 1977, but now accelerated to be completed in April, 1976.

The spacious new building is separated into a warehouse area and about 9,000 square feet of office space.

The warehouse is painted in the colorful red, white, blue and yellow LEGO colors, but the offices are a contrast in subdued but rich earth tones, from fawn to burnt umber.

Each area, however, contains its own surprise. Many offices boast bright orange-colored modern chairs, and the secretary work stations are separated by bright, royal blue acoustical felt with chrome trim.

The American company, incorporated in the State of Delaware, is a classic success story, from humble beginnings in Denmark by an out-of-work carpenter, down to the spanking new corporate facilities here, and there'll be more to come.

The timetable for expansion includes the 105,000 square foot facility which will house finished goods, packaging and central stock, truckwell and warehouse space.

The plant presently employs 50 workers; about 20 in production and the rest in the offices. But, in a year, there will be more than three times that number — around 150 — with 100 working in production alone.

The figures keep increasing so that by the end of 1978, 180 workers will be producing the toy blocks, and two years later, the staff will reach more than 220 for each of two shifts.

The success story shows that the company has gained each year it has been in business, and management doesn't expect it to stop.

The company anticipates a sales volume in excess of $50 million by 1977.

And what is this phenomenon that keeps selling, and has kept children worldwide interested for so many decades?

LEGO Systems manufactures a toy for its imaginative — plastic interlocking blocks which can be formed into buildings, bridges, animals and rockets.

LEGO is created in such a way that anything can be fashioned from the sturdy plastic material which will never change, wear out or lose its beautiful bright colors. And parts — including sophisticated motors and gear blocks — have a lifetime guarantee.

It's that kind of workmanship and quality that has made the toy the number one seller in Europe, and on its way to being a number one seller here.

"Sure, it's expensive to put out a product of excellent quality, then back it up. But we feel there's no other way to make it," President Sullivan said.

"We love people," he added. "Our business is not just making blocks; it's making children happy."

Governor Ella Grasso joined with LEGO Systems and town officials to dedicate the toy company's new facility and to break ground for future expansion.

G. Kirk Christiansen, son of the firm's founder, Ole Kirk Christiansen, and now managing director, came from Denmark for the ceremonies.

His wife, Edith, and Governor Grasso unveiled a bronze plaque which will be placed on the Pennsylvania yellow clay brick building, dedicating it to the belief that "the best is not good enough for children."

Also attending were Mayor Armand Roy; Town Manager William McDivitt; Representatives John Morrison and Richard Cressotti, and various state and town officials.

Following an address by Governor Grasso and remarks by Christiansen and Sullivan, the guests toured the new facility.

Governor Grasso was the recipient of a replica of the Bicentennial Flag composed of 17,907 LEGO bricks and requiring 162 manhours to fabricate. In addition, a large replica of the Enfield Town Seal, designed in blue, black, yellow and white LEGO blocks were presented to Mayor Armand Roy. The seal was built in 81 manhours using 9,207 bricks. Five Mysteries

Janice Pockett Disappearance

This is the third of a five-part series dealing with unsolved crimes in the Enfield area. Part One dealt with the recent puzzling death of Stephanie Olisky, a 15-year-old East Windsor girl. Part Two recounted the death of Adele Rackis, an Enfield resident. This week's installment recalls the disappearance of Janice Pockett of Tolland two years ago. The Enfield Press will document the deaths of Ginger Davis of Springfield and Paget Weatherly of Storrs in the next two weeks.

By DAVE LYNCH

Janice Pockett would have been nine years old this year.

Two years ago, the seven-year-old Tolland youngster sped off on her bicycle to catch an elusive butterfly. She hasn't been seen since.

Despite the efforts of several hundred volunteers and professionals, no trace of the girl has turned up, except her little green bike.

On July 26, 1973, at about 3:30 p.m., the girl had gone to look for the butterfly after being admonished by her mother to "come right back." When the girl hadn't returned by four o'clock, her mother went to search for her. She walked down a nearby dirt road and after going about one-tenth of a mile she came upon Janice's bicycle. However, she found no sign of her daughter.

Within 24 hours after her disappearance, a massive air-land-pond search had been undertaken by at least 400 volunteers, along with local and state police.

Capt. Thomas McDonnell of the state police was in charge of the search. He had at his disposal several officers from the state police assigned to Eastern Connecticut.

Divers from the Tolland Rescue Squad and the Regional Emergency Diving Unit combed local rivers and ponds.

Later that day volunteers found a pair of little girls' socks in a plastic bag near the underbrush off I-86. However, the girl's mother was able to state positively that the socks were not her daughter's.

The police utilized, initially, at least, the assumption that the girl may have been forcibly abducted. They instituted a house-to-house search of the neighborhood and sent police tracking dogs out in an effort to find some link to the missing girl.

Boy Scouts, Explorers, horsemen, motorcyclists and Coast Guard personnel were involved in the sweeping search that mushroomed into an all-out investigation.

As late as a year after the disappearance, two groups of 100 men each searched the area where Janice was last seen. These were selected professionals, including FBI agents. Bulldozers turned the ground, and divers searched for some sign of the girl. This method was much more efficient, though no more successful, than previously.

After the search, officials were less optimistic than ever. One FBI man said that, "There comes a point when every natural thing that can be done has been done." Following this effort, the search program was scaled down substantially. In fact, interest waned so that a planned search was canceled in light of the unsuccessful previous attempts.

Meanwhile, a petition campaign had been started by Hartford Mayor George Athanson. The response, according to the mayor, was "unbelievable." Over 100,000 signatures were garnered and sent to President Nixon asking him to direct the FBI to investigate the case. A "Friends of Janice Pockett Committee" was set up by the mayor, who said, "I'm going to do whatever I can."

Clarence Kelley, director of the FBI, said that the bureau had been watching the Pockett case "very closely." This, however, did nothing to sway Athanson's drive.

McDonnell went on record later that year as saying that the Pockett disappearance was the "most important" case currently being studied by the state police.

As hope began to fade for the recovery of the girl, Athanson began a movement to change the federal kidnapping statutes so that any case involving a child under 12 would fall into federal jurisdiction. Many critics of the flamboyant mayor saw this as purely a political move.

Late in 1974, the state police said that they had "narrowed in" on a suspect; however, no charges were ever filed.

Yet, one other man, 48-year-old Robert Bell of Vernon, was arrested on a charge of harassment after allegedly telephoning a ransom demand to the Pocketts. The charge was eventually nolleed.

As the case dragged on and on and hope burned dimmer and dimmer, authorities began to follow leads provided by physics and clairvoyants. As one official put it: "Someone will call up, and we go dig."

There have been no new developments in the Pockett disappearance and most hold out little hope that there ever will be any.

The general consensus seems to be that the case will always remain open, under no threat of being closed.

Local Man Wins $2,500

Once his claim has been processed, a procedure that takes approximately three weeks, Backman will be entered into one Jackpot Drawing.

Should his name be drawn as a Double Play finalist, he will compete the following week for a Jackpot Prize of $100,000.

"unconstitutional."

Concerning the appropriated $30,300 for his wife, Vesce said, "It should be noted that the sum of money mentioned in the Statement of Compensation is outrageously low compared to the true value of the property."

Melechinsky and Vesce seem determined to take this case to court, though it remains to be seen whether or not Vesce will be able to succeed in this venture.

In other developments concerning the candidate for town council, earlier this week Melechinsky released a file of correspondence with various governmental officials. Most of the letters which he has sent are still awaiting response.

In a telegram to Chief Justice of the Supreme Court Warren Burger, Melechinsky says that "Supreme Court personnel are committing criminal acts by violating supreme law." Although the communique ends with "Please advise date and time we can discuss this matter," Melechinsky is still waiting for a reply 103 days after he sent his message.

On May 20 of this year, Melechinsky wrote to Congressman Toby Moffett for help concerning one of his pending court cases. After an exchange of letters which apparently did not satisfy the Enfield man, he sent a scathing rejoinder to Moffett June 22. In the letter, Melechinsky says that he is "bitterly disappointed" in Moffett's actions.

In response to a statement by Moffett that he has no more power than the average citizen, Melechinsky states, "As a Congressman, you do indeed have more power than a private citizen — otherwise, why do we bother to have Congressmen?"

He adds, "I have called (and I am calling upon you) to respond to all of my requests, suggestions and complaints."

Melechinsky ends the rebuke by saying, "I do not expect miracles, Mr. Moffett. But your performance so far doesn't even qualify as an attempt to help."

Copies of the letter were sent to President Gerald Ford, Representative Chris Dodd, Senator Abraham Ribicoff, Senator Lowell Weicker, Senator James Eastland, Representative Peter Rodino, Chief Justice Warren Burger, and all other Supreme Court Justices.

Melechinsky, who has been noted in the past for his strict constitutional doctrines, seems to have no affinity towards relenting.

Doctors Dispute Of No Effect Here

A pay dispute between state physicians at state mental institutions should have little or no effect on operations at the Enfield Mental Health Center.

The dispute revolves around full-time employees and, since the only employees who are in the same category as the state's workers are part-time, there should be no work stoppage.

The only effect that the job action could have is indirect occurring when the center uses the state's resources for treatment.

The center is located at 1077 Enfield St. and is sponsored by the Enfield Social Services, Inc.

The center provides counseling and other services for residents from Suffield, Enfield, East Windsor, Somers, Windsor Locks and East Granby.

State "Pressured" In 10-Year Lease

Gerald McCann, deputy director of the state Department of Finance and Control during the Meskill administration, pressured the state into signing a 10-year lease for the Asnuntuck Community College at a cost one and one-half times its market value.

The lease calls for payment of $2 million in taxes and rent to the Gadley Corp. between 1974 and 1984, although at 100 percent evaluation the property is only worth $1.2 million.

State officials involved in the lease said that all had negative feelings about it due to the size, poor location and cost.

During the final weeks of negotiating, the Neecon Corp., negotiating agent for Gadley, arranged for the 10-year lease.

McCann said that while most state officials were against the proposal, none offered any viable alternatives. He also said that the state's Board of Trustees of Community Colleges had requested the 10-year lease.

However, a spokesman for the group said that they had opted for a five-year lease and it was McCann who insisted in the longer agreement.

The state Department of Finance and Control said, through a top official, that his department had vetoed the whole plan as being too expensive.

Scantic Park Project Suffers A Setback

Due to a statewide review of all capital expenditures, the $1.1 million Scantic River Valley Park project has suffered a setback which may or may not be permanent.

Following an announcement this spring of federal allocation of some $500,000 for the project, the state Bonding Commission approved a $650,000 grant for the park. The combined money was to be used mainly in the purchase of river land.

However, since that time, the state Department of Finance and Control has failed to sign the appropriation. The federal money will not be released until the state speeds up its action. The project review should be completed by Oct. 1.

Beginning Sept. 1, any state project costing more than $100,000 and under 95 percent completed, will be reviewed by the Governor's Construction Task Force.

Each agency will be asked to list its priorities before the task force, and, according to most sources, the river valley project has top priority.

The board's recommendations will go to Gov. Ella Grasso, who will have the final say on all projects.

Pleasant St. Building Inspection Completed

Town officials have finished inspecting buildings in the Pleasant Street area. The results are expected to be ready within two weeks so that a decision can be reached on possible rehabilitation of the area.

The section is included in the town's Community Development Act as a minor renewal project. The area is located adjacent to the Freshwater Pond.

If the buildings are beyond rehabilitation or generally poor in appearance, they will be torn down.

Besides inspecting the buildings, the officials tried to increase awareness of the town's housing code.

Most of the structures in that area violate the code, but legally are safe because they were built before the code was instituted.

If the buildings are town down, the town will advise the residents on financial or technical matters pertaining to relocation.

The area has parking on only one side of the street and many businesses do not have their own lots.

Wallace Quits, Will Not Fight

By DAVE LYNCH

In a surprise move, an assistant sewer supervisor has resigned rather than fight his dismissal.

Paul Wallace, who last week vowed to fight his firing, informed Town Manager William McDivitt of his decision Monday. Wallace had scheduled an appellate hearing with McDivitt to protest his firing.

Wallace had said that if his appeal was denied, he would take the matter to court. He had alleged that the charges against him were "trumped up" and "politically motivated."

Wallace had been accused of using town vehicles for personal purposes and tardiness. In reply, he had stated that he has been denied access to his personal files.

However, all of this changed when he submitted his resignation this week. When contacted by the Enfield Press, Wallace's wife, answering for him, said, "There's no comment."

McDivitt stated that he did not want to cause Wallace "any further trouble" and he wanted to "try to make life easier" for the former town employe.

McDivitt would not disclose the reason behind Wallace's resignation so it is not clear if that motion constitutes an admission of guilt.

Big Plans Being Made For Old Bigelow Area

Plans are being readied for a proposed renovation of the area surrounding and including the former Bigelow-Sanford complex in Enfield.

The project will be paid for with local, federal and private funds.

Six hundred thousand dollars will be supplied by the Community Development Act funds. The federal Economic Development Administration will issue $1.5 million and another $9,182,500 will come from the owners of the complex.

The renewal of the Bigelow area would be in conjunction with the Freshwater Pond Urban Renewal Project.

Eighteen buildings on 32-acre tract are slated for demolition to allow for the construction of a new road.

The remaining edifices would undergo extensive rehabilitation. These buildings have been idle since 1971 when Bigelow moved their firm south.

The CDA funds would be for demolition of several buildings on Pleasant and Whitworth streets, and some of the federal funds could be spent in the same manner.

Handler Is Treasurer

Dairy Mart, Inc. President Charles Nirenberg announced that Lawrence Handler has been named treasurer of the 55-store chain.

The firm is currently involved in building a $2 million facility in Enfield.

Handler majored in accounting at the University of Connecticut and earned a B.S. degree cum laude.

In 1969, Handler received a MBA degree from New York University where he majored in corporate finance. He has been a CPA since 1970 and he has taught at the Hartford Graduate School of Business since 1973.

Mini-Mountain

This man-made "mini-mountain" on Moody Road stands about 25 feet in height. The many holes seen in the side of the hill were made by swallows as nests.

Area Firms At Big E

Lego Systems and Pilch Gardens of Enfield will take part in the annual Eastern States Exposition held this year at West Springfield beginning Sept. 10.

Lego, which is a manufacturer of children's toys, will display its handiwork and allow children to experiment with its samples.

Pilch will provide a showcase of greenery along with an informational exhibit about plants — indoors and out.

The annual affair, which attracts visitors from across the Northeast, will also have displays from each of the New England states and other firms with products to sell.

Prison Buses On Saturdays

Visitors to the state's maximum security facilities in Somers and Enfield will be able to travel to the prisons by bus every Saturday. The Enfield Transportation Committee had originally wanted to include a "shopper's shuttle" with the plan, but the cost was found to be prohibitive.

During midday, most buses operated by the state Department of Transportation are idle and the plan calls for utilization of these vehicles.

Under the plan the buses would make three runs to and from the prisons between 9:30 a.m. and 3 p.m.

Also, the bus would make one or two stops to pick up riders who wished to go into Hartford.

The bus would cost about $85 a day and funding will be decided upon by the state Department of Corrections.

At Crossroads

A mass of atoms bombarded in a proper manner reaches an explosive stage at a certain time in its fermentation. So do political fermentations and it appears that Portugal is at that stage.

Portuguese people were cheering in the streets on April 25, 1974, when the Movement of the Armed Forces took control of the administration ending more than 40 years of civilian dictatorship. Today many of the same people are in the streets again, this time facing bayonets with rocks and fists while the troops they are opposing are themselves not too certain about whom they should support.

In Portugal the favorite tactic of Communists elsewhere is backfiring. When they first began assuming power, the Communists sidetracked opponents by accusing them of plotting to overthrow the government. Their military dictatorship, in the meantime, took over the government because it was the best organized. By the time the other political parties had awakened, the Communists had control of the news media, the labor unions and the local administrations throughout the country. Subsequently, elections for the constitutional assembly indicated the Communists were able to exert their power despite their insignificant popular base — only 12.5 per cent of the Portuguese voters.

It is this small political beachhead that the Communists are now trying to hold with military force. Communist Party leader Alvaro Cunhal has declared that the election was meaningless — that "elections have nothing, or very little, to do with the dynamics of the revolution . . . In Portugal, henceforth there exists no possibility for a democracy such as the kind you have in Western Europe."

Amid the rising tide of a civil war, Premier Vasco Goncalves added the footnote that "Portugal is in the most difficult moment of the revolution." He is applying military force to see that the moment is his.

If he is successful, Portugal will become an island of subversion in a peaceful, prosperous and free Western Europe. And the situation cannot be compared, for example, to the loss of democracy in India, as reprehensible as that is. If Goncalves wins, Portugal will become a Soviet footprint in Western Europe, the first breach of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's front lines since the organization came into existence on April 4, 1949.

The Portuguese civilians who are on the streets facing the legions of Goncalves may believe that they are fighting only for their own right to be free, but in reality they are fighting for every individual in the Western hemisphere who prizes liberty.

The free world should give them all the help that it can.

Letters To The Editor

Finance Renewal With Volunteer Funds

To The Editor:

In this Bicentennial year, it should be remembered that this great nation was founded to put an end to the barbaric notion that government can step on individual God-given rights to suit the purposes of those in control.

The Town of Enfield, in total disregard for the U. S. Constitution, is now engaged in attempting to take property from Albert Vesce (and others like him) totally against his will. It is using every conceivable pressure to bully this fine man into surrendering the fruits of his life's work to a bureaucratic "Urban Renewal" scheme, a scheme which contends that an individual's God-given rights must be sacrificed whenever they get in the way of some grand remodeling and raising money via plan of some petty tyrants.

Is this the American way to get things done? I think not. It would be far more appropriate in a country like Nazi Germany, or Soviet Russia, or Communist China, where the sacrifice of the individual to the will of the State was and is a way of life. The framers of our Constitution would have cringed at the prospect.

But there is an American way to have Urban Renewal — a way which can benefit everyone and hurt no one. Simply stated, if Urban Renewal is as wonderful and desirable as its promoters say it is, let them get together, pooling their OWN PERSONAL RESOURCES, and raising money via VOLUNTARY CONTRIBUTIONS or SELLING SHARES.

Then let them acquire the properties in the only moral and legal manner — by buying them from the rightful owners, WITH THEIR CONSENT, paying them what it is worth to the owners.

I CHALLENGE the people in the Enfield Redevelopment Agency to try it.

If they sincerely believe Urban Renewal is such a desirable objective, let them try selling it on the OPEN MARKET, instead of trampling the rights of people like Mr. Vesce and forcing the taxpayer to foot this expensive bill. If they are unwilling to pay the price, maybe they are not so sincere after all.

If they cannot raise sufficient funds voluntarily, then maybe it means that the people don't really want Renewal after all. That, far from being desirable, it is just one more expensive white elephant we don't really need.

It's time the people of Enfield demanded that the planners meet this challenge. For as long as Town Hall keeps pushing innocent people like Mr. Vesce around, it is unworthy to fly the American Flag.

A Thank You From Mental Health

To The Editor:

The Capitol Region Chapter of the Mental Health Association would like to thank the residents of the Enfield area for their support during our recent fund-raising campaign. Both the bellringers who called on their neighbors and the neighbors who answered are citizens who are making a difference in the fight against mental illness, our country's number one health problem. Because of them the Mental Health Association will be able to continue its service and action programs for those with emotional problems.

Among these are educational programs on the understanding of mental illness and information and referral services. Anyone who needs help or who would like further information about mental health or mental illness is urged to call us at 233-2601 or 1-800-842-1501.

Questions Jailing Joseph Piekos Sr.

To The Editor:

A prime example of "man's inhumanity to man" is the case of Joseph Piekos, Sr., who is currently languishing in the Seyms St. Jail; not because he did any harm, but because he failed to conform to the dictates of the establishment.

It is true that Mr. Piekos failed to show up in Court to answer charges that he made a U Turn at a toll bridge, but this is no excuse to incarcerate him for three weeks in two different jails.

Mr. Piekos may have been foolish and stubborn, but in a free nation being foolish and stubborn is not an offense for which a citizen is imprisoned.

As a matter of fact, under the Constitution, a sovereign citizen is not supposed to be locked up even if he has committed a crime, until he has been convicted by a jury, or unless the authorities can show clearly that the accused will be a danger to society, if not jailed.

Based on my personal knowledge, and experience, there are more criminals in the ranks of politicians, judges and lawyers than there are in our jails.

There is something drastically wrong with a system which punishes individuals because public officials use poor judgment, or themselves violate the law.

Democrats Outspend GOP

Treasurers of both political town committees were required by law to submit reports of contributions and expenditures during the campaign in the special election for First Selectman June 25, to both the state and town.

The reports showed the Democrats spent $173 more than the Republicans in the campaign.

The Republicans, whose candidate, Chester Kuras, won, spent a total of $732. The greatest expenditures were for political advertisements, $136; for postage, $173, and for printing materials, $124.

Kuras' campaign received $596 in contributions, $510 of which was donated by the Republican Town Committee, and the rest by interested citizens.

Democratic candidate Third Selectman George Butler spent $905 during the campaign, which partly included $336 for posted envelopes, $160 for printing, and $207 for political advertising.

Butler's campaign received $265 in contributions from local citizens and $648 from the Suffield Democratic Town Committee.

Kuras and Butler will oppose each other again for first selectman in November's town elections, but this time both will be much better known to the town's voters, thanks to the June election campaign.

Site Of July 4 Fire Cleared And Cleaned

Demolition of two wooden buildings on Mountain Road destroyed in a July 4 fire was quickly accomplished this past week, and removed what had become an eyesore.

Kement & Son Construction Company of Windsor Locks bulldozed the charred remains of the Lessard Lumberyard and the large warehouse building which held the Suffield TV Center. The ground has been leveled and cleaned up of any debris, so there is no evidence now that it was once occupied by the two buildings, which were owned by William S. Fuller. The warehouse building was once used for the Fuller tobacco business.

Paul Lessard, who lost all his business files and records, along with his stock, has no immediate plans for rebuilding his business.

John Duni and John Kaplan, owners of the Suffield TV Center, have temporarily relocated their business in Suffield Village. They have no definite plans, but hope to in the near future.

Locals And State Work On Flood Plain

The Suffield Zoning and Planning Commission (ZPC) and the Planning Department through the state Department of Community Affairs are researching together revised regulations and a new flood plain map.

The study, begun this month, the 20th anniversary of the disastrous 1955 flood in the state, will continue until February. Total cost of the research won't exceed $400, First Selectman Chester Kuras said.

Houses in flood plain zones, under the new regulations, will qualify for the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) flood insurance, Kuras said.

The 1955 flood proved houses in Suffield could be flooded from the town's several brooks, so such a flood plain map with HUD insurance under new regulations for houses in the flood plain zones, could be valuable for the town and its homeowners.

National Grant For Bandstand

Bicentennial Commission Chairman Roger Loomis has received notification of a $2,025 grant from the National Bicentennial Administration for the proposed bandstand on Suffield Green.

The bandstand project had been approved by the state Commission which distributes the funds, but approval of the National Committee also was needed to finalize the grant.

However, to receive the money, the town must match the $2,625.

Mrs. Virginia Dustin, chairman of the bandstand project which is the Bicentennial project of the public schools and various PTOs, said it will cost about $5,000 for the entire project, so the grant is really needed.

Once school resumes, the children will be conducting more fund-raising drives to boost the bandstand's bank account which is small now, Mrs. Dustin said. Construction of the bandstand is scheduled to begin in the spring, if enough money is raised by then.

Plans are for the bandstand to be fashioned after one which stood on the Green in the 19th Century, but was burned down in 1892.

ZPC Allows Horses

The Suffield Zoning and Planning Commission has approved the application for a special permit for keeping horses for raising and boarding made by Lawrence J. and Shirley L. Bostrom on an 11-acre section of land on Mountain Road in West Suffield.

The land, part of the former Covington Farm, was found suitable by the ZPC for the requested use. Commission Chairman Amiel Zak said, however, there might be a question on the use of an existing tobacco barn as a shed to house the animals.

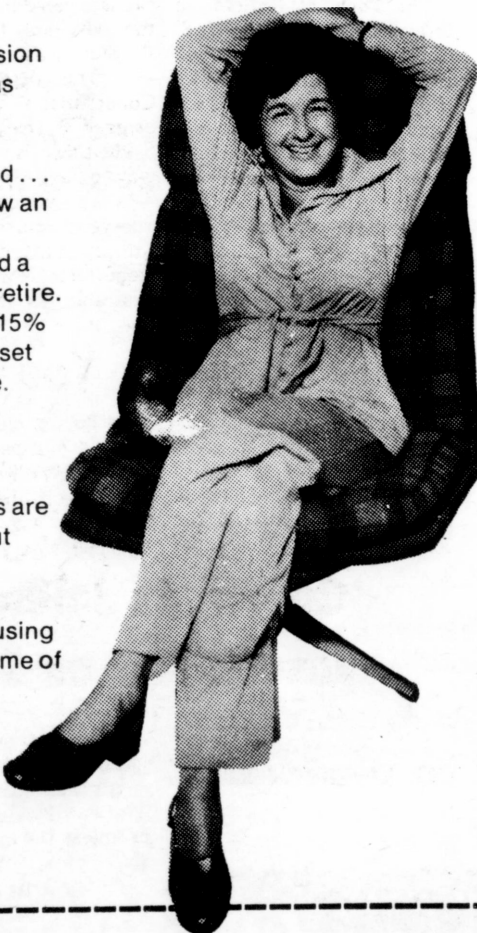

“Central Bank showed me how to save several hundred dollars in taxes every year while saving thousands of dollars to retire on!”

If you're self-employed without a pension plan... or work for a company that has no pension fund... or are a part-time worker... or withdrew your pension benefits when your job was terminated... Central Bank is ready to show you how an Individual Retirement Account can provide big tax savings every year and a big pension fund to live on when you retire. An IRA allows you a tax deduction of 15% a year or $1500 (whichever is less) to set aside in a savings plan until you retire.

Any tax liability, either for deposits or interest earned, is postponed until withdrawals are made from the IRA account. At retirement, IRA payments are treated as regular taxable income, but chances are, you'll be in a lower tax bracket at that time.

Take as an example, a family of four using a standard deduction on a gross income of $15,000 for 1975:

Gross income	Retirement savings	Income tax
$15,000	0	$1,706
$15,000	$1,500	$1,376
TAX SAVINGS WITH IRA		$ 330

That's like having Uncle Sam make a $330 gift toward your $1,500 retirement savings for the year! Now look at how various yearly deposits grow assuming the present maximum allowable rate of 7¾% on 6-year certificates of deposit:

Yearly deposit from age 35	Accumulated retirement fund
	25 years later (age 60)	30 years later (age 65)
$1,500	$110,620	$171,810
1,000	73,746	114,540
500	36,873	57,270

You know you'll need more than Social Security to live on when you retire. The sooner you act, the sooner your tax savings and nest-egg get growing. Let us be Central to your plans for the future. Call or come in to any branch. Or mail this coupon. Or call Corinne Southard, our IRA specialist in Meriden at 238-2300 to receive more information.

Premature withdrawals on certificate of deposit funds can be made only with the consent of the bank. FDIC regulations provide that the rate of interest on the amount withdrawn be reduced to the regular savings rate at the time of withdrawal from the date of deposit and 90 days interest be forfeited. There is also a tax liability and penalty imposed by the IRS if withdrawals are made from the plan before age 59½.

Japanese Teachers Visit

American students have an easy time of it, according to several Japanese teachers who visited the area recently.

Twelve teachers of English visited local families at the close of their 40-day tour of the United States. The Connecticut visit was arranged by the Auerbach Service Bureau for Connecticut Organizations. Reactions to the U.S. and American family life varied from surprise to admiration, but they all seemed to agree that American students don't work as hard as their Japanese counterparts. The Japanese school year lasts 11 months, April to March, and during the year students have heavy homework assignments.

Ioko Fujiwara, a lively young woman who teaches high schoolers, found American students more free to work at their own pace. Apparently the "open classroom" has not gained popularity in Japanese educational circles. Miss Fujiwara was the house guest of the Arn Glantz family of New Preston.

Akihiko Taira expressed surprise at the affectionate custom of children's goodnight kiss. Mr. Taira noted that Japanese children would never be so demonstrative with strangers, and even the intimacy of the family circle often does not include a goodnight kiss. When asked about American food, Mr. Taira said it got a bit "tiresome," but he did express enthusiasm for corn on the cob, potatoes and bread. He was hosted by the Lloyd Mason family of Farmington and the David Proctor family of East Hartford.

Junko Kubota, who spent five days with the James O'Deas in East Hartford, said her favorite "American" dish was eggplant parmigiana. When asked if American parents are more permissive than Japanese, Miss Kubota replied, "American children don't have to work as hard in school, but they do have chores at home. In Japan many elders say our children are spoiled."

The O'Deas also hosted Miyoko Kokubu, who noticed the hurried pace of life here. Her view of American women changed when she discovered "they respect their husbands," an impression some Americans might find dubious.

Another view of American women was expressed by Masao Otsuka, who visited Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Widlak of Newington and Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey Parette of West Suffield. He found American women more energetic and outgoing than their Japanese sisters, crediting them with youthful good looks and great talent.

Bavarian Music To Open Suffield

The Hartford Bavarian Band, acclaimed the finest of their type in Connecticut, will open Suffield's Octoberfest with a concert Oct. 3 from 8 to 12 p.m., Jaycee President Henry Wysocki has announced. The Jaycees are proud to present them in this free concert of traditional German music, Wysocki said. The four-hour program also includes a public sing-along, table serenades and audience requests, he added.

The Hatheway House barn and grounds will again be the scene of the Jaycees Wives' annual Professional Crafts Show on Oct. 3 and 5. Chairman Patricia Miner has announced that 45 craftsmen have been engaged and over half will be conducting demonstrations. Several craftsmen will feature Bicentennial items, she said.

Popular Fest events returning from last year include a free polka dance the evening of Oct. 4 with Chet Dragon and his Orchestra. As a result of the enthusiasm expressed in and 5. Reservations for space at reasonable rates are available by contacting chairman Henry Carron.

The traditional Bazaar-on-the-Green will be held again 1974, the U.S. Army Reserve Band, under Bandmaster James Turek, will again provide a free concert the afternoon of Oct. 5.

Kent Memorial Library will hold its popular used book sale, and is now accepting used books. These donations may be left with the librarian at any time.

The Suffield Village Merchants Association will sponsor an indoor and outdoor Flea Market Tag Sale at the Village on Oct. 4 this year, with many organizations already scheduled for booths. Activities Coordinator Paul Vesterby has contacted many local civic and social groups, and urges any additional organizations desiring space to contact him promptly at his Suffield Street home.

Chimp "On Ice"

"Charlie," the hockey playing chimp, with Holiday On Ice, has a voracious appetite. He can eat any time, and he doesn't much care what he eats. A favorite delicacy is grease paint, the kind his trainer, Steve Pedley, used in his "Biddy and Baddy" makeup. He also likes soft drinks, any brand. Before he'll complete the routine in his act, he has to have his can of Coke, Pepsi or Seven-Up. It's strange, but he doesn't seem to care for bananas. Charlie will be appearing with the rest of the skaters when Holiday On Ice comes to the Hartford Civic Center from Sept. 9 through Sept. 14.

Watch Discarded Refrigerators

Although the Federal Refrigerator Safety Act was enacted in 1956 requiring that every household refrigerator manufactured after Oct. 30, 1958, must have a mechanism enabling the door to be opened from the inside, we note that discarded refrigerators still pose a hazard to children at play.

The law, of course, was passed because of a rising number of deaths of children who were caught inside old refrigerators which had latches that could be opened from the outside only.

Some old refrigerators are still in use or have recently been discarded, and reports are still filed concerning children who die when they get caught in them.

If you have a refrigerator or freezer which is not being used, you should take one of the following precautions:

1. Completely remove the door. This can be done quickly and easily with a screwdriver and the door can be replaced if you want to use it again.

2. Chain and padlock the door permanently closed. An ordinary chain and padlock wrapped tightly around the refrigerator will keep the door closed.

3. Remove the latch. Some latches can be removed and replaced with a wooden block screwed flush to the inner door surface, which will prevent the door from closing. When you want to use the door again, simply remove the wooden block and replace the latch.

If you find a discarded refrigerator, make sure one of these measures is taken to make it safe.

Remember that many children have no idea of the dangers associated with discarded appliances. Teach your children the hazards of entrapment in refrigerators, ice boxes or freezers.

New Program Travels To Asnuntuck

The first course in the program will be offered this fall beginning Monday, Sept. 8, at 6:30 p.m. The instructor for the course is Mr. Maurice Dion, from the R. M. Sullivan Transportation Co. Dion brings to the classroom not only day-to-day experience but a considerable amount of background in teaching traffic and transportation courses.

The purpose of the course is to help people who are in traffic and transportation management positions as they conduct their day-to-day business. In addition, though, people who are interested in careers in transportation are invited to register for the course. When it is known that one out of every eight or nine people in the United States earn their living from a transportation related occupation, the importance of this program can be seen. Since there is every form of transportation known to mankind existing in the corridor between Greater Hartford and Greater Springfield, the entire program is seen as one that will help the industry of the area.

Enfield Swim Club In Champion Meet

Nineteen swimmers, who are members of the Tankers Swim Team, represented Enfield at the recent Hartford Times Tournament of Champions swim meet held at Pope Park. Selected on the basis of their performances at the Town Swimming Championships, the swimmers found stiff competition from the 600 entrants from all areas of the state.

Sandy Noonan and Mike Healey led the group of 15-18 year olds, with Miss Noonan finishing fourth in the 100 meter breaststroke for girls and Healey fourth in the 100 meter breaststroke for boys. Mike Slattery scored fifth in the 100 meter backstroke and Jim Ottman gained a sixth in the 100 meter freestyle and eighth in the 50 meter freestyle. Kathy Mon and Pete Beigel scored sixth and eighth, respectively, in the 200 meter individual medley, with Miss Mon also taking seventh in the 100 meter freestyle and Beigel ninth in the 100 meter butterfly.

Competing in the 9-10 year old age group, Billy Ball and Bobby Sylvester led with fourth place finishes in the 50 meter backstroke and 50 meter freestyle. Karen Boulanger scored two fifth places, in the 50 meter freestyle and 50 meter breaststroke. Danny Ottman took sixth in the 50 meter breaststroke.

Paula Boulanger, swimming in the 11-12 year old age group, scored fourth in the 50 meter freestyle and fifth in the 50 meter butterfly. Joe Slizis finished fourth in the 100 meter freestyle and ninth in the 50 meter freestyle. Also competing in this age group were Margie Oppenheimer, seventh in the 100 meter freestyle and eighth in the 50 meter backstroke; Tommy Levasseur, seventh in the 50 meter backstroke; Lisa Oneto, ninth in the 50 meter breaststroke and Margaret Dougan who placed eighth in the 200 meter individual medley.

Gregg Rawson led the 13-14 year old swimmers with a fourth place in the 100 meter backstroke and sixth in the 200 meter individual medley. Carol Mon finished ninth in the 100 meter backstroke and eleventh in the 50 meter freestyle. Mark Bergstrom was tenth in the 100 meter breaststroke.

Coaches Charles Dougan and Bob Beigel complimented the swimmers on their fine showing at the meet, which completes the third year of competition for the Enfield Swim Club. The Tankers, who are sponsored by the Enfield Park and Recreation Department, will resume practice the first week in October at the Fermi High School pool in preparation for winter competition in the North Central Connecticut Swim League.

BIG TAX SAVINGS NOW. BIG MONEY TO LIVE ON LATER.

That's what a State Bank For Savings Individual Retirement Account can mean to you.

Are you working for a company that has no pension plan?

Are you self-employed?

Are you a part-time worker?

Are you ineligible for your company plan?

Are you leaving your job and taking your pension money with you?

If you said "yes" to any of the above, you may be eligible for a tax-saving Individual Retirement Account and should get complete details at any State Bank For Savings office.

State Bank can put together a pension plan just right for you... one which can save you big income tax dollars and will earn high interest for you at the same time.

The new pension law permits you to set aside up to 15% of your yearly earnings or $1500 a year (whichever is less) and deduct this amount from your taxable income each year you contribute until retirement. In addition, the interest you earn will also be tax free until you start to draw your pension at retirement. At that time, you'll very likely be in a lower tax bracket so your tax will be far less than it is now. This chart shows you how dramatically your IRA can grow:

At 5 1/4 % Interest Rate	With IRA Plan	Without IRA Plan
6 years	$ 10,858	$ 6,801
12 years	$ 25,737	$15,207
18 years	$ 46,125	$25,596
24 years	$ 74,061	$38,436
30 years	$112,339	$54,305
At 7 3/4 % Interest Rate	With IRA Plan	Without IRA Plan
6 years	$ 11,907	$ 7,234
12 years	$ 30,864	$17,137
18 years	$ 61,041	$30,692
24 years	$109,081	$49,246
30 years	$185,558	$74,642

A substantial interest penalty is required for early withdrawals from Certificate Accounts.

Mail in this coupon and we'll send you a brochure which details this outstanding program... better yet, come in to any of our five offices and let us explain how the program can especially benefit you.
