Winner Of $100,000

Last week, an Enfield resident was the lucky winner in the Connecticut Lottery, competing with six others from within the state. In winning, he took home the top prize of $100,000. ## Youth Conservation Corps Applications Available

Theodore B. Bampton, deputy commissioner of the Connecticut Department of Environmental Protection (DEP), announced that applications are available and are now being accepted for the Connecticut Youth Conservation Corps (YCC).

YCC is a program of summer employment for young men and women, aged 15 through 18, who work, earn and learn together by doing projects which further the development and conservation of the natural resources of the United States.

Public Law 93-408, passed in 1974, provided that Federal funds would be available to states to assist them in meeting the cost of Youth Conservation Corps programs on a permanent basis. The United States Dept. of Agriculture, Forest Service and the United States Dept. of the Interior jointly administer the YCC program in cooperation with the several states.

The YCC program in Connecticut will run from June 28 through Aug. 20 and is open to state residents who will be at least 15 years old by the opening date and who will not turn 19 years old before the last day of the program.

The corps will employ a total of 160 young people this summer, 54 more than were employed last year, because of a significant increase in federal grant monies available to the state.

This is the first year that Connecticut will offer a residential program in addition to its non-residential mobile teams. The state will operate a coed camp for 30 young people located in the Meshomasic State Forest, Portland, and the United States Dept. of the Interior will operate a coed camp for 10 participants in the Salt Meadows National Wildlife Refuge in Westbrook. The rest of the enrollees will make up the 10 mobile teams which are located statewide. These young people live at home but commute to work project sites daily.

For all enrollees, work projects will include wildlife management, forestry, park and recreation area development and maintenance and fish management. The YCC members will learn basic techniques of natural resources management and underlying ecological principles.

The participants will earn a nominal $500 for their work during the eight-week program.

Applicants should realize that the number of applications for the program could greatly exceed the number of positions available.

Selection of participants will be made at random by computer from the application population.

Applications and complete information may be obtained by writing to State of Connecticut, Dept. of Environmental Protection, Operations and Maintenance — YCC, Hartford, Connecticut 06115.

The last date to obtain an application by mail is April 9, and the deadline for application submittal is April 15.

Local Police Union Acts In O'Neil Case

By ERNEST A. MOKUS

Members of the Enfield Police Union, Local 798, Council 15 of American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees AFL-CIO, met Monday evening to consider and act on recommendations concerning the departmental misconduct hearings of Sgt. Richard O'Neil.

The hearings, held at Town Hall, which are becoming a long, drawn-out process due to the many irrelevant and side issues being brought up and discussed, are being prosecuted by the Chief of Police Walter J. Skower with the assistance of Police Lieut. Walter Juniewicz with Town Attorney John Adams as legal counsel for the prosecution. O'Neil is represented by Atty. C. Michael Budlong. The case is being heard before Town Manager William McDivitt.

Neither member of the prosecution, Skower and Juniewicz, are attorneys; nor is McDivitt.

What concerns the members of the police union is that it has become apparent that Sgt. O'Neil is not the only person on trial at these hearings but that every officer who has testified has been put on trial. This being the case, according to the police union, it appears that the police department as a whole is in fact on trial, without benefit of proper counsel.

As a result of the trend of the hearings, the police union has agreed and has contacted union headquarters in New Haven to have a union attorney present at all future hearings to protect the rights of members from "unnecessary harassment." It is reliably reported the union has agreed to send an attorney to represent any union member or members testifying at all future hearings to protect their rights.

It is understood that this attorney will be given access to all past transcripts in order to make him aware of what has transpired and to appraise him of the situation as it presently stands.

It was further recommended by the police union that the Civil Liberties Union be contacted and be given copies of all past transcripts of the hearings to determine if the civil rights of any members who has testified has been violated and if so, that a class action suit be instituted.

Workers Needed To Tabulate Results

Sixth District Congressman Toby Moffett has issued a request for volunteers to help tabulate the results of his recent Congressional questionnaire.

"We've already added up about three thousand of them," said Moffett, "but we have more than twice that number to go — and they're still coming in every day!"

Moffett said the tabulation process "is part of a non-partisan effort to find out just how the residents in Enfield and throughout Connecticut's Sixth Congressional District feel about a variety of issues," including energy, Congressional forums and town meetings, handgun legislation, pollution laws and the federal budget.

Work on the questionnaire tabulations will take place at the Neighborhood Activity Center, 19 North Main St., Enfield, from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Feb. 22 and 29.

Anyone interested in helping tabulate the District-wide results should contact Pat Lombardo in Enfield, at 745-8577 (days) or 745-6360 (evenings).

The proclamation, issued from Enfield's town hall, declares that heart and blood vessel diseases afflict 90,000 residents of the greater Hartford area, claiming more lives than all other causes of death combined. It is estimated that in Enfield approximately 5,625 people have cardiovascular disease. Last year 122 deaths resulted from CVD, representing 51 per cent of all deaths in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Blake Donaldson and Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Nadeau were appointed "Heart Days" co-chairmen. In mailing the announcement, Robert Lenihan and J. Thomas Vandevanter, Enfield Fund co-chairmen, said that this foursome would divide the responsibility of coordinating the efforts of local volunteers during the Heart Fund's residential drive which began February 9th and will continue through Feb. 29, which is designated as "Heart Sunday".

It will claim more than a million lives this year and will cause a loss of $20 billion in lost wages and medical expenses.

Nationally, during February, more than 2 million volunteers will distribute heart-saving information and collect funds for research programs, community projects and educational programs.

Local Doctor Named Diplomat Of ABFP

Dr. Silverbach of Enfield has been named a diplomate of the American Board of Family Practice (ABFP) as a result of passing a certification examination offered by the ABFP. He is now certified in the speciality of family practice.

The intensive 2-day written examination taken by Dr. Silverbach is designed to prove his ability in the areas of internal medicine, surgery, obstetrics, gynecology, pediatrics, psychiatry and community medicine.

To qualify for the examination a physician must have completed either a 3-year family practice residency or have been in family practice a minimum of six years and successfully completed 300 hours of continuing medical education approved by the American Academy of Family Physicians.

ABFP diplomates also must continue to show proof of competency in the field of comprehensive, continuing care of the family by being recertified every six years. No other medical specialty requires diplomates to prove competence on a continuing basis.

The latest group of diplomates brings the total number to more than 8,700. Most are members of the Academy of Family Physicians, the national association of family doctors. In addition to being the only national M.D. group to require members to take continuing medical study, the Academy was chiefly responsible for securing specialty status for family practice.

Linda Kiner Appointed New VISTA Volunteer

Linda Kiner has been appointed the new VISTA volunteer to work with Senior Citizens in the surrounding 12 towns. The VISTA office is located at Asnuntuck Community College.

Linda is an Enfield resident. She has been active, in the past, in many local organizations.

"I hope to be able to coordinate programs among all the towns and to assist in beginning some new ones. The Think Tank, with representatives from most of the towns served, seems to be a very effective way to coordinate these programs", she said.

"The Think Tank is composed of thirty to fifty Senior Citizens from many of the surrounding towns, including Enfield. We all will try to work together to help solve some of the problems facing senior citizens in all towns. We can always use new and fresh ideas from new members," Ms. Kiner said, "and I hope the membership will continue to grow as more Senior Citizens learn of our existence and of what we are trying to accomplish".

Ms. Kiner will be speaking at various meetings of organizations to describe her work and that of the Think Tank. If your organization would like more information, contact her at the VISTA Office at Asnuntuck Community College.

Funds Available For Sign Modernization

The Connecticut Department of Transportation has notified the chief executives of 63 state communities that there are Federal funds available for signing modernization on local town roads.

Deputy State Transportation Commissioner William J. Wade, Sr., in a letter to the municipal leaders, pointed out that by "standardizing warning and regulatory signs throughout Connecticut and the nation, safety on all streets and highways will hopefully increase." There are over 100 cities and towns which are already participating in the program.

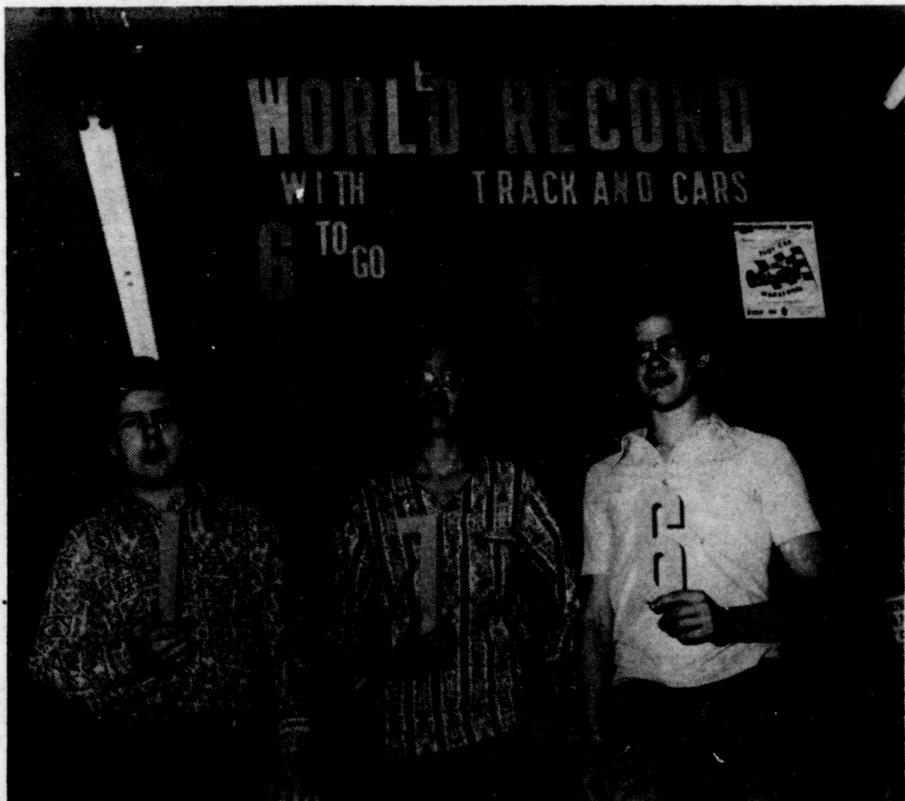

"We want to make sure that each and every community in Connecticut has an opportunity to take advantage of this program," said Wade.

A list of participating municipalities will be compiled on a priority basis and an inventory indicating the signing needs will be conducted by State traffic engineering personnel at no cost to the municipality.

Upon completion of this inventory, steps will be taken to initiate a joint State-municipality project for agreement consideration for the actual purchase and erection of the necessary signs.

This program covers 90 percent of all sign material costs, posts, hardware, and related labor and is administered on a reimbursable basis.

Establish New Record

Dan Eastman, Ed Fargo and Bob Albro completed their slot car racing marathon Monday at 8 p.m. of 176 hours, breaking the former record of 172 hours. The boys began the marathon Feb. 9. All are members of the Pinemeadow Chapter of DeMolay. Eastman and Albro are from Enfield and Fargo is from Windsor Locks. According to the rules, only three could participate in the event. The boys slept in split shifts on a cot in the rear of Craftec Hobbies on South Road in Enfield where the event was held.

Marathon Yields $1,800

Coffee, small talk, citizen band radio conversations and efforts by Enfield volunteers raised nearly $1,800 for equipment at Newington Children's Hospital.

In a 40-hour marathon last weekend, Friends of Patty Wheat and Newington Children's Hospital accumulated $1,745.

Patty Wheat is a local girl undergoing treatment at the hospital.

Dozens of people crowded the room at the Hospitality Inn where the marathon was held. A rock band performed while CB radio operators were informed of the event by a base station set up at the inn.

As travelers stopped for coffee they donated to the equipment fund. Some even got to talk with Patty Wheat, the girl in whose name all this was being done.

Patty, 13, is the daughter of James and Mary Wheat of 20 Flagg Ct. A few months ago she underwent surgery to remove blood clots from her skull; she has some paralysis on her right side and the therapy at Newington will hopefully help her overcome that.

Patty's friends gave her gifts while she waited for supporters of the drive to drop in for the marathon.

Carol Abohatab, Marianne Gutska and Felicia Rookey presented Patty with Valentine gifts they had been saving for the day their friend came home from the hospital.

Hundreds of people from across the region were there during the weekend; dozens of local people representing civic and social organizations manned the CB unit and coffee pots during the 40 hours of the coffee break.

WFSB-TV cameraman films television personality Brad Davis and Patty Wheat during weekend coffee marathon at Enfield's Hospitality Inn. Davis took to citizen band airwaves to bring CB operators to the marathon which raised nearly $1,800 to buy equipment for Newington Children's Hospital.

As the marathon drew to a close Sunday morning, representatives of Elks Lodge 2222 of Enfield stopped in with a check for $500, the largest single contribution to the drive.

For those who didn't get to the marathon, the drive remains open and contributions may be sent to the First National Bank of Enfield, 231 Hazard Ave., Attn. Bob Kemp.

Moffet For Protection Of Gasoline Dealers

Connecticut Congressman Toby Moffett, D-6th Dist., said his House energy subcommittee will be holding hearings this Spring on 'Dealer Day in Court' legislation to protect independent gasoline retailers from corporate takeovers of their stations.

"These small businessmen are being systematically wiped out," charged Moffett, "and it's the giant oil companies that are responsible. It's a calculated effort to gain total control over the marketing end of an already anticompetitive field."

He said his action stems from meetings with Sam Dworkin, President of the Connecticut Gasoline Retailers Association, and with other independent retailers in his Congressional district. Moffett said the chairman of his House Energy and Power Subcommittee, Rep. John Dingell (D-Mich.), has agreed to his request for formal hearings on the situation.

Moffett says the pressures being brought to bear on local gasoline retailers take two basic forms: Imposition of arbitrary operating conditions (e.g., longer hours and large volume accessory purchases) and threat of lease termination.

"There is an apparent trend in the industry toward company-owned service stations, managed by oil corporation employees. It's an effort to extend their control all the way from the oil well and the refinery to the gas pump.

"And the real victims are the small dealers, most of whom lease their stations from the majors. They're pressured to sell tires, batteries and other accessories from the companies, and they're pushed to stay open all hours," Moffett asserted.

"Since the dealers have to make up for these added expenses, one immediate result is higher prices to consumers for gasoline."

Moffett said the big oil companies "hold the ultimate weapon: They can refuse to renew their leases, many of which are short-term."

"It's easy for a retailer to feel too intimidated to go to court on this issue. That's one reason why we need federal action," said Moffett.

Dworkin told Moffett that "the unfair pricing condition that exists today forces many dealers to reduce their profit structure."

"The result," Dworkin said, "is financial chaos." He urged the majors to lower gasoline tank wagon prices "so we can work on a fair margin and still remain competitive."

Moffett pointed out that, "at a time when we need to conserve our energy resources — the oil companies themselves deluge us with advertisements telling us how much they're doing for conservation — the big conglomerates are pushing local retailers to stay open longer and to sell more gasoline."

Moffett cited a Connecticut state franchise law which is designed to offer some protection, in terms of access to courts. "But what's needed now," he said, "is a consistent policy on the federal level."

Veteran's Fund

Veterans are very special citizens and as such they deserve very special consideration.

After the echoes of oratory and marching bands fade away, there is little, except a few granite monuments, that is more than a memory.

In Connecticut, there is one substantial exception — the Soldiers, Sailors and Marine Fund . . . a constant, concrete expression of gratitude in a time of real need.

The fund was established by the Legislature directly after World War I through a tax on cigarettes. Money has been added to it after each major conflict.

Today it is a $29 million investment which earns about $2.5 million a year. This money is given very efficiently and very effectively to veterans in real need through a sophisticated screening process.

Administrative costs have been extremely low. Minor criticism has been leveled against the administration for giving aid to veterans on strike.

Other than that, the fund has an outstanding record for performance. No small part of the credit for this goes to the many veterans who, without pay, help administer the fund.

Now, Gov. Ella Grasso is asking the General Assembly to make a drastic change in the way this service to veterans is financed.

She is asking that the fund be transferred to the general fund to help wipe out part of the $37 million deficit.

Naturally, the veterans object strenuously. Their objections are based primarily on fear.

They know that what they have now is solid. It belongs to them, they control it. Once it is changed, they will be at the mercy of the Legislature, annually.

That they do not relish, which is understandable.

The Governor does not propose any changes in the handling of the fund. She suggests that the state guarantee a tax source, such as the admissions tax, to finance the program.

Here again the veterans are apprehensive of being subjected to the whims of political pressures.

Anyway you look at it — what the Legislature gives, the Legislature can take away.

Coming up with $2.5 million annually looks a lot easier than finding $29 million in today's economy.

Governor Grasso's reasoning is compelling.

The alternatives are deep slashes in services, large increases in taxes or deficit borrowing.

Now, it is up to the General Assembly to accept this or make a better mousetrap.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

On Education

To The Editor:
Recently many schools have issued calls to the public to air their views regarding the educational system. I have interviewed parents and we have agreed on the following conclusions. The school dropout or failure of today may not be the failure of tomorrow.

One specific case is a girl failing academically in her youth and today she owns a successful ceramics establishment. She is a respected and financially secure member of the community. Perhaps more data should be compiled on school dropouts in Enfield. Was the failure the child's or the system or was minimum effort expended in retaining the child's interest in studies. If each person in authority claims "I am blameless in this child's failure" — where do we go to find the solution?

In my personal situation, I related my son's experience. He is now class leader in U.S. Navy courses but was not achieving highest honors in public school.

Also, another problem to be faced in Enfield is transfer of parochial school students to public schools. They come from a small-class oriented school, specializing in private attention, then transferred to the large-class public school system and some of these children suffer readjustment to the new environment year after year with no solution, the only road being school dropout or failure.

They Tax His Patience

To The Editor:

I can almost set my watch by them. The columns appear in the newspapers as regularly as clockwork, written by commentators plugging for a state income tax.

And it's the same old story every time. The advocates, usually unnamed, bemoan the "fact" that there is not enough income available from any other tax source. Not a word about the frustration of we abused taxpayers who do not want any increase in state spending at all. Most of us would prefer a drastic reduction in state spending, so our taxes can go down, not up.

I associate mostly with the poor, the producers and the middle class and I have yet to hear one person volunteer a comment that we need an income tax.

The regular-as-clockwork commentators never mention a John Smith or a Jane Doe average citizen who can't wait to have everybody know how badly an income tax is needed. No, when the advocates are named, or when you attend a legislative Tax Committee hearing at the Capitol, you discover that they are either very wealthy or are representatives of businesses or organizations which have something to gain from increased state spending. It's very hard to believe that they truly have the best interests of the people at heart.

Oh, but they do, they will tell you, especially "the poor and middle class, who can least afford it." They don't mention the fact that most necessities, such as food and shelter are not taxed and that therefore the poor, who presumably spend most of their income on necessities, are taxed very little, if at all. (Clothing is a necessity which should not be taxed.)

They also don't mention the fact that the producers are socked so hard by the tax thievery of the politicians, that they have very little left after paying for necessities, with which to buy luxuries.

The only reason that the producers and the middle class bear the brunt of the rip-off is because there are so many of them.

Ironically, though our sales tax is the highest and our tax burden in Connecticut is crushing, our load is very light when compared to the income tax states, where a 7 per cent income tax brings in ten times as much tax revenue as a 7 per cent sales tax.

This is the secret behind the constant push for an income tax. The more money that passes through the hands of the politicians, the more opportunity for a large amount to attach itself to sticky fingers, in one way or another, and the more money the state spends, the more profit there is to be made by those businessmen who are willing to play the political payoff game in order to land contracts. There are more ways for money spent by government to "kick back" than there are politicians.

All an income tax does is increase the tax load on everybody because it vastly increases government spending capability. Further increase in the sales tax percentage would not only fail to bring in large sums of additional money but would increase the risk of direct action from irate taxpayers who can see what is happening every time they go to a cash register.

The proponents keep harping away at "ability to pay" ignoring the fact that every citizen is supposed to pay an equal price for government services just as we all pay an equal price for a loaf of bread.

The advocates of an income tax say the sales tax "hits the low and moderate income person harder than it does those with more money." No way! I repeat; poor people spend most of their money on necessities which are not taxed. Their burden has to be less.

The argument that the sales tax "consumes too great a percentage of the take-home pay of those who can least afford it" is pure hogwash. Seven per cent of zero is still zero.

The Innocent Bystander

By DICK HARTFORD

The man stood nearly halfway into the snow covered road, thumbing a ride. He was lightly dressed against the high, freezing wind and swirling snow.

As I drove closer, I could see that he had a haircut. While I have to tolerate longhairs in the same world, I don't have to pick them up.

I stopped. He got in, shivering. I drove on. He looked like he was in his mid-60's.

"I think I've got VD . . . hope you're going near the hospital."

"What? I asked, not believing what I had just heard from a total stranger.

"Yeah," he replied, "VD, a dose, clapp, you know."

"That's tough," I muttered still not believing my ears.

He wasn't really listening to me. He was too shook up. He continued:

"Yeah, it looks like the real thing. Can't understand it. Been with this woman — good gal — for two years, every Tuesday. No one else. She's gotta be the one to stray . . . Suppose I can't complain . . ."

He offered me a cigaret.

"Thanks, no."

"Don't smoke, huh? I stopped once, for a while," he said, lighting up.

"I should have asked permission first," he said.

"No, that's okay, I don't mind." As I drove along, he continued:

"You did say you were going near the hospital, didn't you?"

I hadn't but I said "yes."

"God," he said, "I hope it isn't true but I know it is. I spent five years in the Navy. Landed one in every port. Couldn't get ashore fast enough after weeks at seas. Nothing like this ever happened."

He rambled on . . .

"The Navy showed us VD movies. They had a thing like a Roto-Rooter that they used to clean it out."

He doubled up as though he could feel it. "Christ it was awful . . . guys bit broomsticks in half from the pain."

He straightened up, lit another cigarette and seemed calmer.

He talked for a while about his father, his brother, living on a pension and his room and the good setup he had with his woman . . . until now.

"I bought her a jug of good wine. When this happened I drank half of it and left the jug on her doorstep."

We reached the hospital.

"Oh, he said, "I forgot to mention, I want to go to the center first to see a friend."

Then, as an after thought, he added, "A man, of course."

"Thanks, thanks a helluva lot for the ride," he said as he got out.

"Jesus, what luck!" he concluded as he departed.

Vets Should Use SN When Contacting VA

If your last name is Johnson and you plan to check with the Veterans Administration about possible benefits, better be specific.

The old "name, rank and military serial number" bit will come in handy — especially the serial number — because the VA has about 203,000 ex-GI's named Johnson on its rolls. You'll run into the same sort of problem if your name is Smith (there are around 305,000 Smiths in VA files), or Williams (there are about 150,000 of them).

That's why the VA urges you and your dependents to use your serviceman's serial number or — if you have had previous contact with the agency — the VA "C" number shown in your return correspondence.

With 34 million veterans names in VA computer files, the job of matching an inquiry with records showing eligibility is almost impossible unless you supply the essential basic data.

For example, if Thomas Brown were to ask the VA about his eligibility for GI Bill educational benefits, but neglected to provide the agency with his service serial number, the VA would be faced with identifying him from among the 2,700

Thomas Browns in VA files.

Providing first names and middle initials helps, of course, but it often isn't enough. VA points out that 35 per cent of the veterans in its files have the following given names: John, Robert, William, James, Charles,

Joseph, Richard, George, Edward or Thomas. If your name happened to be Charles Edward Thomas, for instance, the computer might really be confused, since there are nearly 75,000 Thomases in its memory banks.

Veterans with less common names than Smith, Jones or Brown are nonetheless well represented in the VA's files, the agency said.

There are approximately 24,100 Sanders, over 27,000 Myers, about 36,000 Rogers, nearly 47,000 Wrights, around 42,000 Murphys and over 23,000 Schmidts in the VA files, to name only a few.

With more names being added daily, it's easy to see why the VA needs as much specific information as possible about a veteran's service record so that his or her claim for benefits can be processed and completed as rapidly as possible.

Take heart from one fact, however. A search of VA's 34 million name file confirmed that there's only one Santa Claus.

Bandstand '76 Progress

As of Feb. 11, donations received for Bandstand '76, the Bicentennial project of the Suffield public schools, totaled $1,239.05 leaving a balance of $1,235.95 to be raised to match the grant of American Revolution Bicentennial Commission for $2,025, and total cost of $4500 for the bandstand.

The local donations include $450 received from the Jaycee Wives; $100 from Helena Bailey Spencer, and smaller amounts from individuals.

Donations from the schools and the school PTOs who are backing the project include $300 from Spaulding School PTO; $52.50 from McAlister School; $50 from Bridge St. P.T.O. and $25 from West Suffield PTO; and $112.50 from a Bakeless Bake Sale from all the schools.

The Bandstand '76 Committee is making an all out effort during the month of February to raise the needed funds by selling shares at $1 a share. All purchasers of shares will receive a certificate. An album of the Bandstand '76 project will include the names of all those who contributed and become a permanent record in the Kent Memorial Library.

Mrs. Virginia Dustin, chairman of the Bandstand '76 Committee, said the bandstand project received the American Revolution Bicentennial Commission grant because the project encompassed all of the prerequisites of the A.R.B.-

C., and because it will be a lasting and permanent structure. The Permanency was emphasized in the grant received.

The PTOs and Suffield schools chose the bandstand on the Green as their project because it combined all the elements of the American Revolution Bicentennial Commission program; Heritage '76; Festival U.S.A. and Horizons '76, Mrs. Dustin said, and because it could be a Lasting Reminder.

A Lasting Reminder could be defined as residual benefits to the Community of how and why it contributed to the overall spirit and theme of the Bicentennial, "A Past to Remember — A Future to Mold."

Contributions may be mailed to Bandstand '76 c-o Mrs. Frederic M. Dustin, 41 Pleasantview Dr., Suffield, Conn. 06078.

Consultant Authorized

The Suffield Board of Education has authorized the employment of a part-time person to serve as Title IX Compliance Consultant. Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972 pertains to sex discrimination within the programs, policies and practices of educational institutions. The person employed for the newly authorized position will conduct an assessment of the degree to which the Suffield Public Schools comply with federal regulations and report findings to the Superintendent and Board of Education. The assessment must be completed during the present school year. The position pays $3.35 per hour and will begin early in March. Application forms and information may be obtained from the superintendent's office.

Bid Opening

Date Set

A bid opening has been set for February 23 of bids received by the town for construction of a proposed 900-foot access road in the Suffield Industrial Park and accompanying sewer connections.

Completion of the project is anticipated in late spring, First Selectman Chester A. Kuras said.

Local Support For Gay Laws?

Supporters of a bill to prohibit discrimination against homosexuals claim they have a good chance this year of getting the legislation through Connecticut's General Assembly.

The proposal passed the state Senate 23-11 last year but was defeated in the House.

Backers estimate they need to pick up 16 votes in the lower chamber this session to pass the bill. The measure would outlaw discrimination on the basis of "sexual preference" in such areas as housing, employment and credit.

Last year, local lawmakers were split in their reaction to the bill. Sen. Charles Alfano (D-Suffield) and Rep. Astrid Hanzalek (R-Suffield) voted against the bill.

It was supported by Rep. John Morrison (D-Enfield), Rep. Richard Cressotti (D-Enfield) and Rep. Cornelius O'Leary (D-

Sponsors Need 16 Votes To Get Through House

Windsor Locks.)

But Cressotti is reconsidering this year. "Last year, I voted for the bill because I believe in insuring constitutional rights," he said.

"This year, I'm concerned about rumors the bill would require things like teaching homosexuality in the schools," Cressotti commented, saying he'd support it "on a constitutional basis, but nothing beyond that."

At a hearing on the bill last week before the Human Rights and Opportunities Committee, several persons testified that they had lost their jobs after telling their bosses they were homosexual.

A woman who had once served as a missionary told legislators "All I want is to work and live openly in my preferred lifestyle."

Another testifying for the bill was the Rev. Glen Roberts, a Vernon councilman, who said his son is a homosexual.

"Sexual orientation is not a matter of personal choice, as many believe," he said. "It is inborn and we are more honest if we accept it as an act of God."

He claimed homosexuals live in constant fear. "Every morning my son wakes up as an outcast and can do nothing about it," Roberts added.

Sen. Betty Hudson (D-Madison) co-chairman of the committee, said she believes the bill will have more supporters in the House of Representatives this year.

She said some legislators objected to the bill because they feared it would require affirmative action hiring programs for homosexuals.

But the committee now has a letter from Thomas Emerson, a constitutional law authority from Yale University, stating that the bill would not have any such effect.

Senator Hudson said she will present the legislature with a study showing that homosexuals do not have a higher incidence of emotional problems than heterosexuals.

Last year, the bill also met with a chilly response from Gov. Ella Grasso, who referred to parents' worries about homosexual teachers in schools.

"People think of homosexuals, as predators, which is ridiculous," Senator Hudson commented.

A child psychologist told last week's hearing that he did not believe a child with heterosexual inclinations could change his or her sexual preference because of association with homosexuals.

Arthur Green, director of the Human Rights Commission that would be charged with enforcing the new law, said "a number of persons have sought protection from housing and employment discrimination but we haven't been able to help" because of the lack of a law.

The director of the Connecticut Civil Liberties Union noted that homosexuality is not against the law, but suggested "discrimination is very pervasive" and said the law is needed to guarantee equal protection to homosexuals, an estimated one-tenth of the population.

Fund, Work Week Controversial Bills

Much of the controversy, confusion and rancor generated during this year's legislative session in Hartford will involve two bills the General Assembly has been debating since December.

The measures, proposed by Governor Grasso during the recent special session, would dissolve the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Fund and put state employees on a 40-hour work week.

Unless you happen to be a veteran or a state employee, neither proposal will have much impact, pass or fail. But the issues are worth looking into, because they explain a lot about what's happening these days in the state capitol.

Governor Grasso took to the airwaves last November to announce the state was facing an $80 million deficit. Some of that money, she said, could be made up by new savings in her agencies. She called the legislature back into session to consider a package of proposals to meet the rest of the anticipated budget gap. The most important of those were the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Fund and the 40-hour work week measures.

Neither bill came to a vote in the House or Senate. They were killed in committee, and killed mainly because of opposition from House Democrats.

An angry Governor Grasso accused the legislators of "skating off the ice" when the team needed them, and of sabotaging her proposals out of a "lust" for a state income tax.

The special session also left a few wounds between the House Democrats and their Senate counterparts. The lower chamber wanted to stay in special session to work on new approaches to the fiscal problems. But Senate Democrats, who had in the main supported the Grasso program, voted quickly to go home.

Why were the bills rejected?

The governor painted a picture of Democrats voting down her bills in hopes there would be no alternative to an income tax. Much of the media depicted the House as cowering before pressure from the veterans groups and state employees.

Legislators who had op-

Connecticut Legislature

By Gail Collins

posed the bills were outraged by both charges. "We're convinced more than ever the governor's plan is a turkey," said one rank-and-file Democrat on the Appropriations Committee, which voted down the veterans bill.

House Democrats have been claiming they are eager to make tough decisions and save money. But the governor, they argue, has not been encouraging them to come up with ideas of their own.

After the Public Personnel and Military Affairs Committee voted down the 40-hour work week, for instance, they were told by their chairmen not to bother considering other proposals to cut back on salary costs.

The governor, Senator Wayne Baker (D-Danbury) informed them, would vote down any alternative bills.

The Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Fund bill has run into intense opposition from both Republicans and Democrats.

The governor's proposal is to sell the $35 million worth of investments in the fund, a move that would net the state about $29 million. The money would be used to plug up the deficit.

In return, the governor asked the legislature to earmark $2.5 million in state revenue every year for veterans relief.

The Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Fund is, in the words of auditor Henry Becker "a peculiar sort of set-up." It was established after World War I with revenue from the state cigarette tax.

The state has long since stopped contributing money to the fund. But the interest from the $35 million is used to aid needy veterans and is administered by the American Legion.

The proposal initially ran into trouble when Governor

Grasso, through her legislative leaders, assured the Democrats that veterans organizations had no opposition to the plan, as long as they continued to get their money.

Leaders of veterans groups then stormed the Appropriations Committee to say they had made no such commitment.

Although many legislators have no love for the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Fund ("a slush fund for professional veterans" one prominent senator called it) they were even less enthusiastic about giving the American Legion $2.5 million a year into infinity to keep the program going.

That idea has generated so much opposition among House Democrats that Speaker James Kennelly (D-Hartford) has announced he would support total elimination of the veterans' program.

Kennelly, in the first real break between House leadership and the governor, said recently that veterans should use the same social service benefits available to the rest of the state.

The 40-hour work week had similar problems with the legislature. Many lawmakers who originally supported the idea changed their minds when some of the details of the bill became apparent.

The biggest problem was that the bill will affect only certain state workers. Those making over $14,000 a year, for instance, are not paid by the hour and would not be affected.

In addition, the legislators discovered a number of employes on the lower pay grades, particularly those employed at state institutions like mental hospitals as aides and orderlies, have been regularly working 40 hours a week for years.

No Money No Programs

If the state can't give local schools more money, the state should stop making local schools provide new programs, the legislature's Education Committee decided last week.

The committee voted down a number of bills calling for increased state aid to schools, and at the same time killed proposals requiring new programs and services at the local level.

The measures, all proposed by the State Board of Education, included a request for increased money for special education, more state support for school lunch programs, and extra funding for transportation costs.

A proposal to require special education for the gifted child, and a bill remanding driver education were also defeated.

Until last year the state reimbursed towns for the cost of driver education courses, and required each school to include driver ed in the curriculum.

When the legislature voted to eliminate the funding last year, it also agreed to allow towns to drop the courses. Since then, eight school systems have eliminated driver education.

"If you give children all the education they want and then they're killed in a car crash, it's wasted money," argued Rep. Donald St. Pierre (D-Plainville). St. Pierre claimed school boards would not object to remanding the program.

"When I was a member of a local board of education there was nothing more pleasant than to be able to stand up and say 'we have no choice — the state makes us provide this program,'" responded Rep. Skip Walsh (D-Coventry).

Las Vegas Nights Popular

The governor doesn't like it, the police don't like it, but the people of Connecticut do: they spend millions each year at Las Vegas-style gambling events which benefit non-profit groups.

At a hearing in Hartford last week on a bill to repeal or amend the law allowing the games, state police claimed $20 million is waged each year at the events.

They charged the betting is benefitting professional gamblers and organized crime far more than charity.

On the other side, non-profit groups claim they need to continue the games to raise money for their charitable efforts. Sponsors are supposed to give gift certificates, not cash, as winnings, but police testified that massive cash payments do take place, and are almost impossible to track down and prove.

House Minority Leader Gerald Stevens (R-Milford) told the legislature's General Law Committee he hopes a balance can be struck between the competing interests.

"It's hard enough to get people to give to charity," Stevens said. "But we have to insure that organized crime cannot permeate into games of chance."

Gov. Ella Grasso, no friend of gambling in any form, has suggested to the committee that it consider total repeal of the Las Vegas night laws.

Pet Protection Laws Drafted

Animal welfare supporters won a few and lost a few battles in Hartford last week.

The General Assembly's Environment Committee voted to draft several pet-protection bills for consideration this year. They range from a so-called "Equal Rights Amendment for dogs" to increased power for dog wardens.

But the committee killed a measure banning animal euthanasia chambers and a bill aimed at canine population control.

Euthanasia chambers are devices used by a number of animal shelters to kill dogs through decompression. Opponents of the chambers claim they can be intensely painful to the animals.

The committee agreed to hold the bill until next year, when the legislature will be in session for a longer period.

Also shelved was a bill requiring dog pounds to charge prospective owners for the cost of spaying any animal adopted from the pound was also shelved.

"There are too many problems with the bill now," said animal welfare sub-committee chairman Rep. John McManus (D-Hamden).

The "ERA for dogs" would rearrange licensing fees so male and female dogs are charged at the same rate. Right now spayed females are licensed at the same fee as all male dogs, neutered or not.

That bill goes now to public hearing, along with a measure to give dog wardens the power to issue citations against pet owners who have roaming dogs.

$796,000 Renewal Rush Order

The Freshwater Pond Urban Renewal Project will close down by the end of June if Enfield doesn't get $796,000 fast.

In a letter to Gov. Ella Grasso, Mayor Armand Roy explained that the renewal project is threatened by the delay in getting money from the federal government.

The delay was caused by the suit filed by the City of Hartford against the Department of Housing and Urban Development and seven towns whose requests for funds HUD had approved.

Hartford won that suit and Enfield officials resubmitted the local request correcting deficiencies cited by Federal Judge M. Joseph Blumenfeld in his ruling.

Town Manager William McDivitt said Tuesday he feels there is "no question" the new submission will win federal approval.

But officials in Washington are trying to decide whether to appeal Blumenfeld's ruling and they may sit on the money until that is settled.

The situation has left the town with financial obligations it can't meet.

McDivitt explained that the town won't be able to buy property, relocate residents and businesses, or make public improvements without money from the federal government.

So why write a letter to the governor?

It seems that the state, until it ran into severe fiscal problems of its own, had a policy of paying half a town's share of redevelopment projects.

At the time it was approved, the renewal project here was to get nearly $6 million from HUD. Something less than $2 million was considered the "local share" of redevelopment costs.

Enfield voters approved bonding the full local share, then when the state kicked in its half, it would be sort of a planned windfall.

But the state has now refused to pay its half — in this case $991,583 — until a public works task force comes up with a list of priorities.

The mayor wants the governor to know Enfield needs the money and needs it now.

Enfield is apparently in better shape than some towns who bonded half the local share and expected the state to pay up right away.

Federal officials now say they won't send renewal funds until the state pays.

The state may never pay, or if it does it may reduce the amount of the payment. The condition has officials in some of the 17 towns involved wondering whether they will lose renewal funds completely.

"Fortunately, we didn't depend on state funding when we financed the renewal project," explains McDivitt.

The town manager said he talked with Finance Commissioner Jay Tepper about the problem. Tepper's staff has conducted two studies to determine just how much money the state could raise, through bonding, to help out the towns involved.

The first time around they figured Enfield would get nothing; the second study showed Enfield would get $350,000.

Even if the state were able to pay that sum, it would leave the town $446,000 short of what is needed to keep the renewal project moving.

Officials here, then, are hoping HUD won't appeal Blumenfeld's decision and will move swiftly on the town's second application for the money.

If it doesn't come soon renewal will come to a halt, but the people employed by the town to run the project can expect to retain their jobs.

McDivitt explained that money for the project will come along, sometime, and it would be a "real administrative blunder" to let those people go.

"You just don't find people with that kind of background very easily," the manager explained.

Development Forecast: More Jobs, Families

Enfield's Community Development coordinator foresees a thousand new jobs here during the next three years but also predicts a thousand families won't be able to find a suitable place to live without federal assistance.

According to Eugene Puhopek there are already 850 families here who are living in overcrowded or substandard housing or pay more than a fourth of their income for rent.

More than 200 new families are expected to move into town during the next three years — families who will be in similar situations.

In an 18-page report of the town's housing assistance plan, Puhopek explains what Enfield has and what it can expect in the areas of housing and jobs.

The report was prepared as part of the town's application for Community Development Act (CDA) funds. Enfield seeks $4.5 million over the next five years.

Puhopek has to prepare a forecast of how many families are "expected to reside" in areas to be developed or redeveloped with the money sought.

The figure was a prime factor in the lawsuit filed by Hartford against seven area towns. That suit halted payment of several million dollars in federal funds.

The report indicates where Enfield's workforce lives, how the numbers of workers is expected to grow and how they will affect housing needs here.

Local CDA staff members surveyed employers and came up with:

— More than 63 per cent of the 9,330 people who work here live here.

— More than 21 per cent who work here live in Massachusetts.

— Some 15 per cent of those working in Enfield live in other towns within the Greater Hartford region.

Based on the firms who have located or plan to locate in the town-owned Park for Industry Puhopek's staff predicts:

— Nearly 800 new jobs will be available with new firms at the park.

— Principal employers in other areas of the community expect nearly 300 more jobs to open within the next two to three years.

In the area of housing, the survey showed:

— 13,163 occupied housing units; 277 of those are considered substandard.

— Only 2 per cent of all housing units are vacant, a figure considered low for a community this size.

— 200 housing units in town would qualify for assistance, according to the study; that figure was revised from 250 since nearly 50 units are already being rehabilitated.

Old School Building Doesn't Suit Asnuntuck

School board member Francis Burke thought it was a good idea; so did Reps. John Morrison and Richard Cressotti.

But Dan McLaughlin isn't crazy about it; he would prefer to keep Asnuntuck Community College in its warehouse.

In a letter filed a week ago with State Public Works Commissioner Robert Weinerman, Rep. John Morrison asked for information on the college and its lease.

The college is now located in a 48,000-square-foot building off Phoenix Ave.; local officials think the $2 million, 10-year lease should be terminated and the state should buy or lease one of Enfield's soon-to-be-vacant elementary schools as a home for the college.

Due to a decline in public school enrollment, one or two elementary schools may be closed down by the school board.

Dr. McLaughlin, president of Asnuntuck, said an old school just isn't suitable for the college.

Asnuntuck was originally located in the abandoned North School on College St.

McLaughlin said his reasons for rejecting a local school as a home for the college are based on needs for the college to be of a "slab" type construction to support machinery and make facilities accessible to handicapped students.

Vocational training equipment requires the support of a solid floor, he explains. The schools which have been mentioned for closing are two-story brick buildings.

Reportedly, it was Burke's idea, Morrison sent the letter to Weinerman with Cressotti's endorsement.

McLaughlin told The Press Wednesday the college would need more "open and flexible space" than would be available in an old school.

He also cited problems with the new fire code and parking requirements would hinder such an operation.

The administrator said he appreciated the idea and efforts of local people to help out the college.

McLaughlin called it an "honest and good idea . . . we appreciate that kind of interest."

Further, though, he pointed out it is illegal for him to look at space for his school.

That can be approved only by the state "super board" controlling community colleges. That board must approve a search for space even before the State Department of Public Works can start looking, McLaughlin explained.

Snow Plowing Fund Melts

The town has run out of money to plow snow and Public Works Director Roger J. Mullins is hoping the next week will be warm and sunny.

"After March 1 the snow melts before we can plow it anyway," said Mullins.

This winter it cost $20,000 for plowing contractors; another $25,000 went for maintenance and supplies. Salt was purchased from the Town Aid Fund.

"The weather this week was a God-send," said Mullins. "If we had continued at the pace we were going it could have been disastrous . . . I don't know where we would have gotten the money for plowing."

Mullins explains that his department will use money from the paving fund, if necessary, to keep town streets clear if we get hit with another storm.

Further, he said, the town bought sand with money left from last year's budget so Mullins has an "extra" $15,000 to combat this year's brutal weather.

"It's those storms in December and January that can get you into trouble," Mullins says. "But after March first, what snow isn't plowed will melt in a few days. If we can get through the next week, we'll be in good shape."

Moody Money Expected

The State Department of Transportation has approved Enfield's request to rebuild a section of Moody Road.

The agreement is now with the Department of Finance and Control for necessary steps before it can be released to the town.

State officials say final approval could come in about a week.

Once the town gets the agreement, engineers can begin planning improvements for Moody Road between Maple and Taylor Streets.

According to Roger Mullins, director of Public Works, improvements mean the complete rebuilding of the road surface, widening to 40 feet, curbs, drainage and a bicycle path so youngsters living in the Green Manorville area can get to recreational facilities at Fermi High School.

John R. Sweeney, acting chief engineer for the transportation department, explained that the agreement was delayed by the recent review of all state spending.

Engineers for the Enfield Department of Public Works will conduct preliminary engineering for improvements; the state will get a bill for about $43,000.

Hanzalek Supports Ban

State Representative Astrid T. Hanzalek, R., of Suffield, today urged all members of the Connecticut congressional delegation to support U. S. Senator Lowell P. Weicker's ban on Federal funds from any airport that allows the Concorde to land.

"Congress has already refused American companies the right to build the SST because of environmental problems it would create; it hardly seems proper to now permit foreign planes of the same ilk to cause the same problems for our citizens." Rep. Hanzalek said that the Environmental Protection Agency has said an area of over 450 square miles will be impacted by the Concorde which "means that all of Connecticut will suffer if the Concorde lands at Kennedy Airport. In fact, since Bradley Field is an alternate field for Kennedy Airport and the Concorde has only a half hour fuel reserve, we are likely to see the Concorde landing at Bradley 'in an emergency' quite often once it has received permission to use Kennedy."

"I would urge all concerned Connecticut citizens to write to their U. S. Representative and Senators asking them to support the ban on Federal funds for the airports which do accept the Concorde and I would also suggest they voice their opposition to the landing to the New York Port Authority which has the final decision on what aircraft are permitted at Kennedy Airport. The time for us to act is now before final permission is granted to the Concorde and we are then unable to reverse decisions."

Artist Residency Program

A unique performing arts program will bring two young professional performers to New England for two-week residencies, including one in Suffield, Gail Sanderson, field representative of Affiliate

Artists, Inc. a non-profit service organization, has announced. Actress Etain O'Malley and pianist Leon Bates will be in residence at a series of independent schools throughout Connecticut under sponsorship of the Reader's Digest Association, Mrs. Sanderson said. Miss O'Malley will be in residence at Suffield Academy from October 19 through 31. Arrangements may be made for appearances by Miss O'Malley in the area by contacting school coordinator Mason Nye, North Main St.

"Traditionally, affiliate artists have served colleges, universities, arts councils or producing organization and we in this region are the first to be involved in this partnership between the performing arts, business and the academic world on the secondary school level", Mrs. Sanderson said.

LWV Local Health Study

The local health study committee of the Suffield League of Women Voters will continue their discussions of health programs and facilities available in the town at a general meeting of the league Feb. 18 at 9:30 a.m. at the home of Mrs. Judy Gooch, 399 North Main St.

The health study committee has reported on the services of the Suffield Police Ambulance and the Suffield Emergency Aid Association which provides nursing care, health education, and various clinics. Other aspects of the health programs in town concern the duties and coverage offered by the town social worker, the role of the social services, the school health services and the duties of the director of health and town sanitarian.

Charter Unit's Schedule

The newly established Suffield Home Rule Charter Commission has a tight schedule if it can bring the result of its study to a November 1976 referendum, according to First Selectman Chester A. Kuras.

To meet statutory regulations, the commission must have a public hearing by April 1, and bring a report to selectmen by April 30, he said.

Another public hearing will be May 27, and by June 10, the selectmen must make any additional recommendations they may have. If none are made, the proposed charter would be made public by June 24, or if changes are recommended, a July 8 final report would be made, after conference with the selectmen.

On July 22, the Board of Selectmen would either approve or reject the proposed charter, and by August 19 the selectmen would publish the final form in full in the newspapers.

Also by Aug. 19, selectmen must vote whether to put the charter on the November 2 ballot, and if so, must draw up a resolution to that effect.

On Sept. 8, the town clerk must file the matter with the office of the secretary of the state so that the item may be on the November 2 ballot.

Kuras emphasized that the object of the Charter Commission is not to change the town's government, but to clarify it and give the town the right to more fully govern itself.

Certain commissions now exist by virtue of enabling statutes passed in the General Assembly, and any effort to change their operation requires seeking legislative action by the General Assembly.

With the town or "home rule" charter, many details of this nature could be handled on the local level, according to town officials.

At its organizational meeting February 12, the new commission named James Whitten, chairman, Matthew Tynan, vice chairman, and Frances Bryant, secretary. The bipartisan commission also includes Walter Dudek, Steven Fisher, Robert Stewart and Joseph Cranmore.

Landfill Site Study

Joseph Gill, head of the state Department of Environmental Department and Suffield Town Engineer Edward Kant have signed a contract for a $23,000 engineering study of the Kement property on Mountain Road, which the voters approved for a landfill site at the January 22 special town meeting. The engineering study contract goes to the state Attorney General for approval.

Because time is the biggest problem in the landfill study, it is important that work on the study starts now in hopes to have the results ready by June, when the Phelps land-fill is to be closed by the state.

Propane Gas Price

We are often asked the following question: "What state department or agency monitors the price control of propane gas?"

A. The price control of propane gas is monitored by the Federal Energy Agency (FEA) and not by any state department or agency.

The Federal Energy Agency monitors the price control of petroleum products and derivatives. They are also concerned with compliance and provide enforcement services. They have an office at 409 Main St., Hartford, telephone 244-3245.

The FEA reports the price for propane gas supplied by a dealer is determined by a base price established on May 15, 1973, and includes the cost increases the dealer has incurred in the product since that time. Non-product increases, such as materials, labor, etc., are considered by government formula in arriving at the maximum permissible selling price for that supplier.

It is true that the price ceiling may vary from one dealer to another, since it is figured from the base price that the particular dealer charged in 1973. Then too, the cost per tank may vary from customer to customer, depending on the purchaser's total use during the year.

Complaints, in writing, concerning the price of propane gas may be sent to the FEA Hartford office, but complaints or problems concerning service, or your business dealings with the supplier are matters to be resolved primarily between the individual purchaser and the dealer.

Directs "Country Girl"

Martin Fried, internationally-acclaimed director, is directing Stage-West's fourth production of the season, Clifford Odets' "The Country Girl," which opens on Saturday, Feb. 7. Fried comes to this production with a good deal of background on the playwright, having known him during the last years of his life and having directed some of his plays before, including "The Country Girl."

Fried, who has come to Stage-West from a busy year of directing which included "Saint Joan" for the Munich Residents House in Germany, Eugene O'Neill's "Huey" with Ben Gazzarra on Broadway, and O'Neill's "Long Day's Journey Into Night" for the Washington, D.C. Arena Stage. His future plans include a return visit to Arena Stage to direct "Dandelion Wine" and one to the Munich Residents House to direct their production of Brecht's "Mother Courage" and an unpublished play of Odets, "Silent Partner."

Fried is considered by actors to be an actors' director because in every production he throws himself at the mercy of the acting company. He comes to the production with a germ of a directing idea in mind, but it is only after several readings with the cast that he chooses a definite direction in which to proceed, gearing his choice to the temperament of the cast.

His bywords could be "that's entertainment," for he is a strong believer that the audience deserves to be entertained every moment of the production. "Every second of the play must be accounted for — there is no reason why the audience should have to sit through a boring segment waiting for something good to begin happening," states Fried.

While Fried has done this play before, he has remarked that it is much more interesting to do it at Stage-West, working with a resident company. "Most directors get their best work from a resident company. It's pure joy to work with a company that has had an opportunity to know and work with each other, and to watch the play come to life as a result of the interaction among the company." "The Country Girl" is a theatre fable, according to Fried, a story about backstage life in the theatre. "Good inside stuff about the world of theatre with the plot thickening each minute," says Fried.

"The Country Girl" runs at Stage-West from February 7-28, with a Wednesday matinee on Feb. 11 at 2 p.m.

Answers About Cancer

ANSWER LINE

A biology teacher asks: "Is the Pap test useful for all kinds of uterine cancer?"

Answer Line: The Pap test is about 95 percent accurate in diagnosing cancer of the neck of the uterus or womb, which is called cervical cancer. There is, however, another kind of cancer, endometrial cancer, which strikes the main portion of the womb. The Pap test is only about 60 percent accurate in detecting this kind of cancer. However, there are warning signals for endometrial cancer, such as abnormal discharge or bleeding. By heeding such signs and having Pap test and regular pelvic cigarettes just weren't known. Then, scientists did research and the facts became clear. Your parents may not have known what you know when they began smoking — it was once considered chic to smoke. As to why they still smoke? Why don't you ask them. Keep in mind the fact that they have probably been smoking for a long time and bad habits — maybe you have some and know what we are talking about — are hard to break. But it can be done and your local ACS Unit has some wonderful free booklets that will help your parents quit.

A mother of three writes: "I feel I owe it to my family to protect my health. That's why I've learned how to do breast self-examination for cancer. How often should I do it?"

Answer Line: You should examine your breasts once a month, preferably after your menstrual period. When a woman reaches menopause, she should still practice breast self-examination once a month. And by the way, if you have daughters of high school age, it's a good idea to teach them this important practice. Although breast cancer is rare in that age group, teenagers will be acquiring a habit that could help them greatly in later life. Call or write your local American Cancer Society office for free pamphlets on breast self examination.

A businessman writes: "My father is very energetic 75, and is no complainer, but lately he has been bothered by a pain in his lower back and upper legs. He thinks it's just old age. Could it be more?"

Answer Line: It would be best for your father to have a complete medical checkup to make sure that his aches are just "old age." He is in the age group prone to cancer of the prostate and sometimes the pains you describe can be symptomatic of this disease. That is only a possibility, but of course, only a physician can make this diagnosis.

Explaining Rifle Manual

Capt. Vincent C. Bellino of The Citadel's Military Science Department explains the 1861 rifle manual to Cadet Lee Jedziniak, a member of The Citadel's Palmetto Company which participated in the reenactment of the Firing on the Star of the West Saturday. Bayonets were removed from the vintage rifles, placed in scabbards and worn on the cadets' belts. A crowd of two thousand viewed the performance as cadets outfitted in Civil War uniforms manned a battery of Confederate cannon at Brittlebank Park on the Ashley River. The reenactment commemorated The Citadel cadets firing the first shots of the Civil War on Jan. 9, 1861. Cadet Jedziniak is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo S. Jedziniak, 29 Bridge La., Enfield.

LaJoie Joins "The Race"

Don LaJoie, the 1975 Danbury Speedway Champion, has filed entry for The Race. Like many other championship caliber drivers, LaJoie is planning to run both The Race and the Spring Sizzler the following day.

The two race format provides over $40,000 in prize money plus products for two days of racing making Sizzler Weekend the highest paid event in New England racing history. Many competitors are thus heading to New England with plans for both events.

Among the recent hot drivers signing in is Richie E Evans of Rome, New York. Evans, a winner at the New Smyrna series, is scheduled to drive the Gene DeWitt number 61.

Among the surprises are two cars entered without drivers. Angie Cerase entered his number 24 car without the customary driver Ken Bouchard and John Steiger has filed a "driver to be named" entry as well.

Chargers Ray Lee, George Savary, J. Cash, S. J. Evonsian, Paul Richardson, Gary Dufries, Freddy Schultz, Lou Toro and B. Clark have also added their names to the growing list.

Awareness Workshop

The month of March holds something different for Kosciuszko teachers. In lieu of the usual monthly faculty meetings, two consecutive workshops will be offered. This temporary change demonstrates an effort on the part of Administration and Faculty to add new dimensions to meetings.

Each teacher will be required to attend one workshop per week, concentrating on those areas which hold the most interest and relevancy for that particular teacher. The teacher will then share his/her new found knowledge with members of his/her department. The following is a list of the workshops which will be held:

1. Dialogue with members of Town Council.
2. Dialogue with members of Board of Education.
3. Developing the school budget (Mr. Sowell).
4. The legal responsibilities of teachers (CEA Representative).
5. The role of a juvenile officer (Mr. Connolly, Mrs. Krause, and Patrolman Foy).
6. Humanizing our schools (student-teacher dialogue).
7. Demonstration of A.V. Equipment (Mr. Drumm and Mr. Bowman).

WHALERS LOOK TERRIBLE

The Whalers looked terrible in their game with the Stingers last Friday night and the fans let them know it. The fans booed after each period as it seemed that the Whaler players were not putting out their all for dear old New England.

The press corps also took a dim view of the proceedings and the write-ups went accordingly. Managing General Partner Howard Baldwin was heard to exclaim that his players are being paid top dollar and he expects them to give a top performance for their money. He also stated that if the Whalers can't win with the team they have there will be some wholesale changes if necessary.

The biggest problem seemed to be in the defensive end as the Stingers were beating the Whaler defenses time and again. At times it seemed that the defense was non-existent. Of course they weren't exactly filling the Stinger net with pucks either.

Christer Abrahamson hasn't seemed the same since the all-star break. He was having a great year through the first half but has slacked off some recently. Maybe the letdown on the part of the defense is reflecting in Christer's play. After all, he can't be expected to supply the total defense. It has to be demoralizing when you see opposing players coming at you on breakaways all of the time.

Baldwin's little speech seemed to have done some good since the Whalers went out to Cleveland and beat the Crusaders in a Sunday afternoon game after being down by a 2-0 score. It won't take long to figure out whether they have finally put it together.

The Whalers are trying out a new right winger named Jim Troy. His biggest asset is his 6-2 frame and 200 pounds. He is built like Nick Fotiu but the resemblance ended there Friday night as he didn't do much hitting or much of anything for that matter. This was his first game though and he needs time to get his feet wet. He was sent out to take on Baxter of Cleveland in Sunday's game and I guess he got that job done. At least Baxter was a little more peaceful the rest of the night.

CONGRATULATIONS FALCONS

The Enrico Fermi High School basketball Falcons have earned a place in the Class LL Tournament after winning 11 of their games this season. Coach Tom Snipe probably wasn't looking that far ahead at the beginning of the season, especially after a rather slow start. At the beginning it looked like another average year from the Falcons by Snipe did wonders with the team and really brought them along.

Teams that were beating the Falcons early in the season were usually surprised when they faced the team the second time. The Falcons improved so much over the season that they looked like a completely different team.

Enfield High provided a good case in point. Fermi beat them by just two points in their first encounter but the Falcons defeated them by 14 points last weekend.

This is the first Fermi basketball team to make the after season play and it looks like they will be back at it next year.

The Enfield High School Raiders have been there before, as late as last year as a matter of fact and they will no doubt be back in the years to come.

So congratulations Fermi on a job well done.

STONEAGE LEAGUE WINDING DOWN

If you still want to see some good basketball I suggest you drop in at the Enfield High School gymnasium this Saturday afternoon starting at 12:15. There is no admission charge and you will get to see the best players in the Stoneage Basketball League take to the court.

There is a total of just three weeks to go. This Saturday you can see all the teams play in the last regularly scheduled games. Two weeks from Saturday you may watch the Semi-Finals with the first place team taking on the fourth place team and the second place team taking on the third place team.

The league finals will be held on March 13 with the winners of the semi-finals going against each in a winner-take-all match. It is worth seeing if you enjoy basketball at all.

Local Photographer Wins Two Awards

Rick Bragan of Enfield recently attended the 15th annual Connecticut Professional Photographer's Association (CPPA) Winter Seminar at the Castilian Room in Waterbury. The one day seminar featured programs by Pat and Mike Q. from Edison, N.J., who shared their knowledge of operating a successful studio; Adolph Konieczny from Amsterdam, N.Y., former senior photographer for General Electric Research and Development Center whose specialty is industrial - commercial photography and Reuben Schaller from Hartford, past president of CPPA, whose topic was the art of photographing people between the ages of 3 months and 85 years.

The 12 hour seminar culminated with the evening banquet at which awards were presented to the photographers whose work was accepted to hang on display after being scored by the panel of judges.

In the print competition, Bragan received awards for his photographs entitled "Rockport Harbor at Dawn" and "White Winter".

These award winning photographs are now on display at Bragan Photography, 12 Dale Rd., Enfield.

A Conversation Piece

What exactly is a mailbox? There are no federal regulations as to what the exterior of an individual's mailbox must conform and there are no town ordinances regarding a definition of a mailbox. Joe Trudiolo, owner of Joe's Automatic Transmission on Fletcher Rd., Enfield, has produced a conversation piece that disturbs his neighbors. The mailbox is made from a Chevy "Powerglide" automatic transmission and a small motorcycle gas tank. The mailbox's interior conforms to specified dimensions. Enfield zoning officials are presently investigating this matter. (Photo by Robert T. McMullen.)

Pageant Patrons To Be Accorded Honors

Special honors will be accorded to civic and professional leaders of the Enfield area who are patrons of the Miss Enfield Pageant. Bob Moores, general pageant chairman for the sponsoring Enfield Jaycees, said the roster of patrons for the pending pageant is now being assembled and he invited interested persons to join in aiding to insure the continued success of the event.

Patrons are special financial contributors who aid in providing the funds to finance the scholarship which is awarded annually to each new Miss Enfield. Serving as a pageant patron also entitles each person to a special seat reserved at the pageant to be held March 20 at St. Joseph's School. The list of patrons will be published in the Miss Enfield Pageant souvenir program.

A donation as low as $15 will qualify interested persons as sponsors. Moores, in calling for representatives of the civic, professional and business community to serve as pageant sponsors, said that through such a patron role, each member of the special group will not only be aiding a community endeavor, but also will be helping the young lady who gains the Miss Enfield title to further her education.

DEP Studies Landfill Site

The state Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) has started its environmental study of the proposed Kement site in Suffield for a new landfill site to replace the Phelps site which the state will close June 1.

The study will include digging approximately 50 test holes, or about one per acre at the Mountain Road site, First Selectman Chester A. Kuras said. "When they drill the holes they'll be able to tell how high the water table is, and whether it flows up, down or sideways. They'll also be able to determine the depth of bedrock there," Kuras said.

The DEP study will also include aerial, topographical and contour maps of the area.

The site study will include a site operation plan which will be enforced by the DEP if the site is approved, Kuras said. "If the DEP approves the site, the study will have determined a specific way the site will have to be operated," Kuras said. "One of the functions of the study is to come up with a method of proper operation."

"Now through April, the site will experience observation by this study that will probably show just how bad water conditions are going to be there," Kuras said. "You can't often determine that, if the study is done in the drier summer months," he added.

Sweetheart Ball Planners

Missing from picture are Leonard Beiler, Sue Enderle and Jim Gainey. For tickets call 749-4738 or 749-2446.

Chemical Bans Considered

The possible contamination of state waters by industrial chemicals is causing legislators to take notice.

At the Capitol last week, the Environment Committee voted to raise for public hearing a bill which would ban the use of PCB's in Connecticut manufacturing by 1980.

"This is a new subject to me," said Rep. Thom Serrani, O-Stamford, who proposed the bill. "I want to get information on it out in the open."

PCB's (polychlorinated biphenyls) are heat-resistant compounds which accumulated evidence links with cancer, stillbirths, deformities, and neurological disorders.

The Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) is testing sediment in Connecticut rivers and in the Long Island Sound where PCB's settle to find out whether levels exceed the federal standard.

Some recent reports have shown increased concentrations in fish which feed on organisms in the sediment.

Three known manufacturing firms in or near Connecticut now use PCB's. The Universal Manufacturing Company in Bridgeport reported finding the chemical in their discharges, but DEP found no indication in subsequent testing.

The DEP is concerned about potential pollution from this site, and from the Massachusetts firms which discharge into the Housatonic River.

"In Connecticut we have one manufacturer, but Massachusetts has two. Before we ask them to stop, we have to do it in our own state," said Serrani.

Van Law's To Move

James T. Van Law, Sr., owner and president of Van Law's women's specialty shop in Suffield Village, has announced plans to move the main store to the Greater Springfield area early next fall. The shop has been here five years, ever since the Suffield Village shopping complex opened.

Reasons given by Van Law for the move are the need for larger quarters and the desire to locate nearer the source of most of his customers.

A branch store was opened by Van Law in Simsbury a year ago. No mention was made of any change of plans for this store.

Van Law said business will continue as usual at the Suffield main store until early next fall. He did not give the new store's exact location.

A resident of Suffield, Van Law is son-in-law of H. Meade Alcorn, former

Party Caucus Bill Defeated

A bill banning self-perpetuating town committees was resoundingly defeated by the General Assembly's Elections Committee last week.

The bill would have required political parties to hold an open caucus or primary to choose new town committee members.

"They're used to what they're doing now and for the most part it's working fine," said committee member Rep. Eloise Green (R-Southbury) of the local party organizations.

Mrs. Green joined the majority in defeating the bill, 8-1.

One of the measure's chief supporters, Rep. William Collins (D-Norwalk), said after the vote that he will try to force the measure onto the floor of the House through petition.

"The selection of town committee members is too important to leave to the politicians," Collins commented.

The committee also voted down a bill to bring presidential preference primaries under state jurisdiction. Senate elections chairman Joseph Schwartz (D-Easton) was the only committee member supporting either bill.

Connecticut Democrats are required by their national party to hold a presidential preference primary this spring. Schwartz claimed that without state supervision at the polls, voters' rights would be at the mercy of anyone who wanted to disrupt the balloting.

Other legislators, however, said the measure would lead to claims that the Democrats were simply looking for a way to get the state or towns to pay the primary bill.

Craft Fair

Second Baptist Church of Suffield will sponsor its sixth annual Suffield Craft Fair to be held Mar. 13 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the church. Erwin Grimmeisen is chairman and Mrs. William Butler is vice chairman.

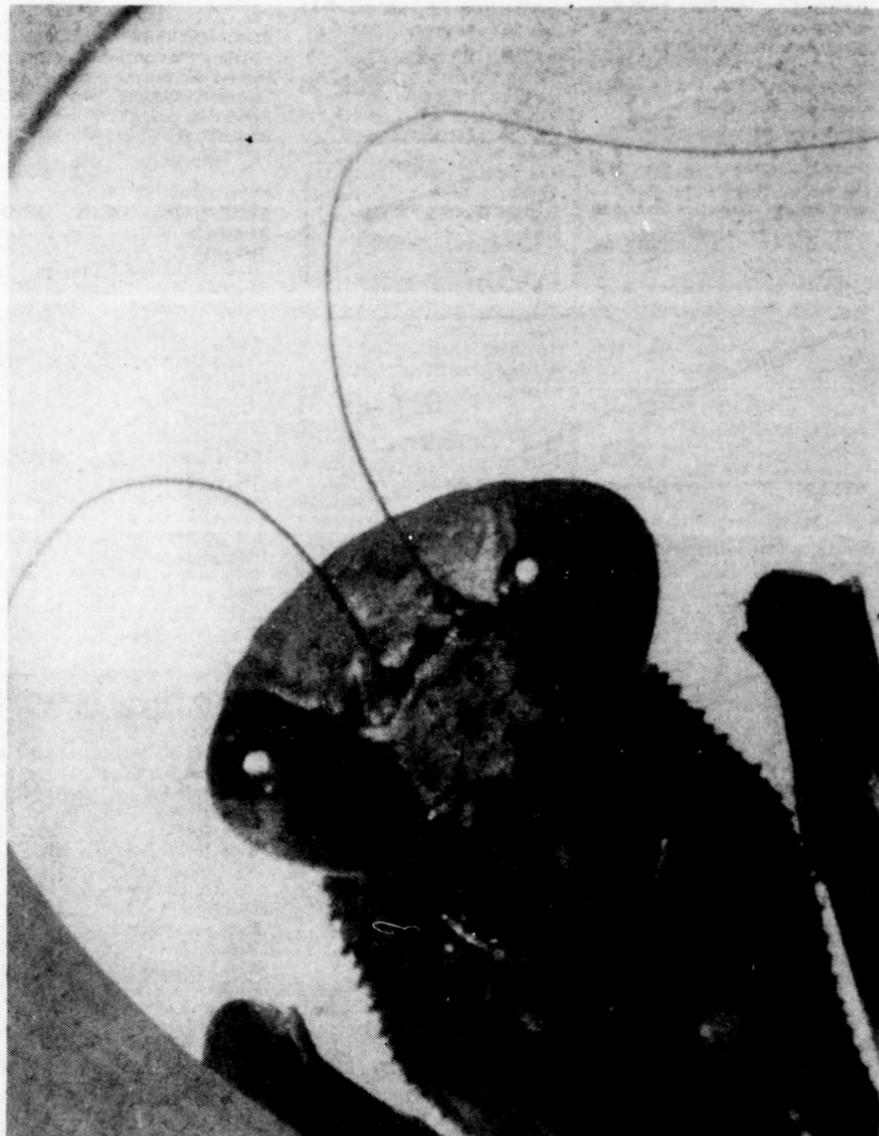

Many of the craftsmen will be new to the Fair this year, Mrs. Butler said. Among them will be Joan Sprague, Wilbraham, Mass., a teacher of tole and decorative painting in oils, dimensional painting on glass and value painting; James C. Harriman, South Glastonbury, showing handmade clocks; The Wood Works, South Woodstock, Conn., with beautiful crafted motion sculptures and conservation pieces for adults, with a few items for children; Dotty Ricks of Sudbury, Mass., who will show her technique of making channel sterling jewelry as done by the Zuni Indians, her interpretation being a combination of stone and silver; and Marilyn Sarr, Madison, Conn. with unique and lovely candles.

For the first time, this year, part of the proceeds from the Fair will be used for needed capitol improvements to the church building. The rest will go to help maintain the Suffield Mini-Bus.

In past years, the proceeds have gone for community projects, including a sizable amount for the mini-bus last year.

Indirectly the improvements to the church building will help the community also, because the building is used by youth groups such as Girl and Boy Scouts, and the YMCA youth educational classes as well as for the Craft Fair itself.
