—Don't fail to attend the grand closing out sale of Wall Paper this week, at J. T. Frowitt's, 47 Main street.

There were rumors around "the bridge" Saturday evening that a riot had taken place at Roton during the day, and that several persons had been seriously hurt. When sifted, the riot dwindled to a fight between two men. A young thoroughbred started to attend the picnic and, being well loaded with Norwalk beer, by the time he reached Roton, he was "spilled" for a fight. His antics at that place were so disorderly that Mr. Ed. Larrigan, a one-armed athlete of the only, stepped up to him and in a gentlemanly way asked him to be quiet. The only reply made by the brought was to catch Mr. Larrigan by the throat and threaten to "break his skull." Mr. L. did not like such treatment and, fearing further violence, delivered a stinging blow on the head of the young man who dropped like a log and only regained consciousness after having been dipped two or three times in the salt water. It is unnecessary to state that the young man from the borough wanted no more fighting. Mr. Larrigan is a quiet and gentlemanly person and no blame can be attached to him as he only protected himself from a coward who will hereafter give one-armed men a wide berth.

Correspondence.

In order to show what is thought by many people of Johnson's Cyclopaedia, for which Mr. Ellis, late of the GAZETTE, is canvassing this vicinity, we give the annexed letter from one of our best known local writers; one who is himself permanently engaged in writing for a popular political cyclopaedia.

Norwalk, Ct., June 21, 1883. My DEAR Mr. Ellis:—I have your note asking my opinion of Johnson's Cyclopaedia, and I am glad to say that I had never used the work until you were good enough to call my attention to it. I had heard of it frequently, but always from agents of rival works, who spoke of it with studied contempt, so I had never used it or referring to it. My first impression in its favor came from an examination of it, and the impression has only strengthened by constant use of it. My testimony would be emphatic that, for the general reader or for general among Americans, Johnson's Cyclopaedia is by long odds the best in existence.

One of its strongest points, to my notion, is the fact that all the leading articles are signed by the writers. Every one is acquainted with the details of which work of this kind knows that care and accuracy can only be secured by having persons sign their articles. No writer will, if he can help it, allow loose statements to go out over his signature, while he will not be so careful if the articles are not to be signed. When I find anything in Johnson's Cyclopaedia, I take it as the authority of the editor, and I am not so sure if the articles are not to be signed. When I find anything in Johnson's Cyclopaedia, I take it as the authority of the editor, and I am not so sure if the articles are not to be signed.

Under this system it is essential that the writers should be men of mark. An unsigned cyclopaedia may annoy printers at discretion, but Johnson's must have such a list of distinguished writers as its basis, or it is a failure. In other words, Johnson's is obliged to be above par.

My regular use for the cyclopaedia is rather of a special nature, and yet I have never found it wanting. It has been just as satisfactory in the varied demands for information from school and family life. The ability to hand a questioner an article on the subject, by a writer of recognized authority, has saved me a great deal of time which to me is money. I calculate that it has been money in my pocket to have Johnson's Cyclopaedia in my library. It is a reservoir, full of information and explanation, which is always ready for use and you do not even have to turn a crank to get it.

Very Truly Yours, ALEX. JOHNSON.

Why the Play was Interrupted.

Some of the nice children on Commonwealth Avenue recently proposed to surprise their parents with a dramatic performance with the distinct understanding that no adult was to witness a rehearsal or to ask about the nature of the play, written by a young ten years, who was to assume the role of heroine, assisted by a number of her friends.

The performance of the play was interrupted by the presence of the parents of the children, who were not invited to witness the play.
