OLD FRIENDS.

The old, old friends;
Some changed, some buried, some gone out of sight;
Some enemies, and, in this world's fierce fight,
No time to make amends.

The old, old friends—
Where are they? Three are lying in one grave
And one from the far-off world on the daily wave
No loving message sends.

The old, dear friends!
One passes daily, and one wears a mask;
Another, long-estranged, cares not to ask
Where causeless anger ends.

The dear old friends!
So many and so fond in days of youth!
Alas! That faith can be divorced from truth,
When love in severance ends.

The old, old friends!
They hover round me still in evening shades;
Surely they will come again when sunlight fades
And life on God depends.

Whatsoever A Man Soweth.

"Yes, Mary, we're most there; to your home and my home. If we always set as much by each other as we do now, it'll be the happiest spot in the country."

"Oh, Tom, it frightens me to think what we have done! What if I am not as you expected? What if you shouldn't love me after a while? All my life before I saw you, I got along with only Uncle Joshua to care for me; but now I know a difference, I could not live to go back to the old way. Tom, you never will repent, will you, and you'll be patient with me if I disappoint you?"

In answer the young farmer drew his bride of a few hours to him.

"May God deal with me as I do with you," he responded, the deepest feelings of his nature being touched.

All her life, her loving heart had found none but a crabbed old uncle on whom to lavish itself. When honest Tom Gray, a manly young farmer from a neighboring town, fell in love with her sweet face and sweeter disposition, all her pent-up affection centered around him. There was something pitiable in the intensity of her regard, for there was but little hope in this work-a-day world but its very strength would bring her pain.

"Cheer up, little woman! There, now, see how Prince speeds along through those pines; he knows what's waiting for him at the end of the journey."

They emerged from the woodland road to an open space, and drew up before a substantial brick house. Shading it were huge maples and two gigantic fir trees. Across the road the long, rambling barns clustered, weather-beaten, unpainted, but their capacious sides promising to hold good store for the winter. The level space on which the buildings were situated terminated in a bluff, and below lay the broad acres of arable land. In the distance, a silver band binding the surrounding emerald of the meadow, wound a river. Beyond, the hills shut in the little valley. Nestled at the foot of one, blue in the distance, the white houses of a small village gleamed.

In less time than it has taken to describe this scene, Tom had flung open the house door and ushered his wife into a large, square room, whose deep windows let in floods of sunshine on the bright carpet and new furniture the young man had purchased for his bride.

"This is where father brought mother thirty years ago; they didn't think how soon they would go, and who would be here after them to give the old house a mistress. They were an uncommon loving pair, though," he said.

"Oh, Tom, I hope I may be all to you that your mother was to your father," she replied, the bright color flooding her cheeks.

Then they wandered over the roomy old house, at last pausing in the kitchen.

"We'll have our wedding supper now," she said, gayly, "if you'll just fetch the basket from the carriage."

So he obediently brought it in, then sat down in the old rocking-chair by the open window, watching her quick, deft movements as she spread the table with a snowy linen cloth—she had hemmed all sorts of rosy fancies into it—then the delicate old china which had been his mother's. Cold fowl, delicious white bread, a pat of golden butter marked with the letter G, pies, cakes, all made their exit from the basket. He knew they had all been prepared by her careful hands. Then she darted from the door and returned with a great bunch of red roses, which her quick eye had spied, to deck the feast.

How pretty she looked, he thought, in her neatly fitting dress, her dark eyes bright with happiness, the lovely color coming and going in her cheeks. Surely he was very much to be envied; she was his own always.

And she thought, "What a good gift is life and love! There can't be the unhappiness in the world people are always talking of!"

Then they laughed and chatted, and for once were perfectly content.

* * * * * * *

Five years had slipped by; a little period, yet in it how many have passed to that other country, how many launched on a life that may hold so much or so little in store! In it our fondest aspirations are realized, or our cherished idols shattered at our feet.

Five years had brought to Mary's home an infirm old uncle of her husband's, a little waif of eight, whose mother's dying request to care for her child. Mary could not refuse, and two babies of her own, for the elder was little more than a baby. Time had not touched her very lightly; there were sad lines about the mouth, pitiful to see, and now and then a sore spirit looked from the brown eyes. Evidently life had not been quite so fair as it had promised on that wedding day half a decade before.

And yet they had prospered; Thomas was one of the "substantial men of the town," so the people said.

"Savin' an' sharp, savin' an' sharp, Tom'll be a rich man afore many years," old Uncle Warren was wont to chuckle from his corner by the great fire-place. Then he would add with a long-drawn sigh, "Ef his wife don't rooin him by her extravagance, puttin' cream inter the biskits, an' boilin' eggs when eggs an' butter is high. My wife never put on sugar for the hired men, nuther. My wife and me was managers. Now, if Tom'd only married Belindy Thompson, the square's darter, she'd a brought in her husband a good sum, an' she's savin', too."

Such conversation Mary was forced to hear as often as Uncle Warren could find an unfortunate listener. Like many people in this world, he was happy when there was something to worry about, be it real or imaginary. He never minded that the kitchen door was ajar, or windows open, so that Mary could not choose but hear. "A good thing for her to know my opinion," and when occasion required he never hesitated to deliver it first hand.

"It's great expense to Thomas, you're bein' so sot on keepin' that child," referring to Nannie. "Ef you'd only taken his advice an' sent her to the o the country farm, an' taken an older girl that could earn her salt," he groaned. "I never see sech an appetite as she has! Why, yesterday it took her jest twenty minutes by the clock to eat her dinner. Thomas is never more'n ten; he knows the valoo of time."

Such harangues would have had little effect on Mary, but her husband's conversation was an echo of these. Slowly but surely money-getting and money-earning was becoming his aim in life. Mary saw with alarm the sinking of his spirit to this sordid basis, and all her gentle nature rose to combat it, but so far in vain. One or two successful ventures had raised this evil demon, and now its hold was tightening, till the manly fellow who had won her bade fair to be a miser. So completely had the desire for gain taken possession of him that he saw nothing of the danger to his better nature.

The hands of the clock moved steadily on, and with dinner to prepare, the beds to make, the milk to skim, beside the wailing infant to still, and the yet greater task of keeping restless little Madge out of mischief, Mary was tired enough by noon for bed.

Promptly at the stroke of twelve, Farmer Tom, with three hungry men, appeared. The cloth was not even laid for dinner.

"What, late again, Mary?" said her husband, with a slight frown. "You know time is money to us."

With the heavy child in her arms, she was endeavoring to prepare the meal. Tom seated himself at the door.

"Where is Nannie, that she can't help a little? At school? Oh, yes, I forgot; it began to-day."

"Here, Tom, you must take the baby if you want dinner to-day; and another thing, there's no use in my trying to do any longer without a girl to help me."

"A girl, Mary? Why I don't know where you could possibly get one now. Mother never had help that I can remember of. It's pretty expensive living; then there's the mowing machine to pay for, and mother horse for haying. Can't you keep Nannie at home to look after the children? She might as well earn her keep."

Mary said nothing, shutting her lips tightly together as if to keep back any words, and presently called him to dinner.

"Can it be that Tom cares so little for me? I can toil and delve to bring him in more money," she thought, bitterly. "Oh, my darlings, I could not bear it if it were not for your sakes!" she cried, straining her little ones to her heart, the hot, rebellious tears falling on their heads.

Farmer Tom was out in the fields working like a tiger himself to keep up the lagging spirits of his men.

"I never see sech a man ter work an' make everybody else work too," grumbled one man to his companion, pausing to wipe his reeking brow. "An' that pooty wife of his'n slavin' herself to death because he's too darned stingy to git her any help. I declare for it, my Nancy don't work half so hard as she does."

The man went on with his hoeing, but Tom, whom he supposed out of earshot, had not been so far ahead but he had caught the drift of the conversation.

"Can it be that Mary is working too hard?" he thought, recalling her face as it had looked that noon.

Then the face of the girl he had wedded five years before—why, it was five years that day—came before him, radiant with youth and happiness. The contrast did not please him.

"But all women grow old faster than men," he said to himself, and then endeavored to dismiss the thought.

Somehow it would not stay banished, work as hard as he might. That night when he reached home, Uncle Warren, who had quarrelled with all his sons, had a tale of grievance to relate.

"You know how I axed my son, Joseph, more'n a month ago for my old eight-day clock. To-day he come along, an' when I told him I'd have it if it took a sheriff to git it, he sez with a long-drawn sigh, 'Father, I'd rather go home an' find my best cow dead than to give up that clock.' Well, pooty soon after he'd gone one of his neighbors come along an' sez he, 'Well, grandpa, you've lost your clock. Joe boxed it up an' took it off somers, nobody knows where.' Jest to think of havin' sech a mean man for a son, arter all I've done for him!"

The poor old man whimpered like a child, forgetful of the fact that from their early youth he had instilled it into his children's minds that "gettin' an' savin'" was the chief aim of man. They were living his advice now, their chief solicitude concerning him being that he should leave them his money. The old man readily perceived this, and he had quarrelled persistently with each before taking refuge with his nephew, vowing never to leave them a cent of his property.

To-night Uncle Warren's complainings jarred on Tom's mood. The poor, loveless, unlovable old age looked more forlorn than usual.

"What was the use of that life-time of saving?" he thought. "Only unhappiness."

He glanced at his wife; her cheeks were pale, and her eyes were red as with weeping. His heart smote him.

"Come here, Madge," he said to his little girl who was hanging to her mother's skirts.

She held in her hand a colored card which Nannie had brought home from Sabbath-school. Mechanically he read the words: "Whatsoever a man soweth that shall he reap." They stung him. What had he been doing? His conscience, already aroused, would not be put to sleep again. What was the good of hoarding if Mary and the children were not happy now?"

Uncle Warren's voice broke in on his revery—

"That note of Avery's comes due to-morrow, don't it? Where'll you put the five hundred to git a good interest?"

He hardly heeded the old man's words. "Whatsoever a man soweth" kept ringing in his ears. Perhaps his reaping in his old age would be like that of his Uncle Warren's, avarice fossilized. These thoughts continued to haunt him.

The next morning Mary was ill—unable to rise from her bed. Tom's self-accusations knew no bounds, for he loved his wife tenderly, in spite of the crust of worldliness gathering over his better feelings.

"Mary, I've been a brute," he said, "letting you overwork while I have hoarded up the money. Little woman, if you'll forgive me we'll start over, and it shan't be so any more. I have my help, you shall have yours, or we'll sell the farm."

"O Tom!" she cried, laying her flushed cheek on his hand. "It isn't the work so much, but I thought I was losing my kind, tender husband. This year has been so miserable, seeing you growing farther and farther away from me. I thought you had stopped loving me, and my heart was breaking. Oh, Tom, don't let me think so any more!"

And Tom took the poor, tired head on his broad breast, and kissed the white face more tenderly than he had in her girlish days. He knew his own weakness now as he had thought he had known his strength then. And Mary was a happier woman than she had been for many a day.

After that her burdens were lightened, and she was her old happy self again, secure in her husband's love.

But were the old habits of over-economy so easily snapped? He was many times about to yield, but old Uncle Warren served as a constant reminder of his new resolves.

The old man was hugely puzzled to find his homilies of "savin' an' sharp," had so little effect.

"Thomas'll die poor!" he groaned. "Keepin' a hired girl an' buyin' a pianer for his wife."

But Thomas never regretted sowing the seed of love instead of that of avarice.

THE ORIGIN OF "O. K."

In the language of the Choctaw Indians, one of the most frequently occurring expressions is the emphatic oke, with which an affirmation or denial is concluded. This oke (pronounced with strong accent on the last syllable) is one of the substitutes for the copulative verb to be which is wanting in Choctaw. Oke, as pronounced in Choctaw, has exactly the same sound as the alphabetic pronunciation of the letters O. K. in English.

The meaning of the expression, as nearly as it can be conveyed in English, is: "That is true; that is all so." A few examples, out of many that might be cited, will illustrate this. "The Choctaw Indian is a good fellow" is expressed thus: "Hattak api huma Chahta achukmah oke," in which hattak api means "Indian" (literally, man-body-red), achukmah means "good," and oke is the copulative expression, "it is so." In Rev. Cyrus Byington's Choctaw New Testament the first sentence of Matt. v. 13: "Ye are the salt of the earth," is: "yakni in huppi huchisha hoke," literally: "the earth its salt ye; that is so."

To Gen. Andrew Jackson is attributed the introduction of the Choctaw word into our Anglo-American speech. Before the war of 1812, in voyages up and down the Mississippi and, in leading expeditions overland from Nashville, Tenn., to Natchez, Miss., through the Choctaw Nation, he was brought into frequent communication with the Choctaws.

Gen. Jackson, as everybody knows, was prone to the use of downright and energetic methods of assertion. Hearing this emphatic oke so frequently uttered by the Choctaw people, he learned the meaning conveyed by it to the Choctaw mind and appropriated it, out of hand, to his own purposes. From him it passed over to the multitude. This account of the origin of O. K. has been current in the South for for many years. If not true, it is, to say the least, ben trovato.

No one who has ever read an autograph letter of Gen. Jackson's will easily credit the story that he was in the habit, when he was President of the United States, of indorsing, in kallem blute, applications for office with the letters O. K., under the belief that these were the proper initials for "all correct." Jackson was no scholar, but he was not so grossly ignorant of English orthography as to fall into a blunder of that sort. He may have indorsed documents with the letters O. K. as a jocular symbol of his favorite Choctaw expression. The story that these letters were seriously intended by him as an abbreviation of "oll korrect" was probably, as Mr. George Bancroft suggests, an a posteriori invention of the enemy—to wit, the Whigs—during the hot political contests in the days of the roaring '40's.

That the abbreviation O. K. was coined by Jackson himself, and used by him long years before it passed into current slang, finds curious confirmation in an extract from the old court records of Sumner county, Tennessee, quoted by Parton in his Life of Jackson, vol. 1, p. 136.

"October 6, 1790. Andrew Jackson, Esq., proved a bill of sale from Hugh McGary to Gasper Mansker, a negro man, which was O. K." ["A common Western mistake," adds Mr. Parton, "for O. R., which means Ordered Recorded. Hence, perhaps, the saying O. K."]

Is it not more likely that the O. K. of this entry was suggested by Jackson himself, as a brief way of saying, after the Choctaw fashion, that the claim had been legally made out?

HE HAD BEEN THERE.

It was the new reporter who had come in covered with perspiration and dust as the last form went down to the press.

"Did it take you all day to do that Park water works detail?" snarled the city editor.

"S-s-sh! Speak low," whispered the new "special" in the U. E.'s ear. "Got on to an A 1 suicide out on the park—defalcation, probably."

"Great Cæsar! And we've gone to press!" gasped the editor. "The afternoon papers will get a beat on us to-morrow."

"Not much!" chuckled the reporter. "I knew I couldn't get here in time for the last edition, so I just quored the find."

"What do you mean?"

"Why, I dragged the body into the bushes and covered it up with grass and things. A bloodhound couldn't find it. To-morrow we develop the claim and give 'em a two column sensation."

With tears in his eyes the city editor arose and fell upon his subordinate's neck.

"You are an honor to the profession," he sobbed. "I'll see that your salary is increased two dollars a month. I will, by Jingo!"

A green printer, in setting some copy, ran across the sentence, "——— didn't say a word for an hour," the first word having been cut off it in clipping it from the paper where it first appeared. He took it to the foreman to supply the word.

"What shall I put in there?" he asked, when the foreman read it.

"Put in 'he,' of course; you don't suppose she would fit in such a sentence as that, do you?"

It is related that when Gen. Grant was in Houston, several years ago, the people gave him a rousing reception. There was a grand banquet, for which $1,500 worth of the choicest wines were provided. When the waiter came to serve the wine the head waiter went first to Gen. Grant. Without a word the general quietly turned down all the glasses at his plate. This quiet move was a great surprise to the Texans, but they were equal to the occasion. Without a single word being spoken every man along the line of the long tables turned his glasses down, and there was not a drop of wine taken that night.

ARSENIC EATING.

It must not, however, be supposed that any one takes to hedri, or arsenic eating, quite openly. On the contrary, it is generally begun in secret and at the increase of the moon, and in some villages with superstitious observances. A very small dose is at first taken once a week—bread and butter is the favorite medium—then twice a week, and so on, until when the individual arrives at a dose daily, the dose itself is increased till as much be taken as in ordinary circumstances would kill two or three individuals. But it must not be understood that those people can consume the drug altogether with impunity. When they first begin with their very small doses, they are seized with nausea and burning pains in the mouth, throat and stomach, and are probably very much more uncomfortable than a boy who has taken his first cigar.

But one peculiarity of arsenic eating is this, that when a man has once begun to indulge in it he must continue to indulge; for if he ceases the arsenic in his system poisons him; or, as it is popularly expressed, the last dose kills him. Indeed, the arsenic-eater must not only continue his indulgence—he must also increase the quantity of the drug, so that it is extremely difficult to stop the habit; for, as sudden cessation causes death, the gradual cessation produces such a terrible heart-gnawing that no genuine arsenic-eater ever ceased to eat arsenic while life lasted. It is curious that while, on the one hand, the human organism is so remarkably sensitive to arsenic, a man may, on the other hand, indulge in these poisonous doses for years. This is probably owing to the fact that arsenic acts on the skin and thus is being constantly carried out of the system, and also because it is readily eliminated by the kidneys. Now, this prevents any accumulation going on in the tissues, and thus what might seem mythical is at least brought within the range of possibility. It has been calculated that this process of elimination has to be carried on for fourteen days before a given dose is entirely removed. But yet the fact remains that these Austrian peasants can swallow arsenic to an extent and with an impunity unprecedented in the annals of toxicology.

For the solution of the problem we may offer the following considerations: First of all, the human organism may become accustomed to most if not all poisons, if they are administered at first in exceedingly small doses, and in this way a poison, as is well known, may become a "mithridate" to itself. Secondly, though the human organism is extremely sensitive to arsenic, yet some constitutions may be less so than others; thus, the arsenic-eaters of Styria are all of them robust mountaineers, whose forefathers have eaten arsenic from generation to generation, so that, as may be supposed, each generation has become more and more arsenic proof than the one before it. Thirdly, like most mountaineers, the Styrians consume large quantities of milk and butter, as well as other food rich in fats, when the oily matters to a certain extent unite with the arsenic, forming an arsenical soap, which does not so readily enter into the blood, so that the total amount of arsenic actually assimilated is proportionately small. From this we see that if the Styrian partakes of an unusual amount of this deadly drug he is at the same time not only less susceptible to its influence by his hereditary descent and his habits, but his food supplies him with some sort of an antidote.

PLUNDERING IN PRISON.

A daring robbery has been perpetrated at Mazas prison. A theft in the very den of the law, and certainly quite as audacious a one as the crime of the woman who, about a year ago, was caught stealing gas globes from the Seventeenth Precinct Station-house storeroom in New York.

It is the practice of the Prefect of Police to issue passes to would-be visitors to the prison every Monday. A gentleman appeared at the jail on the day in question and took out his pocketbook to find his pass. It was quite en règle, and he passed on.

Directly behind him two women appeared. They, too, were in proper form and were admitted.

Shortly after the gentleman came back. He had left his pocket-book on the desk, he said, and as it contained 600 francs, he was not unnaturally anxious to recover it. This, however, was easier said than done. The closest search failed to reveal it. An order was then given to search every one who passed out. The consequence was that quite a crowd collected at the entrance. But the wallet was not found, and the gentleman went away disappointed.

Next morning thirteen people complained to the police that they had had their pockets picked while passing out of the prison, after having been searched. The gentleman of the wallet was really an ingenious member of the swell mob. The two women were his accomplices. They had turned up to be searched and passed out as soon as he made his complaint. Then they had stood outside and relieved the passers out of their valuables as they passed by, absorbed in a discussion of the mysterious robbery.

BRITISH BABY AND HIS PAINTER.

The prevalent pictorial motive of our great painters for the last two or three years has been babies, and our old friend the British matron must have at least enjoyed this peculiarity to the full in the Academy. There are, it is true, about five nude figures in the present exhibition, but it would not be much of an exaggeration to say that there are nearly 500 babies. Every variety of infantile healthiness or sickliness is displayed here. A new "Lilliputian Warehouse" might be set up with shoes, socks, capes, frocks, and bonnets of these Academic "innocents." There is, I notice, one special kind of bonnet, like a miniature coal scuttle, lined with plaited satin, which is a great favorite with Academicians, and which they have attained great skill in rendering. Shoes, also, particularly those with a strap and one button, are, like Carlo's "carriages, very dear to" their "fancy," and short white socks are also successfully treated in several instances. It is remarkable that in this, as of course in all the less important branches of their art, the Academicians and Associates surpass the outside artists. There are not only a larger number of Academic babies, but they are bigger, chubbier, and better dressed than the others. The average toilet of one of these favored sucklings must cost about £20, and as it is invariably of spotless freshness, must be a somewhat costly element in the household expenses. The great apostle of this new "cry of the children" is an Associate called Morris, who had the good fortune to discover, in a pictorial sense, the universal attractiveness of the "millinery baby."

Commonplace people are content to walk for life in the rut made by their predecessors, long after it has become so deep that they cannot see to the right or left. This keeps them in ignorance and darkness, but it saves them the trouble of thinking or acting for themselves.

CURING A COLD IN THE HEAD.

The commonest type of cold is that called "cold in the head," to distinguish it from "cold on the chest." This "cold in the head" has certain well-marked symptoms, a feeling of general malaise is experienced, often accompanied by a slight feverish sickness. Then comes a sensation of fulness in the head, there is sneezing, a profuse flow of tears, an irritating and copious discharge from the nose. This means that the mucous membrane of the nose is inflamed, and if this spreads down the back of the throat the sufferer becomes hoarse. The best way to treat this troublesome complaint is to take a hot "drink." An orange sliced and put into a large cup with a little sugar sprinkled over it, and boiling water poured upon it and then drunk as hot as possible, is both pleasant and beneficial. The feet should be put into hot water, with or without a little mustard. This foot bath should be taken at the bedside; the patient should be well wrapped up, and a blanket placed across his knees should be drawn outside the bath, so as to confine the steam. After keeping the feet in the water for from five to ten minutes the patient should lose no time in getting into bed, where he will probably derive great benefit from the general feeling of warmth, and from the flow of perspiration which has been induced. If possible, at this stage, the patient should remain in bed for two days, with a fire in his room, which should be well made up at night, so as to keep alight till morning. But keeping in bed will do little good if the patient persists in holding a newspaper or a book to read, for thereby he is more dangerously exposed to cold than if he were up, dressed and going about as usual. The main point is to keep thoroughly wrapped up and constantly warm. Even an uncomfortable degree of heat may be very beneficial.

A small piece of camphor chewed and sucked is quite good. So is the inhalation of sulphuric acid gas—a remedy which was found to be in constant use by the weavers of Kircaldy, who had it among the materials of their work. Buy two ounces of sulphurous acid (dilute) from a chemist, and then take out the cork and inhale—through the nostrils only, of course—the pungent gas which is given off. Some use Ferrie's snuff, and find benefit therefrom; but it must be used cautiously, as it contains morphia. Ten or twelve grains of Dover's powder taken in gruel at bedtime is good for an adult, but should not be administered to children as it contains opium, which should never be given to them without a doctor's prescription. To prevent an unpleasant excoriation of the nose and upper lip during the course of a cold in the head, they should be often washed thoroughly with soap and lukewarm water, and a little vaseline should be applied. If the throat feels sore a chlorate of potash lozenge should be sucked occasionly.

PRIORITY OF INVENTION.

The following are points in decisions on priority of invention:

The party who first reduces an invention to actual use is entitled to the patent for it, although the other party may have first conceived it, if he did not exercise reasonable dilligence in reducing it to practice.

If the party who first conceived a machine followed up the idea diligently, and was the first to reduce it to actual practice, he is entitled to a patent for it, although his competitors had complete working drawings of it previously prepared, and had obtained a patent.

Whoever first reduces an invention to practice and makes an application of it to use, will usually be the prior inventor.

In order to defeat a patent the courts require it to be shown that another not only conceived the invention in dispute before the patentee, but was also the first to perfect and adopt the same to practical use, or was using reasonable diligence for that purpose.

The parties who first embodied an invention in a machine which they kept in operation afterward for actual use, besides manufacturing and selling other machines, are prima facie entitled to that patent.

He is the inventor, entitled to the protection of the patent law, who is first to complete the invention and publish it to the world, and not he who confines the knowledge of it to his client.

Where an invention consists of a combination of elements, the date when all the elements are combined is the date of the invention.

When one is first to conceive an invention, he throws aside all evidences of the conception, makes no effort to complete or introduce it to the public, and delays making an application for a patent for nearly four years after another has brought it into extensive use, he has standing as an inventor.

CIRCASSIAN STORY OF A KISS.

A man was walking along one road, and a woman along another. The roads finally united into one, and reaching the point of junction at the same time, they walked on together. The man was carrying a large iron kettle on his back; in one hand he held the legs of a live chicken; in the other a cane; and he was leading a goat. They neared a dark ravine. Said the woman: "I am afraid to go through that ravine with you; it is a lonely place, and you might overpower me and kiss me by force." Said the man: "How can I possibly overpower you and kiss you by force, when I have this great iron kettle on my back, a cane in one hand, a live chicken in the other, and am leading this goat? I might as well be tied hand and foot." "Yes," replied the woman. "But if you should stick your cane in the ground and tie your goat to it, and turn the kettle bottom-side up and put the chicken under it, then you might wickedly kiss me in spite of my resistance." "Success to thy ingenuity, O woman!" said the rejoicing man to himself. "I should never have thought of this or similar expedients." And when they came to the ravine, he stuck his cane into the ground and tied the goat to it, gave the chicken to the woman, saying: "Hold it while I cut some grass for the goat;" and then—so runs the legend—lowering the kettle from his shoulders, he put the fowl under it, and wickedly kissed the woman, as she was afraid he would.—Chambers's Journal.

THE PRINTER'S DEVIL.

It is surely a matter of interest to know whence originated the title "printer's devil." According to the legend, Aldus Manutius, a printer of Venice, took a little negro boy, left behind by a merchant vessel, to assist him in his work. It was soon rumored that Manutius was assisted by a little black imp, and to dispel the rumor, he showed the boy to the assembled crowd and said: "Be it known in Venice that I, Aldus Manutius, printer to the Holy Church and to the Doge, have this day made a public exposure of the printer's devil. All who think he is not flesh and blood may come and pinch him." It is not related whether the people took advantage of this invitation or not, but from that day to this every respectable printing office has had its devil.

HYGEIA OF THE 19TH CENT.

What the People Say about DR. R. C. FLOWER'S REMEDIES.

Bridgeport, Conn., March, 1885.
"Dr. Flower's Liver and Stomach Sanative cannot be too highly recommended to those suffering from dyspepsia and kindred troubles. I have used it myself, and know whereof I speak."
REV. SYLVESTER CLARK,
Rector of Trinity Episcopal Church.

19 Prospect St., Bridgeport, Ct., Feb., 1885.
"Dr. Flower's Nerve Pills have been of great benefit to me. They are simply invaluable."
MRS. CHAS. E. WILMOT.

Clinton Ave., Stamford, Conn., April, 1885.
"Your bottles of Dr. Flower's Liver Sanative have done more for my wife than all the doctors. Before commencing its use she suffered intensely from liver troubles. She is to-day in better condition than she has been for years, able to attend to her household duties, can enjoy her meals and sleep soundly; something that was for months beyond her power."
HERMAN HEISER.

Norwalk, Conn., March, 1885.
"Dr. Flower's Liver Sanative is the best medicine for stomach troubles I ever saw. It has cured me of a case of long standing, and I gladly testify to its merits."
MRS. A. G. BETTS.

Danbury, Conn., April, 1885.
"I can thoroughly recommend Dr. Flower's Nerve Pills. They are just what every woman who has the cares of a house and family needs, for they seem to have a sedative and quieting effect on the nervous system without leaving any unpleasant effect behind."
MRS. JANE HOYT.

109 Pearl St., Hartford, Conn., April, 1885.
"I recommend all sufferers from dyspepsia or liver complaint to use Dr. Flower's Sanative. I speak from personal knowledge of its value. It has helped me wonderfully." MISS MARY MEEK.

Brewsters, N. Y., April, 1885.
"I have been troubled with a torpid liver for years, and have never found permanent relief until I commenced using Dr. Flower's Liver Sanative. I am happy to be able to add my testimony to its worth."
MRS. F. C. BAILEY.

19 Van Reipen Ave., Jersey City, N. J., April, 1885.
"Your Sanative is doing me good; my appetite has improved, and I am growing stronger every day." MISS IDA BUCKINGHAM.

NORWALK GAZETTE.

Tuesday, Oct. 13, 1885.

Republican Caucus.

THE Republicans of the First and Third Voting Districts are hereby notified that a Caucus will be held in the office of the NORWALK GAZETTE on Wednesday evening, October 14th, for the purpose of nominating two delegates to the Senatorial convention. Per order,

C. R. COOLIDGE, Town Committee.

Norwalk, October 12th, 1885.

Fine Woolens and Cassimeres.

It has been known for some time that the Union Manufacturing company was engaged in the manufacture of woolen goods, cassimeres, etc., but the extent of this company's operations is not generally known. A reporter of the GAZETTE visited the mills yesterday, and learned for the first time some facts which will be of interest and value to the people of this and surrounding towns. The reporter got no farther than the office of the company, for there he saw enough to occupy his attention for the rest of the day, and to take up what space the GAZETTE is able to devote to this important industry. The man of the pencil was met by Mr. William R. Nash, one of the directors of the company, and a gentleman well-known and respected by the people of this town. Making known the object of his visit the reporter was ushered into the stock room of the company, and the different goods made were laid before his eyes in a manner that made him wish he was an English dude, and could afford and revel in three changes of apparel daily. Beavers, Kerseys, Diagonals, Corkscrews, Cheviots, Fancy Worsteds, and all the endless varieties of cloths were spread before him, and all of handsome design and elegant finish. The Union mills have only been engaged in the cloth manufacture about three years. But they started out with the intention of making none but the very best goods, and to this rule they have kept with the most unvarying fidelity. The patterns shown were of the most elegant, and are not surpassed by the most expensive imported goods. The Beaver cloth for overcoats and fine dress suits was of the richest quality and suitable for a Vanderbilt or a Gould. The Cheviots and fancy worsteds for business and ordinary suits were simply grand, and could not be equalled for superiority of work. In fact, several hundred different patterns were shown, and if the tastes of a buyer could not be suited here, he surely had no taste at all.

But the main fact and the one which the company desire to be known is, that they are selling their goods to whomsoever may wish to purchase. For instance, if a gentleman desires a new suit; if he will step into the company's office, he can select the pattern, and the amount needed is measured off and sold to him. He can then go to his tailor and for a small sum have the cloth made into a suit, thus securing his clothes at much less than the ordinary prices, and at the same time being assured that the cloth is of finer quality than he could secure for double the outlay at an ordinary tailor's establishment. Another point of [illegible] tage is the variety of cloths [illegible] which to make a selection. This [illegible] portant, inasmuch as the variety displayed at the company's office is [illegible] greater than could be exhibited by [illegible] clothing maker in the country. [illegible] added to the advantages of cheapness and variety, there [illegible] the quality of the goods. This is [illegible] second to none in the country, and second to but possibly [illegible] foreign concerns. The materials [illegible] making the cloths are of the best, [illegible] the finish is up to the highest notch of the art. So that with cheapness and variety the purchaser has the guarantee of good workmanship in all that the company produces.

But there is another point yet and one in which the ladies both single and married will be interested. Many of the cloths kept by the company are of the kind used in making ladies' cloaks and coverings. By buying the cloth of the Union mills a lady can have her cloak or covering made by any tailor at a price less than she would pay for a ready made garment, and at the same time be assured that the cloth is of the finest and best texture. The same may be said of ladies' dresses, as the company keep a large assortment of goods suitable for such uses.

Still another valuable hint may be given as regards clothes for children. In their large business the company of necessity have many remnants of goods, varying in lengths from a yard to nine inches. These remnants are of as equally good quality as the whole pieces, but, recognizing them only as samples and being anxious to dispose of them, the company sell them at from a shilling to a dollar for the piece, according to its length. These remnants are just the thing for the making of children's clothes. Any mother can secure a good suit for her boy or dress for her girl at a cost of not over fifty cents for the cloth. Then, by cutting and making the garments herself she can get an unusually cheap wardrobe for her children. This department, of itself, is worth inspecting and we doubt not the hint will be readily acted upon by local parents.

On Thursday of this week the company will have ready a full line of samples of ladies' dress goods which they will retail at remarkably low prices. And whether it be ladies wishing dress goods or cloaks, gentlemen wishing suits for themselves or sons, or mothers desiring cheap clothes for their children, it will be to the interest of one and all to pay a visit to the office of the Union Mills, inspect their goods and take them home as fast as they can carry them.

The Elections.

The following shows the political complexions of the towns in Fairfield county, according to the last week's town elections:

Bridgeport	no vote	Newtown	dem
Fairfield	dem	Norwalk	rep
Bethel	rep	Redding	rep
Brookfield	dem	Ridgefield	rep
Danbury	dem	Sherman
Darien	rep	Stamford	dem
Easton	rep	Stratford	rep

The license vote was as follows:—For license—Fairfield, Danbury, Greenwich, Norwalk, Redding, Stamford and Trumbull. No license—Bethel, Monroe, and New Canaan. No vote—Bridgeport, Brookfield, Fairfield, Ridgefield, Weston and Wilton. No return—Darien, Easton, Newtown, Stafford and Westport.

Notable Improvements.

Mr. S. B. Wilson has purchased a lot adjacent to the Burr Betts place on the corner of Belden Avenue and Wall Street, and will shortly erect a handsome residence for himself. In addition Mr. Wilson has bought two more lots in that vacant plot of land and will erect a tenant house on one. A street is to be run through the property so as to open to travel some of the interior lots. Mr. Andrew Selleck has also purchased two lots on this piece.

Fall "Openings."

Miss Agnes Fitch has her "Opening" of Fall and Winter goods at her store 49 Main street, on Wednesday and Thursday of this week.

The Misses St. John have their "opening" on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday.

Mrs. Fawcett's "opening" will occur on Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

No Breath Here.

There are in Norwalk 56 regularly licensed liquor saloons, 10 beer shops, and 7 licensed drug stores.

Lost a Day Somewhere.

"Uncle" Truman Dickerson lives at Cranberry Plains. He is a good old man and during his eighty-four years of life he has shown due regard for the Sabbath and all its observances. Day before yesterday, however, he did a deed which has caused no little sorrow in his aged breast and has bowed him more than the years he has lived. It happened in this wise:

Last Saturday week he was in town as usual doing chores and laying in a stock of the necessaries for the coming week. Among other things he bethought himself of his dog, and, stepping around to Mitchell's market ordered them to save him a lot of "dog meat" during the coming week, saying he would pay for the same when he drove to town the following Saturday. The Mitchells obeyed the instructions and saved quite a quantity of the meat. Saturday came but "uncle" Truman didn't, and some surprise was manifested at his non-appearance. But it was thought the old gentleman was sick or too busy to come down and so the meat was laid one side ready for his future order.

Early Sunday afternoon an old gentleman drove into town. He was seen to hitch his horse and then look at the closed stores and deserted streets in surprise. He walked slowly around to Mitchell's and seemed puzzled to find it closed. "Hello!" said he, "shut up again! Now what on airth ails those Mitchells." Uncle Truman, for it was he, was turning away in disgust when he noticed a gentleman passing by. Accosting him Mr. Dickerson remarked—"Pears as though things were awful quiet here to-day, ain't they?" "Well, no, not unusually so," said the gentleman, "we are generally quiet here on Sunday." "Huh?" gasped Uncle Truman. "I say we are usually quiet here Sundays," repeated the gentleman. "W-w-why, it t'aint Sunday," stammered Uncle Truman. "Why, yes it is, sir," said the gentleman. Uncle Truman saw it all in an instant. With a convulsive gasp he said, "May the Lord forgive me! Here I've plowed my lot, husked my corn, and come to town to trade, and all on the Lord's day. Well, well, well!" and with a face drawn down so that his shoes almost trod on his chin, Uncle Truman unhitched his horse, and drove mournfully home. As he passed out of sight up Mill Hill, he was heard to say—"Truman Dickerson, for the first time in eighty years, I'm ashamed of ye! G'lang!"

A Norwalk Man Caned.

The members of the executive committee of the Yale & Towne Mutual Benefit society had a very enjoyable meeting Tuesday evening, at the home of R. W. England. After transacting their usual business and partaking of the bountiful repast spread by Mrs. England, short and pithy speeches were in order, as well as the presentation of a beautiful gold-headed ebony cane to Mr. C. H. Adams, the former secretary of the society. Mr. E. W. Riker gave the cane away with a few well timed remarks, in his usual happy way. Mr. Adams was so taken by surprise that he could not find words just at that time so he called upon [illegible] [illegible] Mr. Adams returned on a late train to Norwalk, where he resides, a proud and happy man. He will take good care of that cane, without doubt, coming from the source it did.—Advocate.

Knights of Labor.

At the general assembly of the Knights of Labor held in Hamilton, Ont. Wednesday, the secretary and treasurer submitted a report showing the rapid growth of the order during the past year. The order has been firmly planted in England and Belgium, and there has been a steady increase of assemblies in the south. He recommended that men should work only eight hours, regardless of the wages. The finances of the general assembly are in such a flourishing condition that a reduction of the per capita tax is recommended. There are 1,610 assemblies and 111,395 members in the organization now. The balance sheet of July 1, 1885, shows; Total receipts, $48,781; Total expenditures, $39,502; balance on hand, $9,297.

Danbury Fair.

Our Danbury neighbors seemed to have changed places with us this year and, whereas we had fine weather at our County fair, rain, mud and biting cold seemed to do their best to break up the Danbury institution just they have with us in years past. But it was of no use. Danbury is such a wide-awake town that she gets the best of the elements every time.

The show was larger than ever, the crowds were no smaller than usual and everybody was as much delighted as though old Sol hadn't got mad and hid behind the clouds. The racing was A 1, and altogether, the fair, as usual, was a grand success. We congratulate our neighbors, and we trust good luck may ever pursue them.

For Erin's Aid.

The meeting of sympathizers with the cause of Ireland was held Wednesday evening at St. John's hall. The attendance was very large and the enthusiasm great. City Auditor Keating, who was chosen to preside, briefly addressed the gathering and was followed by J. D. Plunkett, T. J. Fox and C. T. Driscoll, of New Haven, who presented Ireland's cause in terms both forcible and eloquent. The list of contributions was large, and the sum raised amounts to $665.35. It is expected to make the amount $1,000 before the week passes, and all persons desiring to aid the cause can leave their contributions with J. J. Phelan, Bernard Keating, City Clerk Mooney, McMahon & Wren, or James Feeley. The largest contributors to the fund so far are: Emmet club and McMahon & Wren $100 each; Father Mathew T. A. B. society, $75; John Barrett, $25. There is a long list of persons whose contributions are $10, $5, $3, $2, $1 and 50 cents each.—Bridgeport Post.

The following from the Bridgeport Standard refers to one of the GAZETTE'S advertisers, who is becoming popular here as a teacher of music:—

Miss Lutie H. Merrill, whom doubtless many of our readers will remember as having performed at the first chamber concert last year announces that she will accept a few pupils on the pianoforte. Miss Merrill has received careful training at the hands of W. J. Hall during the past four years, and is rapidly acquiring a reputation as a brilliant player and a conscientious teacher. We wish her much success.

Hell Gate Blown Up.

The explosion at Hell Gate occurred shortly after eleven o'clock Saturday afternoon and was eminently successful. As the big blast was fired a column of water dashed a hundred feet or more into the air. But soon after the waters were flowing peacefully and the soundings were made. It was found that an immense wreck had been made of the reef and with a little dredging the channel would admit of the passage of ocean steamers.

Notice to Advertisers.

From and after to-day changes in advertisements now running in the GAZETTE must be handed in at the office by Saturday morning of each week. Unless this is done advertisements cannot be changed till the following week. New advertisements will be received up to 11 a. m. on Tuesday of each week.

Let Well Enough Alone.

The heart broken Sentinel advises contesting the result of the recent city election on the ground that 30 or more illegal votes were cast for the People's ticket. "A drowning man will clutch at a straw."

THOSE STOLEN SPOONS.

Senator Beck, of Kentucky, is a personal friend of Ben Butler, and to him the Massachusetts ex-Governor related the true story of the stolen spoons. He said: "When I was in New Orleans, complaints were frequently made to me of houses being entered and plundered. I had these complaints investigated by an officer of my staff, who reported that they were immensely exaggerated. One day while I was in a bad humor, a prominent citizen came and renewed the old complaint. 'If the United States,' said he, 'has sent an army of robbers down here, I can put up with it, but if robbery is not authorized, I want my property restored.' He expressed his opinion of the government, its troops and myself in language that was quite earnest. So I concluded to investigate the matter personally. He told me who was the hackman that had brought the robbers to his house, whom I found and compelled to tell the truth. He said that he had driven some soldiers to a number of houses to plunder, and took me to a place where the booty was stored. To my surprise, the officer who had led the gang was my staff officer to whom I had intrusted the investigation. I had the plunder removed to my warehouse until it could be claimed and restored, and had the officer arrested, tried, sentenced and shot, and his family thought he was killed in the service." Said Senator Beck, "Why have you never told this story before, and cleared yourself of the offensive charges?" "Oh," said Butler, "they would get up some other d——d lie on me if I did."

GRAY HAIR.

Many persons begin to show gray hairs while they are yet in their twenties, and some while they are yet in their teens. This does not by any means argue a premature decay of the constitution. It is a purely local phenomenon, and may co-exist with unusual bodily vigor. The celebrated author and traveler, George Borrow, turned quite gray before he was thirty but was an extraordinary swimmer and athlete at sixty-five.

Many feeble persons and others who have suffered extremely both mentally and physically, do not blanch a hair until past middle life; while others, without assignable cause, lose their capillary coloring matter rapidly when about forty years of age.

Race has a marked influence. The traveler, Dr. Orbigny, says that in the many years he spent in South America he never saw a bald Indian, and scarcely ever a gray-haired one. The negroes turn more slowly than the whites. Yet we know a negress of pure blood, about thirty-five years old, who is quite gray. In this country sex appears to make little difference. Men and women grow gray about the same period of life. In man the hair and beard rarely change equally. The one is usually darker than the other for several years, but there seems no general rule as to which whitens first. [illegible] begins differs with the individual. The philosopher Schopenhauer began to turn gray on the temples, and complacently framed a theory that this is an indication of vigorous mental activity.

PERUVIAN RELICS.

Enterprising men might make considerable money in Peru by buying up old paintings and antique silver plate, of which the pawnshops are full. The aristocracy are compelled to have bread, even if they go without meat and butter, and as their incomes have been cut off by the war and the revolution that has been going on since, they trade on small margins with Mr. Isaacs and Mr. Jacobs, who do not seem to have felt the financial distress. The rarest sort of old plate can be had for its weight in silver coin, and genuine old paintings are as plenty as peas. Relics of the Incas are also cheap, as collectors have to sell them to live. It is still fashionable to go on resurrection expeditions, to dig in the Inca burying-ground for mummies and things which were placed in their graves. The Incas had the same mode of preserving the dead as the ancient Egyptians, and in each grave were placed articles of decoration as well as utensils required by the spirits to set up house-keeping in the happy land. Rings, and other ornaments of gold and silver, cups and platters of both metals in quaint designs, copper articles, strings of beads, weaving and cooking apparatus, water jugs, pots and jars, and all sorts of things, were always placed in the graves, as well as weapons of war and other curiosities that interest antiquarians nowadays. Any one can dig up all the relics he wants by hiring a couple of men and going out into the ruins which cover the whole country along the coast. There are millions of graves yet untouched. The most curious things are mummies' eyes—petrified eyeballs—which are usually to be found in the graves, if one is careful in digging. The Incas had a way of preserving the eyes of the dead from decay—some process which modern science cannot comprehend; and the eyeballs make pretty settings for pins. They are yellow, and hold light like an opal.

ARTIFICIAL BALL LIGHTNING.

One of the most remarkable of electrical manifestations is that known as globular or ball lightning, which is so rare that physicists have had little or no opportunity of studying it. A similar phenomenon, however, has been produced in the laboratory on a small scale. It has been caused accidentally on various occasions, and, on having a piece of apparatus destroyed by one of the discharges. M. Plante, the well-known French electrician, has been led to experiences in which a successful imitation of ball lightning has evidently been obtained. With a powerful current from secondary batteries he has produced in an air condenser, formed of two moistened pads of filter paper placed near together, a small incandescent globule, lasting some minutes and moving slowly and in a curious and most erratic path. When a condenser was used, in which the insulating matter was ebonite, a sound was emitted like that of a toothed wheel rapidly rotated against a piece of cardboard.

An article that will gratify almost universal curiosity is promised in the November Harper's—"The New York Stock Exchange." It will present a sketch of the growth of the Exchange from its organization by twenty-four brokers who met under a buttonwood tree in Wall street in 1792, to its present membership of eleven hundred, with a building $1,800,000, a salary list for employes of $2,000,000 yearly, an initiation fee of $20,000, and yearly transactions of about $13,000,000,000, dividing a profit probably of over $30,000,000. The writer, Dr. Wheatley, describes at length the organization of the exchange, explains its legitimate business function, and sets forth plainly how its facilities are sometimes made use of to fleece the dear public; tells the story of one of Jay Gould's great manipulations of the market, and gives the slang of the street—a portion of which is in itself an interesting contribution to the curiosities of language. Views of the Exchange, portraits of its officers, and of Vanderbilt, Jay Gould, Cyrus W. Field, Russell Sage, and other operators, and other illustsations, make the paper still more interesting.

Real Estate Changes.

The following transactions in real estate have been recorded since our last report:

Richard E. Wilcox to Mary A. Crowe, wife of James C. Crowe, land on West avenue, known as the Wilcox homestead.

Frank H. Turner, of Stratford, Conn., to Eliza L. Prince, wife of Theodore C. Prince, land on West avenue, Norwalk.

Augustus G. and Mary Taylor to Oliver E. Wilson, land near Strawberry Hill.

Oliver E. Wilson to Augustus G. Taylor land down town, so called; consideration nominal.

Dessert.

The Genesta sailed for England on Thursday.——Mary Anderson arrived at New York Tuesday on the Gallia, accompanied by Manager Abby and her stepfather, Dr. Griffin.——Judge Barrett, in the New York court of oyer and terminer, has fixed the date of the trial of Ferdinand Ward October 19.——Judge T. R. Westbrook, of Kingston, N. Y., holding court at Troy, was found dead in bed at the Troy house, Tuesday morning. His death was due to heart disease.——Alfred Cobb, of East Deerfield, Mass., aged 77, who lies at the point of death, has made the request that when he shall die his body be taken to his tobacco barn and there kept three days, when it shall be taken to a hill near his house, saturated with kerosene and burned. He is of sound mind and a strong advocate of cremation.——The citizens of Tombstone, Arizona, have created a bounty fund and offer $250 for each Apache scalp brought in.——The completion of Davis Island dam at Pittsburg, which cost the government $9,000,000, was formally celebrated Tuesday. At least 50,000 strangers were in the city.——There are sixteen colleges in America yearning for presidents.——The Indians of New Mexico are said to be doing a thriving business in manufacturing "ancient" pottery, which they sell to credulous tourists as relics from the prehistoric mounds.——According to a recent estimate there are 285,000,000 acres of improved land 445,000,000, acres of forest and 730,000,000, acres of unimproved and waste untimbered land in the United States.——Biscuit were eaten in a McPherson, Kansas, hotel recently, made from flour ground from wheat which was standing in the field ninety minutes previous to the call to supper.——Among the Indian tribes one in four dies of consumption, which is a larger proportion than among the white or colored races.——The penalty for selling a cigarette to a boy or girl under sixteen years of age in New Hampshire has been made $20 for each offence.——Railroad ties cost a dollar each in New Mexico.——Insanity increases in Massachusetts at the rate of 200 cases a year.——An old beggar at Stirling, Scotland, knew the entire Bible by heart.——Gold worth $30,800,000 was dug from Uncle Sam's rich soil in 1884.——No less than 3,000,000 gallons of Vichy water are exported yearly.——It is stated that the South last year spent $10,000,000 on public schools.——The public debt of Paris is larger than that of any other city in the world.——Paper flour barrels are coming into use in some parts of the West.——At Yakutsk, Siberia, the earth is always frozen to a depth of fifty feet.——Sixty-two bachelors committed suicide in the United States during the first quarter of the present year.——An English Syndicate has just purchased the Sanchez grant of land in Mexico, embracing over 1,400,000 acres.——There are in the United States over 5,000,000 head of cattle, which are valued at more than $226,000,000.——Some of the gamblers driven out of Chicago have established their games in boats beyond the city limits on the lake.——Among 200,000 immigrants who came to this country during the past eight months, only three were from Greece, and the trio are now confined in the Chicago workhouse as vagrants. It is fortunate that the Grecian continent was so small. The largest number was furnished by Germany, and the second by Great Britain, divided into 38,000 Irish, 29,000 English and Welsh, and 6,000 Scotch. Sweden and Norway contributed 24,303 to our population; Italy, 11,538; Russia, 14,000; Bohemia, 11,000; France, 1,458; and Swizerland, 2,630.——Massachusetts furnished 13,000 men more than her quota to the Union army, Connecticut, Rhode Island and Vermont also more. By the three years standard Massachusetts furnished 124,000 men, Connecticut 50,000, Vermont 29,000, New Hampshire 30,000, Maine 56,000, Rhode Island nearly 18,000, New York 392,000, Pennsylvania 265,000, Ohio 240,000, Illinois 214,000, Indiana 153,000.

A Gunner's Guide.

Apropos of the approach of the gunning season is the "Paradise for Gunners and Anglers," a neat little pamphlet issued by the Passenger Department of the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad Co., descriptive of the gunning and fishing resources of the Delaware and Maryland peninsular. The book treats of the game and fish of this section, their haunts and habits, the localities they frequent, and gives extracts from the game laws of the region, and in fact, all the information a sportsman could desire. It is embellished with engravings of game and fish, and contains an excellent map, showing the water-courses, roads, and railways of the section. It is a complete manual for the gunner or angler, who would find his sport in one of the best game-stocked portions of the Atlantic States. The book is distributed gratuitously, and may be procured by addressing James R. Wood, General Passenger Agent, Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad, Philadelphia, Pa.

Alway avoid harsh purgative pills. They first make you sick and then leave you constipated. Carter's Little Liver Pills regulate the bowels and make you well. Dose, one pill.

A man's wife should always be the same, especially to her husband, but if she is weak and nervous, and uses Carter's Iron Pills, she cannot be, for they make her "feel like a different person," at least so they all say, and their husbands say so too! Carter's Iron Pills equalize the circulation, remove nervousness, and give strength and rest. Try them.

To The Public!—A CARD.

I have recently learned from creditable authority that statements are being industriously circulated, with the evident intent of injuring my business, to the effect that in my use of the new process of embalming the dead, an exposure of the remains is usual and rendered necessary for its effectual application. Nothing can be further from the truth. I have used the system, which is now adopted by all the leading and best undertakers of this country, for nearly two years, during which time I have not used a single pound of ice for preserving the bodies of the dead. And I am the only undertaker who has not used it. But in no instance has it been necessary to expose any more of the person of the corpse than is seen after it is laid out in the casket for public view and burial service. The process of administering it is as delicate as the injection of a hypodermic needle in the wrist or hand to allay pain in the living subject. I confidently appeal to every friend of the more than a hundred subjects I have used the process upon and who have witnessed its administration, to confirm my statement in this respect, and to aid in refuting the injurious, cruel and heartless falsehood to which I have been forced to refer.

Respectfully,
tf26 WM. E. QUINTARD.

The Combination Steam and Warm Air Heater.

This Heater is Provided with an Anti-Clinker Grate,

Which can be cleaned by inserting the poker through the lift door. It has an ash damper which prevents escape of dust, when shaking the grate. Its draft dampers are regulated automatically, by the pressure of steam in the boiler, obviating all danger of over heating, hence the furnace requires little personal attention, except in supplying the fuel and removing the ashes.

It is provided with a water pan, for supplying the heated air with the necessary moisture. The boiler is combined with the furnace in such a manner as to take up no extra room, and while suspended over the fire pot, yet does not impair the draft of the furnace. The product of combustion, after passing both through and around the boiler, enters the radiator surrounding the dome, and after yielding most of its heat to the radiator, escapes through the exit flue. The boiler is provided with steam and water gauges, and safety valves. It consumes only about one pail of water per week. The whole apparatus is constructed with a view to simplicity, facility of erection, and operation, has the greatest and most extensive heating capacity at the least expense and is thoroughly durable.

Willard, Miss Anna Gordon, Miss Ida Buxton, and Mrs. E. N. Pierce of Plainville.

The sparring match announced to take place at the Bridge House between Pete McCoy and Ike Williams Wednesday evening did not occur, owing to McCoy's inability, through sickness, to be present. He sent a substitute however, named Hart from New York, who sparred Mr. Williams with such skill that after a lively set to the match was declared a draw. Lynch of New Canaan and Bartram of South Norwalk has a boxing encounter, in which Lynch got the best of his opponent. Williams and McCoy will meet for a spar at some time in the near future, at the Bridge House.

—Buy the Fearless $2.50 Shoe at Hoyt's.

Cold weather is approaching and ladies are looking over their furs. And just at this time we wish to call attention to the advertisement of Mr. Gunther of South Norwalk. Mr. G. is an expert workman in furs and any alterations or repairs necessary in last year's sets can be made by him, in as thorough a manner and at one half the price charged by New York houses. In buying of new furs also, Mr. Gunther has been of valuable assistance to a number of Norwalkers. His judgment in this respect is infallable and oftentimes he saves many dollars to the buyer by knowing just where to go and what to buy. To our Norwalk ladies who desire any work whatever in the fur line we consider we are doing a favor by recommending Mr. Gunther.

The 7:42 a. m. train was changed to 8:20 last Monday morning, and runs only to Branchville. The change was made as was expected when a change was made in the summer. The Danbury & Norwalk Railroad Company is disposed to do all it can to encourage the prosperity of our town. Another season it will endeavor to still further increase the facilities for quick connection with New York. Many think the mileage on the branch is high, but those familiar with the old stage rates are not disposed to grumble much. In the issue of mileage tickets, Ridgefield is placed on an equality with the rest of the road. A thousand mile ticket places the fare to Branchville at only eight cents. The year that is now passing is the most prosperous year the road ever had.—Ridgefield Press.

J. M. Ellendorf of South Norwalk, addressed the K. of L. and the public of Naugatuck on the labor question on Saturday evening last at the Opera House there. Some enemy of labor turned off the gas leaving the house in utter darkness. The audience remained in their seats, the lights were re-lighted and proceedings were concluded amid great enthusiasm.—Journal.

The amount received by the County commissioners for liquor licenses during the month of September was unusually small. There were applicants from but two places, Bridgeport and Fairfield. The former's share of the money taken in was $225.15; Fairfield, $12.35; county treasurer, $12.50; total, $250. The board will meet again next Tuesday.—Farmer.

A number of old ladies met with Mrs. George W. Selleck Thursday afternoon, at her residence on Merwin street. There were ten in attendance whose ages aggregated 810 years as follows: Mrs. Harriet Brotherton, 85; Mrs. Sarah Canfield, 85; Mrs. Betsey Hubbell, 84; Mrs. Katherine McDonald, 84; Mrs. George Hoyt, 82; Mrs. Isaac Selleck, 80; Mrs. Delia Westerfield, 80; Miss Rebecca Beers, 80; Mrs. Henry Kellogg, 78; Mrs. Ann Howarth, 72.

Fire started in some mysterious manner in the cellar of Hoyt's pharmacy Thursday evening, which created considerable excitement, being in close proximity to a barrel of benzine and other combustibles. By energetic work, however, the danger was obviated and a destructive conflagration avoided. Policeman Wilson had his head severely cut by a fractious nozzle, and a lady fainted away on the sidewalk. The damage was not large.

The Union Social club of Norwalk will have their first annual ball at the Phalanx Hall on Thursday evening of this week. An appropriate and tasty programme of twenty-eight numbers has been prepared and the dances admirably arranged to suit all. Heine's Orchrstra will furnish the music for the occasion, H. H. Griggs prompter. The floor manager is P. E. Callahan, who will be assisted by Messrs J. McQuillan and P. Cahill. The committee of arrangements, Messrs. J. H. McQuillan, P. E. Callahan, W. Stephens, S. Northrop, J. Mead, T. N. Northrop, and P. Cahill, have done their utmost for the success of the ball and the indications are that it will prove a highly enjoyable affair.

The New York Sun sent a reporter to the Danbury fair to write up "Old Sport," and here is the result: Everybody who drove through the main gate passed Old Sport Peter, the paleozoic pedestrian Campana, selling peanuts. He is more picturesque and eccentric than ever. His black hair is almost as short as his fortnight's beard. His face is sharp, and his eyes keen. His trousers are second-hand and have loud red and black stripes. Up by his chin stick the ends of his canvas shirt, and his torn coat hides most of his cravat. As he cried his wares he sang: "I am the Old Sport, the only Sport, I am the Sport from Bridgeport. I brought these peanuts from Culpepper, Virginia." He said to the reporter: "They are my best friends. We were never born to blush unseen and apart. If I had kept to my legitimate business of selling peanuts and let walking alone I would now be worth $80,000. The money I make here will buy my winter's coal." Then he sang his stanza again, and poured out peanuts as fast as he could take in the nickels.

Glen Cove has a vigilance committee who make it their self imposed duty to punish all married men in the town caught out after eleven o'clock at night by ducking them in the fountain. Says the Gazette of that place:

Three more married men were ducked in the Flushing fountain on Monday night last, for being out later than eleven o'clock. The vigilance committee seems to be well officered and manned and very efficient in the discharge of its disagreeable, but important duties. The three parties ducked were Joseph Dow, a carpenter; Richard Townsend, a farmer, and Peter Schmelzah, a livery stable keeper. Joseph and Richard take it kindly, but Peter is reported as mad as a March hare, and will go to law or—emigrate to more congenial pastures.

The funeral services of Susan E. Brownell, wife of J. J. Millard, Esq., who died on Wednesday, were held at her late home on Bay View ave., Friday morning, Revs. J. H. Ross and H. N. Dunning officiating. She was born at Sanquit, Oneida Co., N. Y. Mrs. Millard has been for many years a member of the Congregational church, this city, and was greatly endeared to a large circle of friends and relatives. During her last severe and protracted illness she was patient and cheerful and awaited with calm resignation and christian fortitude the summons of her Master, when she gently passed to the spirit world. A heartfelt sympathy is felt for Mr. Millard, and her daughter Mrs. Rose, in this their sad bereavement. Her remains were taken from her late home Friday, to the place of her nativity, where funeral services were held.—Republican.

There is a class of men—the veritable salt of the earth—whom editors love, and whose faces are like benedictions, whenever they appear at the sanctum. They take a local interest in their paper, a pride in its success and are interested in its welfare, and jealous of its influence. They bring in local news, furnish articles of local improvements or suggestions of local acts for criticism, blame or praise, and take a zealous interest in furnishing points, or "exclusives," to their favorite journal. In comparison with the grumbling reader who borrows his paper and sneers at "stick of an editor," he is an angel of light. "He is like a sunshine in a shady place," and we say of him in the words of the Roman poet, "May he find heaven late."—Lynn Union.

Mrs. T. Archie Evans was visited by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Rodemeyer, of Canaan, last week. Mrs. Evans and Miss Martha Evans started yesterday for a two week's visit with friends in New York state.

In accordance with a notification from the Knights of Labor, Newsdealers Cole and Owen have dropped the New York Tribune from their counters, and refused to handle it. A local stove dealer, also, has been warned to stop selling state prison made stoves.

The advent of cooler weather has set the tongue of the inevitable match maker to wagging, and among other victims our ex-manager of our ex-skating rink comes in for a liberal share of attention. The fact of his having sold his skates and sworn off "rinking" furnishes ample ground, in opinions of the gossips in "our set," for the suspicion of matrimonial intent—and he makes no effort to allay that suspicion.

DARIEN.

Miss Addie Watkins is absent visiting relatives in Jersey City.

Mr. J. V. Hecker and family left, Thursday, for New York, where they will spend the winter.

Mr. Charles Frudenthal and family, of Bethel, are guests at the residence of Mr. George Bates.

The board of school visitors has decided that the teachers can draw no salary until the end of the term. This is very convenient for the teachers and results in a great saving to the town. The money can lie on deposit until that time.

Mr. F. M. Raymond has recently purchased of Mr. H. B. Treadwell a tract of land on the depot road, on the south side of the road opened by Mr. Treadwell a few years ago. We learn that Mr. Raymond proposes to erect a building for factory purposes, but is not willing to state at present the industry which will locate there.

The Sunday school of the Congregational church will hold their harvest home concert next Sunday evening, and on the following Tuesday evening a harvest home festival will be held, at which the produce, which has been raised from the seeds distributed last spring, will be sold, beside many fancy articles which have been made by the young people.

At a meeting of the "Round Table" a the study of the Memorial church, Monday evening, the lecture committee presented their report. A large list of names, embracing all the well-known lecturers, was presented, and the availability of each discussed. It was decided to make an effort to have a course of six lectures, and arrangements were made to ascertain the number of tickets for the course that could be disposed of. It is hoped that the enterprise may receive the support of the citizens, as it has been a number of years since anything of the kind has been attempted. It is not the object of the projectors to make money but rather to furnish a series of entertainments which may be instructive and elevating as well as entertaining.

The election of town officers last Monday was influenced by other than party lines, although the result was the election of the democratic ticket as usual. The count showed a large proportion of scratched tickets, some not having more than two of the original names. The business meeting in the afternoon was presided over by D. C. Birdsall. The question of "roads," which has been agitated in various ways for some time, was discussed, and it was decided to appoint a road commissioner to have charge of all of the roads in the town for a term of five years, who should keep them in repair subject to the approval of a road inspector. Charlie P. Chapman was appointed commissioner at $10,000 for five years. Frederick Morehouse was appointed inspector at an annual salary of $100. There are those who still claim the old system is better, but the trial will give the public a chance to compare results.

Bridget Devlin was sent to the almshouse in New Haven by Judge Deming Tuesday morning. She had thrown her nine-months'-old baby across the room while in one of her frenzies.

William Carron who, with six other members of Dorris' circus were arrested at Frankfort, Ky., Saturday, for robbing four men and then forcing them to leap from a running train, is a native of Norwich. A report that Carroll and his companions have been hanged by a mob has reached Norwich.

An incident of the election is thus related by the Record:

"Are ye a democrat?"

"Oi am."

"Was McAvoy nominated on the straight democratic ticket?"

"He was not."

"Did ye vote for him?"

"Oi did."

"Then ye voted the republican ticket."

"You're a liar."

Fracas.

There was an amusing feature connected with the parade of a show band last Monday noon. The saloons are all supposed to be closed during the hours the polls are open, according to the state law. At a certain saloon where the front door was closed and the curtains drawn, there was a strange sight when the band passed. A row of heads peeping over the top of the curtain, more heads at the sides of the curtain, all striving to catch a glimpse of the band. Passers by smiled when they saw the sight.—New Britain Record.

"Boss" Shepard was always more popular in Washington than in the rest of the country. He used the money of the people with a liberal hand, but it was he who made Washington the beautiful city it is. A few years ago he was the subject of fierce attack as a mammoth jobber. Now he proposes to return to Washington and the citizens, irrespective of party, talk of giving him a public reception. Another illustration of time's whirligig.—New Haven Palladium.

TOBACCO IN IRELAND.

James I. disliked tobacco, describing "smoking as a custom loathsome to the eye, hateful to the nose, harmful to the brain, dangerous to the lungs, and in the black stinking fume thereof resembling the horrible Stygian smoke of the pit that is bottomless." In spite of his opposition, however, and of high duties imposed on the weed at various times, the custom grew popular, and in the middle of the seventeenth century a considerable quantity of tobacco was grown in several English counties as well as in Ireland. The policy of the Government at this time was to encourage the Puritans of North America, and to give them the monopoly of supplying the mother country with tobacco; and about 1661 a heavy penalty was imposed on all tobacco grown in Ireland, followed, about ten years later, by an act altogether prohibiting its growth, and ordering all constables and other officers to enter grounds and pluck up and destroy tobacco plants, no tobacco also being allowed to be landed in Ireland without previously landing in England. The necessity of the second act is a clear proof of the very successful progress of the cultivation of the tobacco plant at that period in Ireland. For upward of a century from that date the growth of tobacco was totally prohibited. Afterward, upon the revolt of the American colonies, for the double purpose of punishing the Virginia planters and trying to win the affections of the Irish, the Government of Lord North repealed the disabling statute of Charles II., and it became again lawful to grow and cure tobacco in Ireland. In this condition things remained during the eighteen years of Irish independence, and the permission to grow tobacco in Ireland was still expressly continued by the Articles of Union. By an act, however, of one and two William IV., the act of Lord North was repealed, and from that day a fine of £100 is imposable on any person growing more than one pound of tobacco in his garden. This act did not pass through Parliament without considerable opposition; much information was elicited as to the cultivation then existing, and Lord Valentia and Mr. Lefroy, among others, gave valuable testimony as to the benefits accruing to the country from the tobacco cultivation. There can be no question that in certain districts where the soil was suitable large profits were earned. The county Wexford, and the neighborhood of Enniscorthy in particular, was the most favored spot in this respect. As a proof of this the records of the debates in Parliament are sufficient, and we have also authority to the same effect. In the Dublin Penny Journal, December, 1832, there is to be found an article bearing on this subject. In relating the account of an interview with a tobacco farmer from county Wexford, the writer gives some interesting information as to the value that could be extracted from Irish soil by the growth of the now forbidden plant. A young man from Enniscorthy had been over to Maryland, and on his return brought with him some seed, and encouraged his brother to venture on it, and from half an acre £100 had once been produced. Holding a farm of sixteen acres, this man had made a profit of £1,200 in seven years. The tobacco sold well because it was Irish, and the prohibitory act lately passed was viewed with much disfavor and dismay.

THE ORIGINATORS OF LAWN TENNIS.

How few lawn-tennis players know who orginated the game and where the first game was played! This excellent pastime has now been in existence for ten years and it has probably been a greater source of amusement than anything of the kind ever invented. The originator and inventor was Major Walter Wingfield, of her Majesty's Body Guard, who in 1874 wrote a little book, compiled a set of rules, and coined the outlandish name "Sphairistike." The first game ever played was in 1874 at Colonel Naylor Leyland's house in Denbighshire. The first public game ever played in this country was at Prince's ground, in the summer of 1875, the players being Major Wingfield, Mr. Clement Scott, Captain Alfred Thompson, and Mr. Albany Erskine. It was openly jeered at by a crowd of racket and cricket celebrities, who did their utmost to ridicule the game in every way. But in less than one month two courts were taken at Prince's for every hour in the day, and the racket players and cricketers had to "sing small."

He that considers how little he dwells upon the condition of others will learn how little the attention of others is attracted by himself.

Joaquin Miller tells how he and Bert Harte stood at the tomb of Dickens. "His left hand sought mine in silence," says Miller, in describing the momentous occasion; "his eyes filled with tears. We had never been friends before."

These small and quiet asylums that are found in the country for insane patients, whose families are able to pay for special care, are said to be often owned by city physicians with practice extensive enough to provide the inmates.

A tourist in New Mexico writes that he started back in horror on first seeing one of those black-eyed beauties whom he had heard described as characteristic of the native people. She was ginger-colored, hard-featured, barefooted, half naked and very untidy, and she proved to be a type, too.

The belles of Saratoga have a substitute for kissing, and it consists in rubbing cheeks. The maidens meet. The nose of one is slid back about to the ear of the other, and the conjunctive cheeks, held hard, are slowly rubbed together until they part at the corners of the mouths.

A naval cadet when at sea receives a salary of $950 a year. On shore duty he receives $500. Senior lieutenants, at sea, receive $2,400 annually for the first five years, and $2,600 afterward. Junior grade lieutenants receive $1,800 and $2,000 according to length of service in the same way.

When the chief engineer of the Illinois Central Railroad was lying out the line and wanted a mellifluous name for a station, he would shuffle a pack of cards, each inscribed with a letter, until a satisfactory combination suggested itself—as Tolono, Onarga, Aledo, Diona, Nakoma, and so on.

A veteran Italian sea captain, who had been sailing on the Mediterranean for sixty years, ran into an English steamer while bringing his own steamer into Leghorn the other day. The accident affected his spirits to such an extent that he took cloroform and morphine and died on the following morning.

The Suprintendent of the Elmira Reformatory says that drunkenness can be traced in the ancestry of more than a third of the convicts sent there; that only one in four of their parents has received a common school education; and that, as nearly as can be ascertained the home influence in half the cases has been distinctly vicious.

In Delaware and Maryland there are vast swamps where the shingle business is extensively carried on, the shingles being made from logs taken from the submerged land and beneath the surface. One of the swamps in Delaware extends over twenty-five square miles, and hardly a house in Sussex county but what is shingled from the ancient deposit.

A savings bank in Portland, Oregon, has a twenty dollar gold piece which was taken from the stomach of a slaughtered cow, and found to be worth $16.25. The milling is worn off the edge, which is smooth and rounded, but the designs upon the sides remain visible. The date of the coin is 1870, but how long the cow had been digesting the $3.75 no one can tell.

A Western jeweller has invented a novel timepiece in the shape of a steel wire stretched across his show window, on which a stuffed canary hops from left to right, indicating as it goes the hours of the day by pointing with its beak at a dial stretched beneath the wire, and having the figures from one to twenty-four. When it reaches the latter figure, it glides across the window to one again. There is no mechanism that can be seen, it all being inside the bird. The inventor says he was three years in studying it out.

In the city of Mexico it is the almost universal custom of the principal bankers and merchants to have their business offices on the ground floor of their residences. The offices thus partake of the cleanliness, order and beauty of the adjoining courts, and have rarely even a sigh to designate them as places of business. The Anglo-Saxon appears to be unique in his whim of putting his office and his home at opposite ends of the town, which necessitates the gradual destruction and rebuilding of the residential region as it is encroached upon by growing demands of commerce.

A LITERARY ELEPHANT.

Everybody knows that the elephant is the most intelligent and sagacious of four-legged beasts; but, until the following curious incident came to our knowledge, we were not aware that he had developed a keen taste for literature, or a greedy appetite for works of fiction. Only recently, however, as the editor of the Moskaur Zeitung stood fixed in admiring contemplation of the collossal pachyderm that is the chief attraction at Winkler's menagerie, he was somewhat startled by the swift insertion of a prehensile probocis into his great coat pocket, which gaped invitingly, and by the removal thence of a manuscript novel forwarded to him for approval by a regular contributor to the feuilleton department of his journal. Ere he could utter an ejaculation of protest, the elephant had conveyed the whole story to its ponderous jaws, and, after masticating it for a few seconds with obvious relish, swallowed it at a gulp. Down to the date of our information respecting the results of this extraordinary feat, no evil results had accrued to the elephant from its romantic meal. Russian fiction may be "strong meat for babes," but an elephantine digestion appears to be quite equal to dealing with it, at least in the form of manuscript. What the consequences might have been to the lordly quadruped had he devoured a printed revolutionary manifesto, or even a proof of one of the Moskaur Zeitung's leading articles, we do not venture to surmise.

Science asserts that experiments indicate the possibility of obtaining an echo from an iceberg when in a dangerous proximity to a ship. It is believed that even an object offering so small a surface as a floating wreck may in this way be detected during a fog in time to prevent a collision. Experiments recently made have demonstrated the feasibility of producing well-marked echoes from sailing vessels and from steamboats considerable distances away. The apparatus employed consisted of a musket, to the muzzle of which a speaking trumpet had been attached. This gun was aimed at passing vessels, while blank-cartridges were fired. After a longer or shorter time, according to the distance of the vessel, an echo was returned.

SKIN AND BLOOD

Diseases from Pimples to Scrofula Cured by Cuticura.

Hundreds of letters in our possession, copies of which may be had by return of mail, repeat this story:—I have been a terrible sufferer for years from Diseases of the Skin and Blood; have been obliged to shun public places by reason of my disfiguring humors; have had the best physicians; have spent hundreds of dollars, and got no relief until I used the CUTICURA REMEDIES, which have cured me and left my skin and blood as pure as a child's.

COVERED WITH SALT RHEUM.

Cuticura Remedies are the greatest medicines on earth. Had the worst case of Salt Rheum in this county. My mother had it twenty years, and in fact died from it. I believe Cuticura would have saved her life. My arms, breast and head were covered for three years, which nothing relieved or cured until I used the Cuticura Resolvent, internally, and Cuticura and Cuticura Soap, externally. J. W. ADAMS.

NEWARK, O.

HEAD, FACE AND BODY RAW.

I commenced to use your Cuticura Remedies last July. My head and face and some parts of my body were almost raw. My head was covered with scabs and sores, and my suffering was fearful. I had tried everything I had heard of in the East and West. My case was considered a very bad one. I have now not a particle of Skin Humor about me, and my case is considered wonderful. MRS. S. E. WHIPPLE.

DECATUR, MICH.

ECZEMA FROM HEAD TO FEET.

Charles Eaye Hinkle, Jersey City Heights, N. J., writes:—"My son, a lad of twelve years, was completely cured of a terrible case of Eczema by the Cuticura Remedies, from the top of his head to the soles of his feet was one mass of scabs." Every other remedy and physicians had been tried in vain.

NOTHING LIKE CUTICURA.

The half has not been told as to the great curative powers of the Cuticura Remedies. I have paid hundreds of dollars for medicines to cure diseases of the blood and skin, and never found anything yet to equal the Cuticura Remedies. CHAS. A. WILLIAMS.

A MAN

WHO IS UNACQUAINTED WITH THE GEOGRAPHY OF THIS COUNTRY, WILL SEE BY EXAMINING THIS MAP, THAT THE

CHICAGO, ROCK ISLAND & PACIFIC RAILWAY

By reason of its central position and close relation to all principal lines East and West, at initial and terminal points, constitutes the most important mid-continental link in that system of through transportation which invites and facilitates travel and traffic between cities of the Atlantic and Pacific Coasts. It is also the favorite and best route to and from points East, Northeast and Southeast, and corresponding points West, Northwest and Southwest.

The Rock Island system includes in its main line and branches, Chicago, Joliet, Ottawa, La Salle, Peoria, Geneseo, Moline and Rock Island, in Illinois; Davenport, Muscatine, Washington, Fairfield, Ottumwa, Oskaloosa, West Liberty, Iowa City, Des Moines, Indianola, Winterset, Atlantic, Knoxville, Audubon, Harlan, Guthrie Centre and Council Bluffs, in Iowa; Gallatin, Trenton, Cameron and Kansas City, in Missouri; Leavenworth and Atchison, in Kansas; Albert Lea, Minneapolis and St. Paul, in Minnesota; Watertown in Dakota, and hundreds of intermediate cities, towns, villages and stations.

THE GREAT ROCK ISLAND ROUTE

Guarantees its patrons that sense of personal security afforded by a solid, thoroughly ballasted road-bed; smooth tracks of continuous steel rail; substantially built culverts and bridges; rolling stock as near perfection as human skill can make it; the safety appliances of patent buffers, platforms and air-brakes; and that exacting discipline which governs the practical operation of all its trains. Other specialties of this route are Transfers at all connecting points in Union Depots, and the unsurpassed comforts and luxuries of its Passenger Equipment.

The Fast Express Trains between Chicago and the Missouri River are composed of well ventilated, finely upholstered Day Coaches, Magnificent Pullman Palace Sleepers of the latest design, and sumptuous Dining Cars, in which elaborately cooked meals are leisurely eaten, "good Digestion waiting on Appetite, and Health on both." Between Chicago and Kansas City and Atchison, are also run the Celebrated Reclining Chair Cars.

THE FAMOUS ALBERT LEA ROUTE

Is the direct and favorite line between Chicago and Minneapolis and St. Paul, where connections are made in Union Depots for all points in the Territories and British Provinces. Over this route, Fast Express Trains are run to the watering places, summer resorts, picturesque localities, and hunting and fishing grounds of Iowa and Minnesota. It is also the most desirable route to the rich wheat fields and pastoral lands of interior Dakota.

Still another DIRECT LINE, via Seneca and Kankakee, has been opened between Newport News, Richmond, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, and Lafayette and Council Bluffs, Kansas City, Minneapolis and St. Paul and intermediate points.

Most women look under the bed for a man. Dr. Mary Walker never does. She doesn't want to find a man anywhere.—Philadelphia Call.

Smart Weed and Belladonna combined with the other ingredients used in the best porous plasters make Carter's S. W. & B. Backache Plasters, the best in the market. Price 25 cents.

Whenever you purchase either Ham or Kettle Lard from your grocer, insist upon having the brand of Sperry & Barnes, New Haven. All goods bearing their well-known trade mark, can be relied on as strictly first-class. Buy no other.

Reporters of Canon Farrar say that some of his sentences are three hundred words long. If that is true we are afraid that he will carry back to England the Evarts cup of oratory.—Burlington Free Press.

DOCTORS

Of all the different schools in the country have thousands die every year of Bright's Disease of the Kidneys, who could be living to-day if they had used Sulphur Bitters. They are unequalled in the world for all diseases of the kidneys.—New Haven Union.

Once there was a hired man who was constantly astonishing his employer, a farmer, by doing some strange and unexpected things. One day the farmer went into the barn and found that his man had hanged himself. Looking at the dangling body a few minutes he exclaimed, "What on earth will that fellow do next."—Argonaut.

LOOKS SO UNTIDY.

Nothing looks more untidy than the presence of scurf and dandruff in the hair and on the clothing. One bottle of Parker's Hair Balsam will heal the scalp and free it from this nuisance. Stops falling of the hair, promotes new growth, and makes it soft, glossy, and silky. Best of dressing. Deliciously perfumed.

Mr. Beecher reads the scriptures in his pulpit from the new version, and he pronounces "sheol" as though it was spelled "shoal." This must rather diminish the old version idea of depth in connection with th pit.—Lowell Courier.

SCOTT'S EMULSION OF PURE COD LIVER OIL, WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES,

In Loss of Appetite and General Debility.

Messrs. Ramsey & Co., of Sharpsburg, Pa., makes the following report:—"That they recommended a friend suffering from loss of appetite and general debility, Scott's Emulsion, that after taking half dozen bottles, he reported, that he ate well, feels well, and is in fact a new man, and recommends it highly."

"How does the new pastor impress you, Miss Spinster?" "Law sakes, how did you know he impressed me at all? I didn't s'pose anybody saw us."—Chicago News.

THE GREAT AMERICAN CHORUS.

Sneezing, snuffing and coughing. This is the music all over the land just now. And will be until June. "I've got such an awful cold in my head." Cure it with Ely's Cream Balm, or it may end in the toughest form of Catarrh. Maybe you have Catarrh now. Nothing is more nauseous and dreadful. This remedy masters it as no other ever did. Not a snuff nor a liquid. Applied by the finger to the nostrils. Pleasant, certain, radical.

The innocence of the intention abates nothing of the mischief of the example.—Robert Hall.

SKUNKS

Have an unsavory reputation among men, but there are men whose practices very nearly put them on a level with that little animal. When you find a puffed up remedy that upon analysis by a competent chemist shows rank poison among its contents, the little animal seems to put the proprietor of the stuff to shame. Lewis' Red Jacket Bitters have been analyzed over and over again, and always receiving the cordial endorsement of the chemist. These bitters will cure malaria.

It is a good rule for parents never to allow their children to read a book until they have examined it.—Savannah News.

NERVOUS DEBILITATED MEN.

You are allowed a free trial of thirty days of the use of Dr. Dye's Celebrated Voltaic Belt with Electric Suspensory Appliances, for the speedy relief and permanent cure of Nervous Debility, loss of Vitality and Manhood, and all kindred troubles. Also, for many other diseases. Complete restoration to health, vigor and manhood guaranteed. No risk incurred. Illustrated pamphlet, with full information, terms, etc., mailed free by addressing Voltaic Belt Co., Marshall, Mich. 1y52

Female opera singers are often guilty of a capital offence. They mutiny on the high C.—Lowell Citizen.

IMPORTANT.

When you visit or leave New York city, save Baggage Expressage and carriage hire, and stop at the Grand Union Hotel, opposite Grand Central Depot.

Elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, reduced to $1.00 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroad to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the city. 1y35

The victorious Chicago base ball club should change its name to "Brussels Carpet," because it is so hard to beat.—New York Journal.

PERUVIAN SYRUP cures Dyspepsia, General Debility, Liver Complaint, Boils, Humors, Chronic Diarrhea, Nervous Affections, Female Complaints, and all the diseases originating in a bad state of the blood.

When you spill soup on the table cloth set your tumbler on it when your wife is not looking, and trust to Providence for the thereafter.—Life.

Carter's Little Liver Pills are free from all crude and irritating matter. Concentrated medicine only; very small; very easy to take; no pain; no griping; no purging.

"Time and tide wait no man," sure enough, but we presume they have to wait for the women folks just the same as everything else on the top of the earth has to do.—Lowell Citizen.

EIGHTEEN NEGROES,

Who left the United States for Liberia last year, have lately returned, being unable to strand the climate. Everybody going to a new climate should have a bottle of Sulphur Bitters with them as a safeguard against disease.—Hartford Courant.

"Dodge Brothers & Pray" is the name of a San Francisco firm. In the land where there are so many earthquakes and drunken miners on a bender their sign really looks very appropriate to a stranger.—Somerville Journal.

HOW TO BE BEAUTIFUL.

Ladies, you can be sure of this: that you cannot have rosy cheeks and a clear complexion unless you are in good health. Disease always spoils beauty. Parker's Tonic purifies the blood, invigorates the organs, drives all bad humors out of the system, and makes the plainest face attractive. Tell your husbands.

Out in Minnesota they tax dogs at their par value. The number of twenty-five cent dogs in Minnesota is said to be astonishing.—Burlington Free Press.

Says a newspaper poet:—"There were no roses till the first child died." The poet refers to Abel, of course, and the rose which then came into existence was the one used against his brother, the child aforesaid.—Boston Citizen.

SUMMER IS NEAR.

True, but that troublesome catarrh, the legacy of a hard winter and fitful spring, threatens to defy the summer. Get a bottle of Borazel and you will, like many others who have tried it, pronounce it the true remedy for nasal catarrh.—New Haven Journal and Courier.

Have you Catarrh? Would you be well. Try one bottle of Borazel.

"Indignant base ball lover—"The championship is going to the Old Nick." Second ditto—"Beg your pardon, sir; it is going to Chicago." "That's what I said."—Boston Transcript.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhoea, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces the inflamation; and gives tone and energy to the whole system. Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup for Children Teething is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle. 1y42

A writer says that "travel elevates the people." It certainly does if the boiler on the vessel on which they are traveling explodes. But it is mighty unhealthy.—Norristown Herald.

QUAKER TESTIMONY.

Mrs. A. M. Dauphin a Quaker lady, of Philadelphia, has done a great deal to make known to ladies there the great value of Mrs. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as a cure for their troubles and diseases. She writes as follows: "A young lady of this city while bathing some years ago was thrown violently against the life line and the injuries received resulted in an ovarian tumor which grew and enlarged until death seemed certain. Her physician finally advised her to try Mrs. Pinkham's Compound. She did so and in a short time the tumor was dissolved or caused to slough off, and she is now in perfect health. I also know of many cases where the medicine has been of great value in preventing miscarriage and alleviating the pains and dangers of childbirth. Philadelphia ladies appreciate the worth of this medicine and its great value."

Happy is the man who is born small in stature. His new plug hat will not be knocked off so soon by the constantly accumulating telegraph wires.—Courier Journal.

A slight cold if allowed to progress will be tended with serious results. Sutton's Catarrh Cure reaches directly the affected parts, and gives immediate relief.

"I have used Sutton's Catarrh Cure to that extent that I am satisfied of its curative properties, and believe it to be a cure for catarrh."—G. W. Collins, Coal Dealer, 3d ave. and 48th street, N. Y. See adv.

"I have been afflicted with catarrh for several years, and have tried a great many remedies, but found no relief until I used Sutton's Catarrh Cure, which has cured me of that terrible disease."—H. H. Todd, Stamford, Conn. See adv. 4t38

The Boston police commissioners have discharged Inspector Ham; Bacon has been fired from the New York custom house, and pork is not allowed to enter Germany. The Jews seem to have a good deal of political influence this year.—Lowell Citizen.

LIFE INSURANCE

—BY—

The Mutual Life Insurance Company, of New York

RICHARD A. McCURDY, President.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company is in the forty-second year of its existence and since the date of its organization has accumulated and has now safely

Invested for the Sole Benefit of its Policy-holders $103,876,178.51

It has during this period

Paid to its policy-holders......... .... $216,094,211.28

After careful consideration, and with the view of granting to policy-holders whatever benefits the experience of the company has shown to be wise and safe, a new form of policy has been prepared, known as

THE FIVE YEAR DISTRIBUTION POLICY.

Thisis a well matured plan and offers to the insuring public many advantages. It introduces all the liberal features which its own experience or that of other institutions have shown to be popular, never forgetting that first of considerations—the absolute safety of the great fund held in trust by the managers of this institution.

A few of the features which characterize the "Five Year Distribution Policy," are:

Policy-holders are allowed a freedom of residence and travel much beyond the ordinary limits, covering it is believed, the requirements of ordinary business or pleasure, and without additional premium or extra charge.

Death claims arising under policies issued on this plan, will be payable as soon as satisfactory proofs are presented to and accepted by the Company.

Policies of this description may be issued to an amount not exceeding $50,000 upon a single life, inclusive of all other policies and additions issued by this Company, upon the same life, and at ages from eighteen to sixty-five years. Also upon lives of females to the amount of $10,000.

A Paid-up Policy is guaranteed at any time after the third annual premium is paid, in accordance with the laws of the State of New York.

This company is now paying about $1,000 per day in matured claims to citizens of Connecticut and we give below a few illustrations of policies recently paid in this State where the dividends have been allowed to accumulate with the Company.

Name.	Residence.	Amt. of Policy.	Dividend Additions Paid.
Charles Mallett,	Bridgeport	$5,000	$8,321
S. Middlebrook,	"	2,000	3,292
Chas. Weeks,	"	1,000	1,557
Reuben Town,	Stonington,	3,000	5,400
Thomas R. Case,	Simsbury,	3,000	4,602
Mary Marvin,	Westport,	2,000	2,052
C. Birdsey,	Meriden,	2,000	2,340
R. H. Beckley,	"	500	810
Mary P. Camp,	"	500	502
Franklin Roys.	Berlin,	2,000	2,736

It will be noticed that in each of the above illustrations the Company paid dividends largely in excess of the policies.

Those who desire SAFE insurance with the certainty of securing all the advantages that a successful, conservative and strong company can offer, are invited to apply to Scientific.

Wollney considers that the results obtained by Schlosing, Muntz, Gilbert, Warrington, and others place it beyond all doubt that the changes which the humous matter of soils undergoes are almost exclusively connected with the vital activity of microbia.

The most highly nitrogenous barleys, L. Marx finds, are those of Russia and Baden; then follow those of Sweden, North Germany, Alsace, Hungary and France. English and Austrian barleys come lowest, with respective means of 9.69 and 9.61 nitrogen.

In a memoir by Sir J. B. Lawes it is maintained that while the atmosphere is the main, if not the exclusive, source of carbon for crops, the soil is the principal, if not the only, source of their nitrogen. The author is of opinion that arable soil loses as much nitrogen in the form of drainage as it receives from the atmosphere.

M. Blavier has sent a note to the Academy of Sciences, Paris, on the influence of thunderstorms on underground telegraph wires. He is inclined to believe that the occasional disturbances, to which even well-protected underground wires are subject, in apparent opposition to the theory of static electricity, may be explained either as an effect of electrodynamic induction or as an effect of electrostatic induction.

At a late meeting of the North of England Institute of Mining and Mechanical Engineers, Mr. T. W. Bunning read a paper on experiments made at Saarbrucken to ascertain the influence of coal dust in explosions in mines. Mr. Galloway, who was present at some of these experiments, stated that if the coal dust were removed from the vicinity of the shot holes, or kept watered for the space of six yards, the risk of explosion was removed.

In the course of a recent lecture on the fauna of the seashore Prof. H. N. Mosely said it is because all terrestrial and deep-sea forms have passed through a littoral phase of existence, and that the littoral animals retain far better than those of any other faunal region the recapitulative larval phases, by means of which alone the true historical origin can be recovered, that marine zoological laboratories on the coast have made so many brilliant discoveries in zoology in late years.

Mme. Miropolsky, of St. Petersburg, has announced that the sulphuric acid of commerce, and even the fuming acid, may often contain traces of mercury, which cannot be removed by distillation. Its presence can be detected by passing an electric current through the dilute acid and using a gold needle as negative electrode. After electrolysis the needle is washed, dried, and placed in a sealed tube, the upper end of which is capillary. After heating the lower end characteristic drops of mercury may be recognized with the microscope in the capillary extremity.

The Government of India has sent a geological surveyor to report on the scientific aspects of the Cashmere earthquake. A correspondent of a Calcutta journal, writing on the second day after the first great shock, says that the force of the earthquake appeared to have concentrated itself at certain spots, and there to have expended itself. These spots look as though a large amount of gaseous matter under the earth had, with the strength of dynamite, been struggling for an outlet, and had thus torn and lacerated the ground at the point where it found an exit.

As a varnish for ferrotypes the following receipe has been recommended: The solvent should be highly rectified benzole, and the most suitable resinous body is gum dammar. Crush the gum, and having placed it in a tall bottle pour in the benzole and shake up at repeated intervals until the gum is dissolved. Allow the solution to stand until it is quite clear above the sediment, then decant the liquid carefully into a clean bottle, where it is diluted with benzole until the desired consistency is attained. Good varnish can also be made by dissolving Canada balsam in benzole.

The Quercus serrata, says Mr. G. Nicholoson in the Garden, is a highly ornamental species of oak with foliage exhibiting a decided resemblance to that of the sweet chestnut of Southern Europe. It is quite hardy in this country, and from its handsome appearance and distinct habit is thoroughly worthy of more general cultivation. In Japan it is widely distributed, and forms one of the most useful timber trees. The young foliage is always more or less silky, but in the mature leaves the hairiness is sometimes confined to the axils of the principal veins on the under surface of the leaf.

Mr. J. Hull gives some sensible directions for the laying of gas pipes. He is in favor of the pipes being placed as deep as possible under the surface, for if they are near the surface the joints, however well made at first, will leak sooner or later, owing to the upheaving and settling of the ground by frosty weather and top pressure of traffic. Lead pipes are the best, because they are not so readily subject to choking through rust, etc. Any difficulty which may justly be anticipated from the bagging of lead pipes, such as will arise from their forming awkward water traps, can be obviated altogether by the placing of these pipes on a ground bed of red pine.
