THE RUSSIAN OFFICER

The aristocratic youth of Russia commence their military career in gymnasia, (schools,) where they receive a liberal education at the age of ten. Religion, languages, history, mathematics, etc., form part of the course, which lasts for seven years; but drill, fencing, gymnastics, and swimming are subjects to which considerable prominence is given.

and each school has a uniform in which the scholars invariably appear. At the end of the course they are medically inspected, and only those who are physically fit are permitted to be examined for cadetships; those who are rejected may be appointed to different offices under Government. The corps d'elite are held out as inducements to those who pass the highest standard of examination. There are thirteen or twenty of these gymnasia at present in the different portions of the empire. They feed the eight cadet schools which provide the higher class of officer. Of these the Imperal Corps of Pages is the most aristocratic, and supplies most of the officers for the Guard. The remainder are at St. Petersburg, with the exception of the Alexander School at Moscow and the Finland Cadet Corps at Helsingfors, the later being exclusively for natives of the Duchy of Finland. The Michael Artillery and Nicholas Engineer

Cadet Schools furnish, as their titles imply, the higher class of artillery and engineer officers. The pro-gymnasia of which their are eight, receive boys of any class, ten years of age, a small percentage of whom join the army direct as non-commissioned officers; the remainder supply the Junker schools, after a seven years' course. The Junker schools provide the body of officers. The course lasts for two years, and only those cadets who obtain a certain figure of merit are appointed to commissions.

The cadets, in addition to theoretical instruction, have a most practical course of study in sketching and outpost duty; they also go into camp for four months in the year, and take part in all drills and exercises. Batteries, squadrons and battalions are formed, all manned by cadets. These schools are in the different military districts and under the staff of those districts, and the instructors are taken from the best officers in

MISTAKES IN PRESS DISPATCHES.

A newspaper man of long experience got into a reminiscent mood the other night and told of several funny mistakes which he had met with in press dispatch. Said he: "In the early days of telegraphing, when the wires and operators were few, the task, unheard of before, was undertaken of sending one of President Polk's messages through to Pittsburg. The operator was heartily tired of the job long before he got through, and after-ticking off the signature, James K. Polk, he added in his joy, the words 'God and liberty,' in the ARTIFICIAL EARTHQUAKES.

Professor Milne, of Japan, has been making further and very original experiments in that country, in order to study the effects of earthquake wave-movement in different soils. As he could-not command earthquakes to come at his bidding, even in that earthquake-favored land, he endeavored to produce them artificially. This he did by subterranean explosions of dynamite, and by causing heavy weights to fall from a great height. The results recorded are most interesting, but far too complex in their nature to be detailed here. It is illustrative of the enlightenment of the Japanese administration that such Hugo, on one of his solitary rambles, found the him as the son of a lady whom he knew by sight, he heisted him on to his back, him across country to his own home. A storm came on, and it was decided back that night. A message, however, allayed the mother's anxieties, and next morning the boy was returned, together being asked how he enjoyed his unpremeditated visit, the child said, "very much, indeed! M. Hugo played at the lion-under the table. And, do you know, once when he came out of his den and growled, he pulled off the table-cloth and broke ever so many glasses. It was such fun!" It is not given to every one to have played at lions with the author of "Les Miser-

Some interesting and instructive experiments have been lately undertaken by Prof. Bauchinger, of Munich, in eference to the safety of cast-iron columns when exposed to the action of great heat. The professor, having arranged some cast and wrought-iron columns heavily weighted, exactly as they would be if supporting a building, had them gradually heated, first to three hundred degrees, next to six hundred degrees, and finally to red-heat; then suddenly cooled them by a jet of water, just as might happen when water is applied to extinguish a fire. The experiments show that the cast-iron columns, although they were bent by the red-heat and exhibited transverse cracks when the cold water was applied. yet they supported the weight resting on them, while the wrought-iron columns were bent before arriving at the state of red-heat, and were afterward so much distorted by the water that re-straightening of them was out of the question. In fact, if supporting a real building, they would have utterly collapsed under the weight they had to sustain. The professor therefore concludes, as the result of his experiments that cast-iron columns, notwithstanding cracks and bends, would continue to support the weights imposed upon them, while wrought-iron columns would not. In experimenting on pillars of stone, brick, and cement-concrete, the last was found to be the best. Cement-concrete pillars withstood the flerce action of the fire for periods varying from one to three hours; brick pillars, as well as those of clinkers set in cement mortar, displayed great resistance, while natural stone granite, limestone and sandstone-were not fire-proof. It would therefore appear that, of the several materials for pillars supporting weights, the best for fire-resisting purposes were the cast-iron

THE GREATEST BAREBACK RIDER,

Those across the forehead are found in children who are rickety or idiots. Going in the sun with the face insufficiently covered brings them on prematurely. But they are in every case normal at forty or even earlier. Vertical wrinkles between the eves come quickly to men who study, or who worry themselves. This can readily be imagined; the eyebrows contract naturally when in deep thought; grief or worry produces the same action, which, when repeated, frequently produces a fold in the skin, marking emotion undergone many times. One of the rules of the Jesuits was that the evebrows were not to be contracted; this was excellent from a moral point of view, but it was also excellent to prevent wrinkles between the eyes. Between these and the straight lines on the forehead already mentioned came the arched wrinkles of the forehead, found above the root of the nose. These often tell of long and cruel physical suffering, or of still more painful mental torture. They arise from a great development of the vertical wrinkles and the resistance of the skin above. find at last that they were beasts far inferior in intelligence to the Kentucky The crow's feet mark the passing of the fortieth year. These wrinkles are characterized by furrows, which diverge from the external angles of the eye in all directions, like the claws of the bird from which they are named. The wrinkles of the nose are less frequent and less noticeable, and appear in old age. Those which descend from the nostrils down each side of the mouth (the rides naso labiales) are perhaps the first to appear. The reason is simple. These furrows are created in laughing delight in the failure of the American, or mastication; a simple smile is sufficient to produce them, so it is not surwhom it was announced would eclipse prising the repetition of the commonest acts should soon be graven on the face. Nightly he was turning flip flops in the sawdust with a pack of mountebanks, some of whom did not know that among their number was the best rider in the world. Again, there was an unusual throng to have their sneer at the presumptious fellow, whom everybody thought had long before gone back. But the dashing American made them laugh on the other side of their mouths. The display of equestrianism which he gave threw the house into an ecstacy of delight. The way he vaulted on and off the backs of the flying steeds electrified the frigid hearts before him. Recall after recall made him famous in London town. THE PAMPAS.

The peculiar characteristics of these vast plains, which descend from the Andes to the great river basin in unbroken monotony, are the absence of rivers or water stotage, and the periodical occurrence of droughts, or "siccos," in the summer months. These conditions determine the singular character both of its flora and fauna. The soil is naturally fertile and favorable for the growth of trees, and they grow luxuriantly wherever they are protected. The eucalyptus is covering large tracts wherever it is enclosed, and willows. poplars and the fig surround every estancia when fenced in. The open plains are covered with droves of horses and cattle, and overrun by numberless wild rodents, the original tenents of the pampas. During the long periods of drought which are so great a scourge to the country, these animals are starved by thousands, destroying, in their efforts to live, every vestige of vegetation. In one of these droughts, at the time of my visit, no less than fifty thousand heads of oxen and sheep and horses perished

To open it quickly in the street, means that somebody's eye is going to be put out; to shut it, that a hat or two is to be knocked off. An unbrella carried over a woman, when the man is getting nothing but the drippings of the rain, signifies courting. When the man has the umbrella and the woman the drippings. it indicates marriage. To punch your umbrella into a person and then open it, means, "I dislike you." To swing your umbrella over your head signifies "I am making a nuisance of myself." To trail your umbrella along the footpath means that the man behind you is thirsting for your blood. To carry it at right angles under your arm signifies that an eye is to be lost by the man who follow you. To open an unbrella quickly, it is said, frightens a mad bull. To put a cotton umbrella by the side of a silk one signifies " Exchange is no robbery." To purchase an umbrella means, "I am not smart but honest.' To lend an umbrella indicates, "I am a fool," To return an umbrella meanswell, never mind what it means, nobody ever does that! To turn an umbrella in a gust of wind presages profanity. To carry your umbrella in a case signifies it is a shabby one. To carry an umbrella just high enough to tear out men's eyes and knock off men's hats, signifies "I am a woman." To press an umbrella on your friend, saying "Oh, do take it; I had much rather you would than not!' signifies lying. To give a friend half your umbrella means that both of you will get wet. To carry it from home in

WHAT BECOMES OF THE DEAD. If we follow the process of decay which takes place in the grave, it will be found that living organisms take part in the decay of the buried body, just as they do when beef or mutton is consumed by a man. In absolutely pure air, flesh does not decay, and is in fact preserved for an indefinite time. But air is very seldom absolutely pure. for in it are an infinite number of floating micro-organisms, either as spores of fully developed. On the tops of mountains these organisms, which are named bacilli, bacteria, or micrococci, are sparsely found. In the air of the country they are common, in that of towns they abound, over sewers or above churchyards they positively swarm. What are they? Are they plants or nnimals? This is a question that science has not yet decided. Chemists are inclined to consider them animals of a very low type, because animals are functions, that is, pulling organic matter to pieces, while plants perform synthetical functions, that is, building up complex organic matter out of simple materials, for example, molding organisms out of earbonic acid, water and ammonia. Now, the great function of these micro-organisms which play such an important part in the economy of the world is to convert potential energy into actual energy, or, to put it more simply, to convert passive affinities into active affinities. In organized matter there is for a time the repose of the chemical attractions of those four elements-carbon, hydrogen, nitrogen and oxygen, which constitute the great bulk of the body. The micro-organisms are engaged in the resolution of the dead body into those active forms of chemical energy-carbonic acid, water and ammonia. When these innumerable little beings have free play they are the greatest benefactors to the human race, for they are the most powerful of all scavengers, and they purify air, water, and soil so as to render them fit for living. But if you oppose their free action by restricting their access by shutting out the free circulation of air necessary to their life functions they become intensely malignant in their character, the true vampires of the dead, for they fly about planting themselves in the blood of the living and producing our well known epidemic diseases-zymotic or "filth" diseases. In the fluids of patients suffering from such diseases

James Robinson was probably the king of the trade. Joseph Wheelock, the actor, who was the boon companion of the rider once told me the incidents in the career of his friend during a visit he paid to England about fifteen years ago. Robinson had been engaged at a salary of $2,000 a week to ride in Astley's Royal Amphitheatre in London. For weeks before he arrived he was heralded as the greatest bareback equestrian of the age. To amuse himself he took over with him a team of American trotting horses and a light buggy, but neglected to bring such horses as he would need to ride. This oversight rather astonished the English managers, who thought their contract, of course, included the furnishing of horses. Robinson made light of the matter, and said he could break the animals to his liking in the fortnight intervening between his arrival and the date of his debut. There was nothing left for the managers to do than to swallow their disappointment and provide him with horses. These he relicarsed day after day at the circus with skill and assiduity, but to

The great building bearing the historical name of Astley was packed to suffoca-tion to see the performance of the reckless rider from over the sea. Robinson had however, in the short time allowed been utterly unable to train the English horses to his acts, and as a consequence was at a sad disadvantage in what he attempted. The best features of his acts, including the vaulting, he failed in. The audience hurried his exit from the ring with hisses. A more dismal flasco could not have awaited an artist. > FREQUENCY OF EARTHQUAKES. M. Perry, a French astronomer, offers a novel explanation of the frequency of the earthquakes which have produced so much disturbance on the face of our planet of late. His theory is that they are caused, like the tides, by the attraction of the sun and moon; and he argues that it is only natural to suppose that the sea of fire in the interior of the globe obeys the same influences as the ocean on its surface. M. Perry has inthan 5,400 different shocks of earthquake, and a comparison of their dates demonstrates that these phenomena are most frequent during the periods of full and new moon. He has further ascertained that the shocks have been most violent when the moon has been in the

NORWALK GAZETTE.

Tuesday, Sept. 15, 1885. Colonel Henry Allen. After many weeks of suffering and heroic battle with a fatal disease, gallant Colonel Henry Allen died at Branford Sunday morning, in the 44th year of his age. He was so well known in Norwalk, his boyhood home, that no mention of him is necessary to recall to those he called his friends, the many qualities which made him so well loved and remembered now that he is gone. His struggle for life was a hopeless one and yet, in spite of its very hopelessness, he remained cheerful and thoughtful of others to the last. By his own request the funeral will be held at St. Paul's church on Wednesday, and the remains interred in Union cemetery. The New Haven Palladium of yesterday gave the following biographical sketch of Colonel Henry Allen, who, for several days has been at the point of death, died yesterday morning at three o'clock at the residence of John W. Nichols, in Branford. The remains will be taken to Norwalk where the funeral exercises will be held. The arrangements have not been concluded, but at the recent meeting the veterans of the regiment which the de-ceased commanded voted to attend the funeral in a body, his condition at that time being such that he could not live many days.

Colonel Henry Allen was born in South Norwalk August 23, 1842. He was the son of Captain William Pastor engaged in the of Captain William Allen of Castine, Me., a well known ship master engaged in the New York and Liverpool packet service. Colonel Allen attended the common schools of Norwalk until he was thirteen years of age when he went to sea, making two voyages with his father. In 1858 he entered the office of the Norwalk Gazette and learned the printer's trade under his brother-in-law, A. H. Byington, the editor and publisher. In 1859, he went to Ohio and spent a year in the office of the Ashtabula Telegraph after which he returned to New York and was connected with the printing firm of John A. Gray & Green. On Friday, April 19, 1861, he enlisted in the Seventy-first regiment, N. Y. state militia, which was a three months regiment. He was a member of Company B, Captain B. L, Trafford, and in the first battle of Bull Run, in the brigade combattle of Bull Run, in the brigade com-manded by General Ambrose E. Burnside. manded by General Ambrose E. Burnside. This regiment was mustered out after three months' service, and Mr. Allen remained in New York until July, 1862, when he went to his old home in Norwalk and recruited Company F of the Seventeenth Connecticut Volunteers in three days. He was chosen first lieutenant, promoted to the cartaincy, and commanded the company at the battle of Chancellorsville, May 27. Captain Allen served in the first and second days' fight at Gettyshurg, and was second days' fight at Gettysburg, and was wounded in the left hand and arm by buck shot. He was granted a furlough of thirty days and afterwards rejoined his regiment at Morris Island, in Charleston harbor, S. C. His regiment was sent to Florida, these harms promoted to major for merwhere he was promoted to major for mer-itorious services. He was advanced to the colonelcy of the regiment after Colonel Noble of Bridgeport, was captured and Colonel Wilcoxson died.

Colonel Wilcoxson died.

He was in the Eleventh Corps, which stood the brunt of the fight at Chancellors-ville. At Gettysburg he was in command of four companies of his regiment which occupied an extreme position on the front. A detachment having been called for to go forward and feel the enemy, Colonel Allen and his company marched out in front of the enemy and three other companies of the enemy and three other companies of the Seventeenth followed. Colonel Allen went forward with his detachment, which advanced farther to the front than any other soldiers. He and his men were under a terrible fire and he lost thirty-fiv men. Near the spot where these men fell the memorial of the Seventeenth regiment was erected. His regiment was subsequently sent to Morris Island and particiquently sent to Morris Island and partici-pated in the siege of Fort Wagner. Col-onel Allen volunteered to lead a forlorn hope on the fortification but the attempt was never made, the rebel force having retreated. The Seventeenth, having become decimated by battle and by disease was sent to Florida to be recruited.

Before the close of the war Colonel Allen was examined and offered a captain's conmission in the regular army, which he declined. During the war Colonel Joseph R. Remington of Providence was United States marshal in Florida and there Colonel Allen met Colonel Remington's daughter, Miss Fannie Remington, whom he warried in Providence at the close of the war. Mrs. Allen is a sister of Mrs. John W. Nichols of Cherry Hill, Branford. Soon after his marriage Colonel Allen associated himself with the Mutual Life Insurance company of New York, and had since been engaged with it, except from 1876 to 1880. From '76 to '79 he was in the postoffice department at Washington and the next year he spent in Colora-do. At the time of his death he was special agent of the Mutual Life Insurance and associated with John W. through his efforts the Seventeenth Connecticut was able to unveil a monument at Gettysburg in July, 1884. The monument cost $1,800, all of which was secured through his efforts. Colonel Allen was most deservedly popular with the soldiers of Connecticnt, and especially with those of his own regiment. At a reunion of the Seventeenth held in Ridge-field August 28, 1884, Colonel Allen was presented with an elegant gold badge studded with diamonds by his old comrades. The deceased had always been an ardent republican. In the campaign of 1880 he delivered telling speeches in Trinidad, Lake City and other places in Colorado. In 1868 he was elected colonel of the United Train of Artillery, one of the crack independent companies of Provi-dence. He brought the organization to a remarkable state of efficiency. He joined Slocum Post, G. A. R. of Providence, and never transferred his membership. He also belonged to a Masonic loage in

Last fall he was the republican candidate for congressman in the Second district and ran ahead of the ticket. With one excepttion Colonel Allen was the youngest regi-mental commander in the United States

A Fire in the North Seas.

W. H. Hoyt, of the firm of Hoyt Brothers, oyster cultivators, at Fair Haven, formerly of South Norwalk, writes from England that while on a passage steamer in the North seas the vessel took fire. The passengers were taken off in small boats. The steamer was destroyed. The firm have oysters planted on the Irish and English coasts, In Ireland they call the oyster beds parks. Mr. Hoyt writes that these beds are bare at low water. He beds in a buggy. This was his first experience in this novel mode of transportation over oyster ground. In Ireland a man who owns a twenty acre privilege is considered a nabob among oystermen.

Samuel Denton. SAMUEL DENTON died in Middletown N. Y., last week, at the age of ninety-two. He was born in Wilton and more than fifty years ago established himself in business in Middletown, where he was the leading merchant for a great number of years. He was founder of the Middletown Savings Bank and for many years its president, and an upright and prominent man in church and town affairs.

Our Steamboat. The "City of Albany" seems to be crowded with passengers these pleasant September days, while she is fairly loaded down with freight. The management from Commodore Perkins, Captain Harvey and Mate Brotherton to steward, stewardess and chamber maid, are one and all of the courteous, attentive and agreeable order of public servants. Press and Pulpit. Dr. Anderson will preach a discourse next Sunday morning at the First Congre grttonal church on the timely subject of the "Relation of the Press to the Industrial and Religious Progress of to-day, as illustrated by the County Fair."

By far the most eligible and safe boats to witness the international yacht race is from the ample decks of those elegant if the road will ever be constructed .-Stratford Cor. -The price of a dozen cabinet photographs at Readman's, is still $2.50. They are just as good as if they cost $5.

The thousand of enthusiastic and patriotic Americans who crowded the boats and lined the lovely shores of the Bay yesterday were not disappointed. Their boat won the race. But the cheers that greeted the performance of the Puritan were duplicated a few minutes later, when the gallant Genesta with her amiable owner reached the finish. It was not a close race, for the American yacht took the lead and kept it from the start. At no time could it be called an exciting contest, so mild was the breeze, so calm was the surface of the Bay, and so wide was the distance between the cutter and the sloop. The satisfaction of the spectators was, of course, immense, but their emotions were never strained by the prospect of defeat

Yet no such yacht race was ever before sailed. No such contestants were ever pitted against each other. Indeed, under like conditions no other boats could have got over the course in seven hours: Outside the Hook there was a good sailing breeze and a lumpy sea; but inside the wind was light, and the water smooth. At one time in the Lower Bay the sails of the gentleman and the audience that he both boats seemed to hang lifelessly from the masts, and they drifted with the tide, yet the actual time of the Puritan was 6 hours, 6 minutes and 5 seconds; af the Genesta 6 hours, 22 minutes and 56 econds; corrected time for the cutter 6 hours, 22 minutes and 24 seconds. This gave the race to the Yankee sloop by 16 minutes and 17 seconds corrected time. What does it all prove? Some good yachtsmen say that it proves conclusively that the Genesta can only beat the Puritan in a half gale with everything reefed down and topmast housed. But this is only opinion. The Puritan has won one race; the Genesta will have two more chances probably under conditions more favorable to her-unless to-morrow's race settles it.

The annual inspection of state property n the hands of the National Guard, independent military organizations and miliary schools, will begin on Wednesday, September 16. Lieutenant Colonel B. F. Blakeslee, assistant quartermaster-general, will make the inspections. On Wednesday he will be at Stamford, Norwalk and South Norwalk. On Thursday he will visit the Weston Military Institute at Weston, and on Friday he will inspect the state property held by the Danbury military company and the Quien cadets of that place. The law requires the inspections to be made during the months of September and October. It will require nearly all the time between now and November to complete the work. Orders have been issued to have all articles so arranged that the inspector may have no unnecessary delay in examining and counting them. The clothing and equipments should be removed from the closets and most convenient manner for handling and inspection in the drill hall. The Second Heavy artillery was enlisted as the Nineteenth infantry and was mostly from Litchfield county. Its first colonel was L. W. Wessels who resigned. Elisha S. Kellogg, who next took command, was killed at Cold Harbor, Va. R. S. Mc-Kenzie then took command, and he was afterwards promoted to a position in the regular army. The last colonel was Jas. The division commander, General Russell, was killed at the battle of Winchester. The corps commander, General Sedgewick, was killed in the battle of the Wilderness. "Particular attention was paid to the artificial beds in Peconic and Gardner's Bays," said Mr. Blackford yesterday. "They are going to be one of the great sources of supply in the future. We also dredged up oysters from the recently discovered natural beds off Montauk Point. They did not prove to be anything wonderful, however.

To The Public! - A CARD.

I have recently learned from creditable authority that statements are being industriously circulated, with the evident intent of injuring my business, to the effect that in my use of the new process of embalming the dead, an exposure of the remains is usual and rendered necessary for its offectual application. Nothing can be further from the truth. I have used the system, which is now adopted by all the leading and best undertakers of this country, for nearly two years, during which time I have not used a single pound of ice for preserving the bodies of the dead. And I am the only undertaker who has not used it. But in no instance has it been necessary to expose any more of the person of the corpse than is seen after it is laid out in the casket for public view and burial service. The process of administering it is as delicate as the injection of a hypodermic needle in the wrist or hand to allay pain in the living subject. I confidently appeal to every friend of the more than a hundred subjects I have used the process upon and who have witnessed its administration, to coufirm my statement in this respect, and to aid in refuting the injurious, cruel and heartless talsehood to which I have been forced to refer.

Danbury Fair.
Attention is called to the announcement in our advertising columns of the annual fair at Danbury, which commences on Tuesday, October 6th, and continues during the week. The progress of this popular fair has been quite remarkable. Its annual attendance has gradually risen from less than 8,000 in 1871, to more than 41,000 in 1894, having increased at the rate of 6,000 per year since the opening of the New York and New England railway.

This success is owing partly to the very convenient railway access to the grounds to the low price of excursion and admission tickets, to the excellent and varied character of its exhibition, and its freedom from liquor selling, gambling and other objectionable features. Exhibits are solicited from any yart o the country. Premium lists and other information can be obtained from S. E. Hawley, secretary, Danbury, Conn.

The man was so pleased to get off so easily that he presented a bottle to the justice with the appeal, "Take suthin" udge." The justice said he didn't care if he did, and drank the liquor in the presence of the court and asked for a couple more bottles to take home to his folks. Four Waterbury poker players sat down for a quiet game the other night. After an hour or two one man got six cards by accident. He liked the looks of his hand and was unwilling to throw them up. Just then a plate of sandwiches was brought in. The man with six cards picked up a sandwich, slid his extra card between the slices of bread, and ate the bread, meat and card. He took the pot and his companion did not notice his stratagem. A lay or two ago he confessed his trick and n consequence there was a champagne

A nearly perfect skeleton of the mosasaurus was recently discovered in a quarry near Mons, in the Province of Hainaut, Belgium. It has the extraordinary length of fifty-five feet nine inches. It is to be preserved in the National History Museum, Brussels.

Many pots of preserved fruits put up by a firm of Rouen were ascertained to contain from .153 to .600 grams of salicylic acid per kilogram. But the acid had failed to prevent either fermentation in or the formation of mold on the surface of the contents of the pots.

Statistics show that in a single decade the population of New-South Wales has increased nearly thirty per cent., that the number of children receiving in-struction in the schools has more than trebled, and that the number of mills and manufactories has been quadrupled.

Efforts made by the National Fish Culture Association, England, to acclimatize the American whitefish (Coregonus albus) have met with most encouraging results. Many of those which had been hatched at South Kensington, after their transference to the ponds at Delaford, throve remarkably well.

It is stated that since carmine has been abandoned in favor of eosine reds painful spots on the skin and colies have become common among girls employed in making red artificial flowers. The eosine lakes used have a lead base, and the substitution of aluminous lakes has been recommended by a leading chemical authority.

MM. Crova and Garbe claim to have discovered a means of determining and automatically recording the exact amount of energy afored in electric accumulators and so regulating the discharge as to be able to ascertain the quantity still held in reserve at any given moment. The machines used in their experiments were of the Plante storage type as modified by Faure.

At a recent meeting of the Society of Arts, London, Mr. Parker said that petroleum had been accidentally discovered at a place near Grenoble by a chance visitor who had resided in the American petroleum districts. The whole of the land about the place has been bought and the workings for the oil are now in progress. At a depth of 139 meters the quantity of gas was increasing, and hopes were entertained that Grenoble and other towns can be lighted with it.

Experiments made under the direction of the administration of the Dutch State railways with various paints on iron plates are reported to have proved that the red lead paints resist atmospheric influences much better than those of brown-red and iron oxides. The red lead paints adhered closer to the metal, and possessed greater elasticity than the others. It was also found that better results were attained if, before the paints were applied, the plates were pickled, instead of being merely scraped and brushed. The test plates were pickled in muriatic acid, washed with water, thoroughly dried, and, while warm, thoroughly oiled.

In his instructions relating to sewer construction, Sir R. Rawfinson observes that Portland cement and lias limes make good hydraulic mortar. The proportion of cement or of lime to sand should not exceed two and a half parts of clean, sharp sand to one part, by measure, of ground Portland cement or lias lime. If clean furnace ashes or slag should be available there may be two parts of sand and one-half part of ashes or slag employed, the whole to be mixed in a revolving pan, each panful to have twenty minutes' grinding. In making mortar or concrete it is of the utmost importance to use clean materials. The water for wetting bricks and for mixing mortar or concrete ought to be free from

A vase has been found during the course of some excavations in a burying ground at Metapontum with a Greek alphabet of the Archæan colonies of South Italy. Signor Barnabei, of Rome, considers this vase to be one of the most important archæological discoveries that have been made in recent times. The vase is in perfect preservation, and its form indicates that it belongs ao a period as far back as 300 B. C. In the annular space surrounding the raised rim the letters of the entire alphabet are inscribed. After citing the opinions of various authors Signor Barnabei shows that the origin of the art of writing cannot be attributed to the Phænicians, and that that art was actually introduced into Italy by the Greeks.

LITERATURE IN THE MIDDLE AGES.

The monasteries of the Middle Ages were the conservatories of literature. Just as the frozen soil preserves in its bosom, through long, cheerless days of winter, seeds which shall afterward clothe the earth in beauty and fill the air with fragrance, so did the non-progressive institutions of the Dark Ages cherish the germs, already budded into form, which were ere long to burst the crust of superstitions ignorance, and

We of modern times cannot be too grateful to the cowled ecclesiasts of those early days, who have bequeathed to us so rich a treasure. Nearly all that is valuable in revelation, in history, in theology, in science, art and government-in fact, the great bulk of literal ture of every kind belonging to the dawn of the Christian era, has come down to us through the medium of monks and anchorites of the early

Nor has the crypt preserved for u sacred literature alone, but also a large portion of immortal writings of profane authors previous to the Christian era-The histories of Tacitus gathered dust in a monk's cell long before they were given to the world. Livy's manuscripts were found in a monk's closet, so were Aristotle's. Truly, the strongholds of the venerable fathers were keeps of which the world may well be proud since they sheltered Aristotle and Cicero, and Tacitus and Lucullus, and scores of other immortal writers, from the devastating hand of barbarism. Duty of every kind has in it the elements of pleasure, and, if we do not discover and appropriate them it is our own fault. If we study the principles of our life-work, dwell upon its details, and strive to protect it as much as possible, we shall insensibly learn to love it, and feel no sacrifice for it too great a burden.

The Mutual Life Insurance Company is in the torty-second year of its existence and since the date of its organization has accumulated and has now safely

Invested for the Sole Benefit of its Policy-holders $103.876.178.51

It has during this period

Paid to its policy-holders...... $216,094,211.28

After careful consideration, and with the view of granting to policyholders whatever benefits the experience of the company has shown to be wise and safe, a new form of policy has been prepared, known as

THE FIVE YEAR DISTRIBUTION POLICY.

Thisis a well matured plan and offers to the irsuring public many advantages. It introduces all the liberal features which its own experience or that of other institutions have shown to be popular, never forgetting that first of considerations-the absolute safety of the great fund held in trust by the managers of this institution.

A few of the features which characterize the "Five Year Distribution Policy," are:

A Paid-up Policy is guaranteed at any time after the third annua premium is paid, in accordance with the laws of the State of New York.

This company is now paying about $1,000 per day in matured claims to citizens of Connecticut and we give below a few illustrations of policies recently paid in this State where the dividends have been allowed to accumulate with the Company.

The superstition connected with the horse-shoe is supposed to have its rise in the halo which is made to surround the heads of saints in pictures. By degrees the colors of the picture faded, leaving the metal, which was shaped almost exactly like a horseshoe.

Prof. J. A. Harrison of Virginia, says that the fertility of the negro dialect is really wonderful, not only in the ingenious distortion of words, by which new and startling significance is given to common English words, but more especially in the imitation of animal utterances. It is an ear language altogether. The only wonder is how the negro could have so truly caught the swiftly uttered sounds about The results of a series of observations carried out by the Hydrographic Bureau at Washington, in order to determine the length, depth, and duration of ocean waves, have been published. The largest wave observed is said to have had a length of half a mile and to have spent itself in twenty-three seconds. During storms on the Atlantic waves sometimes extend 600 feet and last from ten to eleven seconds. The most recent volcanic eruption in the United Statas was that which half filled Feather Lake, Northern California in or about the year 1850. This locality has lately been visited by the eminent plutonist, C. E. The lava sheet is rough and jagged in the extreme, he says, but shows as yet no trace of weathering. For a space of 400 to 500 yards from the cone the trees were all killed.

They are to read no novels, to avoid all the ordinary religious books, all the twaddle, and trash, and goody-goody, milk-and-water stuff, and to confine themselves to the Bible, general orders, the hymn book, and the War Cry.
