said Mrs. Whitman, with a tremulous voice. "I hope you will not think unfavorably of my husband. It's no fault of his that the bill has not been paid. Good-morning, sir." Mrs. Whitman drew her veil over her face, and went with light steps and a light heart from the shop. The pleasure she had experienced on receiving her watch was not to be compared with that she now felt in parting with it. From the jeweler's she went to the bootmaker's and paid his bill; from thence to her milliner's, and settled for her last bonnet.

"I know you're dying to see my new dress," said Mrs. Whitman, gayly, as she drew her arm within that of her husband on his appearance that evening. "Come up stairs and let me show Come along! Don't hang back, George, as if you were afraid."

George Whitman went with his wife passively, looking more like a man on his way to receive a dreadful sentence than in expectation of a pleasant sight. His thoughts were bitter. "Shall my wife become lost to me, he said in his heart—"lost to me in a world of folly, fashion and extravagance ?" "Sitdown, George," she said, leading him to a chair. Her manner had undergone a change The brightness of her countenance had departed. She took something in a hurried way from the drawer, and catching up a footstool, placed it on the floor near him, and sitting down, leaned upon him, and looked tenderly and lovingly into his face. Then she handed him the jeweler's bill. "It is receipted to you," she said and her voice fluttered a little. "Mary! how is this?" he asked. What does it mean?"

"I returned the watch," she replied; and Mr. Rose receipted the bill. I would have paid for any damage; but he said it was uninjured, and would not take anything."

"Oh Mary," said her husband. "And this is receipted also, and this," she said, handing the other bills which she had paid. "And now, dear," she added, quickly, "how do you like my dress?" "Isn't it beautiful?" We leave to the reader's imagination excitement, became active in a new direction. "More contemplative as it followed. If, however, any fair lady, who, like Mrs. Whitman, has been drawing too heavily on her husband's slender income for silks and jewels, is at a loss to realize the scene, let her try Mary's experiment; and, our word for it, she will find a new and glad experience in life. Costly silks and jewels

"What can it be?" The Too often the gay young wife wears letter was still in her hand. "This may them as the sign of these unhappy conditions. Tranquil hearts and sunny homes are precious things; too precious to be burdened and clouded by weak vanity and love of show. Keep this in mind, oh, ye fair ones who have husbands in moderate circumstances. Do not let your pride and pleasure oppress them. Rich clothing, costly laces, and gems, are poor substitutes for smiling peace and hearts unshadowed by care. Take the lesson and live by it, rather than offer another illustration, in your own experience, of the folly we have been endeavoring to expose and rebuke. SANDAL WOOD OF JAPAN.

Passing by a shop you see cords of wood cut into small blocks about six inches long. This, you learn, is nothing short of shoe timber. These cords of wood will speedily be converted into shoes of various sizes, at prices ranging all the way from four to twenty cents. One feels quite exaltered in a pair of twenty-cent shoes. The wood is called kiri, and is very light. The clogs are still further lightened by hollowing out the centre. So, in point of fact, there is little truth in calling the shoes heavy, although they appear so to the inexperienced observer. It must be admitted, though, that they are unreasonably clumsy. Sometimes the shoes worn by the ladies are lacquered, and are fastened by a velvet band passing from either side over the lower part of the instep, and between the first and second toes. With this same kind of wood is made bureaus provided with strong iron bandles, and the whole box is adjustable in horizontal sections. one piled above another.

A LUCKY ACCIDENT.

A Secret Service detective tells the following story: It was one thing to catch a counterfeiter and another to get hold of his plates. To arrest and imprison a shover of the queer was getting rid of a dangerous man, to be sure, but yet the gang could replace him within twenty-four hours.

The engravers were the real criminals. It was better to capture one of them than to run in a half-dozen of the fellows who simply put the stuff into circulation. In 1864 there appeared a counterfeit

$10 Treasury note so well executed as to deceive several bank cashiers in St. formation we got, were printed in that city, and I was one of the three detect. ives detailed to proceed to that city and leave no stone unturned to bring the offenders to justice. We had pointers from two or three chaps who had been run down and placed behind the bars. and while we did not succeed in laying hands on the men we wanted, the trail got so hot that we decided to leave St. Louis for Chicago.

I was at the depot one morning on a little errand of my own, when a finelydressed woman about thirty years old drove up alone in a hack. I stood at her elbow when she purchased a ticket for Chicago, but it was more from socident than design. She carried a reticule in her hand, and so far as anyone could judge she was calm and collected, and knew just what to do without asking a question. She was leaving the ticketwindow when a man who was carrying a cane under his arm whirled around and the point of the stick struck her in the eye. She screamed out with pain, and after a moment fainted away. Two or three of us carried her into the ladies' sitting-room, and it happened that I picked up the reticule, which had fallen from her hand as she went down. Its weight aroused my suspicions, and while the others were surrounding this lady I got a peep into the bag, which was not locked. It contained the two plates on which that dangerous counterfeit was printed. A stranger, who seemed to be greatly excited over the accident, and who advised the lady in a whisper to get aboard the train as quickly as possible, was taken into custody, and turned out to be her husband. He was the engraver of the plates, and she was the one who was to get them to Chicago. They were taken to police headquarters in a hack, and within two hours three other arrests had been made and the gang broken up.

PRAYING IN A HURBICANE.

A very amusing story is told in connection with the recent hurricane in the west. A gentleman quite well known in Kansas City was hurrying along to reach his home, when the storm burst upon the city in all its fury. He sought refuge in a house where there were a number of ladies congregated, all of whom were frantic with terror. After a little the storm increased in fury, the house rocked and swayed before the furious winds, several windows were blown in, and it looked as though the whole building would be destroyed. The women rushed around wringing their hands, crying and bemoanin their fate, when suddenly one rushed up to the gentleman and frantically besought him to offer up a prayer. In a moment he was surrounded by the other women, who clung to him and begged him to pray. He was not by any means collected himself, and besides was not up at all in prayers, but there was no escape for him, so he prepared to comply with their request. He knelt down, but owing to the excited condition of his mind and to the fact that he had not prayed for a long time, he found himself utterly unequal to the occasion. He couldn't think of anything. He was dumb. Soon he became desperate, and without a thought as to its appropriateness he pronounced the following brief exortation, which he remembered to have formed a part of the grace his father used to say many

There is a vast difference between the boys of to-day and those of fifty years ago, more especially as regards the things which minister to comfort and pleasure. Perhaps it is only an old boy's partiality for old man's ways, but it seems to us that the hard experience of the old boys did more for them in many ways than the softer and easier lot of the new boys does for them. The former were quite as happy with the little they had as the latter are with their much; and they were taught-what the others are not-economy, industry, ingenuity, self-denial, self-reliance, the value of money, the necessity of labor. Probably the new method of training boys makes more gentlemen, but the old method makes

BATHING IN FAMOUS WATERS.

The Jordan is about the color of a new slate—a slate with the greenish-grey cloud still covering its surface. Its waters are opaque, thickened with clay, but delicious in temperature, and very refreshing to a pilgrim's palate. Is it a wonder that the river rushes like a mill race? From its source to its mouth, 136 miles in a bee line, it descends 3,000 feet. Its very name "Yarden," in Hebrew signifies descent. It twists and turns until it has trebled the natural course from fountain to sea. It rises in its might and covers the plains, and drives back the flocks and herds that feed along its banks. You cannot bridge it; often you cannot ford it. We got out of our clothes, and with the fresh air of the morning blowing upon us we passed into the cleansing flood. There was life in every drop of it. There can be no doubt about it; as a tonic the Jordan is unrivalled. While we waded cautiously near the shore, sitting down in the clay bottom to get as much of the water, with as little of the current as possible, we were startled by a crashing of underbrush and a thunder of feet. Out of the bush emerged the Russian pilgrims in the wildest excite ment. Each strove to be the first to plunge into the stream. Many of them were already half-naked, and they speedily stripped, put on a long, white garment—a kind of shroud in which it is their wish to be buried-and having immersed themselves in the Jordan, they took off the shroud rolled it carefully up, and having placed it in their luggage, returned quite naked to pass a half hour in the river.

Off for the Dead Sea! A rapid run in the fresh morning air, over the parched plains. Much of the way we followed the Jordan bank and were shel tered somewhat by the foilage that frin es it. All this time, though we could have leaped into the stream with a hop, skip, and a jump, we caught only occasional glimpses of the river as it rushed like a mill race between ts steep clay walls, buried out of sight in luxurious groves of willow. Until we were actually upon the shore of the sea, ploughing through pebbles and soft sand, we strained our eyes in vain toward the valley of death, eager to catch a glimpse of its bitter waters.

Our trail wound through a dense growth of cane, oleanders, cactus, and tamarisk. We trotted over the baked soil in Indian file, thinking of the wild boars, wolves, jackals, and leopards that prowl in the vale of Gilgal--the vale that was of old compared to the "Garden of the Lord." We saw nothing, not even a vulture, though no panorama of the Dead Sea is complete without a shadow of his wings darkening the canvas.

Out of the splendid distance, over the Salt Sea, the Sea of Asphalt, the Lake of Lot-call it by what name you will, for it bears all these-over the Eastern Sea of the old prophets, stole the withering breath of a furnace. Our horses sweltered in the heat. There was no possible shelter near the shore, for our camp trappings had already gone up into the wilderness. A dip into the gummy de elastic water was all we asked now, and in ten minutes we stood upon the sand half-blinded with the heat and glare that nearly overcame us before we were safely out of it.

The sea near the plain of the Jordan is shallow. Looking toward the south the eye is lost in the profound mists that envelop it. Six and forty miles of sky blue crystal, thirteen hundred feet in depth.the opmost wave of which is thirteen hundred eet below the level of the Mediterranean Neither fish, shells, nor coral are found here. There are fish bones on the shore, the wrecks of the Jordan. The bitter oilit is hardly worthy the name of waterstrangles everything to death, and then snits it out into the sun. Six million tons of sweet water fall into the Dead Sea daily; six million tons rise out of it, spiritualized, and float over it.

When we passed into the water we felt the weight of it before we had got knee deep. Soon we grew buoyant, and kept our balance with some difficulty. It was like trying to swim on corks that won't keep their places. A few steps further and over we went, heels up, and, to our surprise, heads up, likewise. The bath was certainly most refreshing, and the novelty of it not unlike a good-natured practical joke. When least suspicious, over we went on all fours, bobbing like bladders, and finding it extremely difficult to make much headway through the almost solid waters. The Dead Sea does for a change of medicine; it is as bitter as gall; but I would as soon think of swimming in a strong solu-ion of feather beds. When we had once more got into ou clothes and struck out for the wilderness. our skin burnt like fire, and we shed flakes of salt in such profusion you might have easily mistaken us for members of the Los family .- Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

INDIAN CATTLE DANCE.

A reporter of an Omaha paper, who not long since visited the Pine Ridge Indian Agency, thus speaks of the performances of the Indians when they receive their rations of cattle. A regular list of names of those entitled to draw beef rations is kept, although these names are such that decency compels the substitution of something equivalent in meaning. Previous to he issue, the cattle are kept twelve hours without food or water. When the time arrives a man is called off from the list, and the brave appears on horseback fully armed. A steer is turned loose and run out of the gate, and the Indian at once gives chase, runs it as far as he chooses and kills it. Then the next is called until the list is exhausted. After the animal is killed, the squaws come up with sacks, and in fifteen minutes every particle is picked up and toted off, even to the entrails and horus. vhere a fire was built, and the ceremonies opened with the monotonous music of a gong whose rather doubtful melody was supplemented by a gutteral thant, until the savage nature was worked up to the requisite pitch of enthusiasm. The "buck" dance is a wild orgie and is marked by the gradual stripping off of every article of clothing, the squaws, meantime, watching the proceedings from all sides, the fun only stopping when the drum is bursted. The "squaw" dance is somewhat similar, excepting that they retain their clothes and their motion is of the swaying sort.

At the end of the dance there is a feast of dog meat, which Mr. Heins participated in, and pronounces the dish as excellent, and only to be recognized when one gets a glimpse of the head or skeleton, which generally turns the stomach of a white man. The Indians are inveterate smokers, especially of cigarettes, but never smoke cigars. Chang Tung Wah, Chang Tu King and Lets Chee Kub, of the Chinese Legation at Washington, paid Ar Mour's chop house at the stock yards, in Chicago, a visit lately. They were visibly affected, but the reporter was not a good Chinese scholar and all he could understand was such exclamations as "Velly lemalkable!" "Catchee pig-stickee him-sousee in hot water-scalpee him —cuttee him up—puttee him in ballel, p. d. q. Melican man got hog blizness down velly fine."

COVAL FRANCE OF THE PARTY OF TH

SOUTHERN PRONUNCIATION.

The quaintness of Southern pronus-ciation is very noticeable to the Northern visitor. The most prominent peculiarity is the custom of omitting the last two letters of such words as "more," "store" "four"—which are pronounced "mo,"
"sto," "fo." "What o'clock is it?" you ask the Carolinian, and ten to one he tells you it's "half pas' fo," if that happens to be the hour. Another common Southernism is the use of "like as if," or "like" for the words "as if."
"She looked like she knew me," is a common expression, or "she looked like as if she'd die." This is common in Washington, and in the States south of Mason and Dixon's line. "Djear" pronounced as one syllable—is not a Russian word as might be supposed; it means "Do you hear?" and is addressed to servants in this form. "You, Jim! Bring in that wood diear?" "To get to go" is essentially a Georgia expression. They say, "Don't fail to come to-night," and the reply is, "I've tried to get to go three weeks now, so I recken I'll be there t'night." The expression "Do don't" is heard in Georgia and South Carolina, but rarely elsewhere. The use of "reckon" for "presume" is said to have been derived from the Yankees, as was the expression "right smart" for the word "much." In imi-tation of English, perhaps, is the cus-tom of saying "I've got it," for "I have it," and the general use of the word "got" where it is quite unnecessary.

Also English is the use of "obliged," as "I'm obliged to do it," for I "must do it;" "he is obliged to go," for "he must go." The use of delightful for delicious in such a sentence as "The ice cream is delightful, "is very common. "Pretty" is a word very often misused, for instance: "Isn't this a pretty day?" and this error is a very general one. North Carolinians say the scenary is "pretty"—meaning picturesque; the day is "pretty"—meaning fine, and that a person's manners are "pretty," meaning well-bred. "You all," or, as it is abbreviated, "y'all," usually means to or more persons, but is at all times used when only one person is meant. For instance, a caller on departing says, and will be just as honest in his belief as the Charlestonian when he vows that he never says "dis a-way" for "this way," and "dat a-way for "that way."

The hairy coat of the gorilla consists "Y'all must come to see us." She means the lady upon whom she is calling, and her husband may call. The Yankees have quite as many ridiculous figures of speech as those here men-tioned as peculiarly Southern, but this paper is not devoted to their singulari-ties of pronunciation. In the meantime every true-hearted Southerner who reads these lines will declare that he never used any of these Southernisms, of long, thick, straight, or stiffly curved bristles, and also of shorter, thinner, and curied woolly hair. On the crown of the head the hair is somewhat stiff, from 12 to 20 millimeters in length, and it becomes erect under the influence of anger. While the sides and fore part of the chin are only clothed with short. stiff hairs, they grow thickly on the forelook. The hairs which turn out-ward from the sides of the face and on the neck are 30 or more millimeters in length. On the shoulders the heir is from 180 to 150 millimeters long, hanging down on the upper arms and the back. In the middle of the upper arm the hair is from 50 to 70 millimeters General Insurance & Real Estate Agent long, growing downward as far as the bend of the elbow. At this point it generally begins to grow in an upward direction. On the back of the forearm, it again grows downward. In the middle of the forearm, on its inner side. s parting of the hairs takes place, as one portion goes in front of the radius. while the other portion turns behind the ulna. On the back of the wrist a tuft of curved hair turns upward; a middle tuft goes directly back, and the lower tuft, also curved, turns outward. On the back of the hand the hairs turn toward the fingers. On the breast and belly the hairs are shorter and grow more sparsely. On the breast their direction is, as a rule, upward and outward. On the belly they converge from the ribs toward the centre and the navel. On the thighs the hairs are shout 160 millimeters long, and here, as on the lower part of the leg, they tend outward, while on the back of the foot they grow toward the toes. On the leg the bristles are slightly curved.

This quality increases the general impression of shagginess and fleediness which is produced by the hairy cost of not grow very thick, and is not much GEORGE H. RAYMOND.

THE MELANCHOLY DOOM OF CARLOTTA.

Can any fate, asks the London Echo. be more melancholy than that which has be-majesty's cousins? Some twenty years ago society in London was charmed for a short time by the presence of one of the loveliest creatures that ever breathed. The only daughter of a wise and honored king, she had secompanied her father to see that incomparable assemblage of works of art with which Manchester astonished the world in 1857. A month or two later the Princess Charlotte became the bride, at the age of seventeen, of an accomplished prince, brother of an emperor, the Archduke Ferdinand Maximilian of Austria. and their prospect was that of a most happy, honorable, and useful life. Such it was for seven short years, when the tempter came, in the person of Louis Napoleon.

Then followed the anxieties of the monarchy of Mexico, and the wretched death, in June, 1867, of Napoleon's dupe. It is no news that the unhappy widowed princess has been insane ever since; but holds its place as in 1867.

now we learn that one of the most experienced physicians in such cases on the Continent, pronounces the Emprese Char-lotte incurable. NORWALK GAZETIF

Tuesday, July 6, 1886.

OUR WASHINGTON LETTER. WASHINGTON, July 5th, 1886. DEAR GAZETTE:- The weary round of annual appropriation bills monopolized the time of both houses of congress all last week. An "urging bill" had to be passed, however, to continue the appropriations of last year, because of the fact that the House had by its delays failed to get over to the Senate before the end of the fiscal year four of the important appropriation bills. Senator Beck, the leader on the Democratic side, denounced this dilatoriness on the part of his party friends in the House in no measured terms. He said bluntly, the record they had made was not one to be proud of. Again, later, when the legislative bill was under consideration in the Senate as it came from the House, he said, the effort displayed in the House to get up a cheap reputation for extra economy by cutting down, in repeated instances, the salaries of minor employes of the government, which were established by law, and which it was known the Senate would have to restore in the bill, was anything but creditable to the parties engaged in the scheme. It was remarked that in no instance did those Democrats in the House suggest a cutting off of their own salaries of $10,000 for a total of only about twelve months' service here, with their mileages, and $125 per session perquisite for stationery, and other "perqs" of packing boxes, books, flowers, etc. Not they. They are not that sort of demagogues.' But every day it must grow more apparent to the people who watch proceedings in Congress that the Democratic party is utterly unfit to administer

PAN ELECTRIC. Chairman Beyle has finally, by dint of the hardest kind of coaxing and dragooning, succeeded in getting five of his committee to join him in the exculpating report he considers himself to have been appointed to secure. But those who understand all the facts think the majority report really more damaging than that of the minority. Honest and fair minded Democratic congressman do not hesitate to pronounce the action of the attorneygeneral and his associates in the pan electric scheme as grossly improper and inexcusable. There certainly was nothing in the whole Credit Mobilier matter as reprehensible as this admitted scheme to

It is well known that there is no honest intent on the part of the President, or of any of his appointing subordinates, to pay the least candid respect to the civil service laws, but on the contrary a fixed and settled purpose to evade it in every possible way so as to displace competent and deserving republicans with democrats. In a speech in the Senate last week Mr.

"The President had in fifteen months nominated successors to 2,078 civil officers. There were left 1,306 upon whom time or the ax of the Presidential headsman were to do their work. He presumed that by the end of the President's term there would not be twenty Republicans left in office in the United States whom he could law to give the places to Democrats. Yet the Senate of the entire number had al-ready confirmed 1,749 and rejected but sixteen. He could not find that the President had kept or had even attempted to keep the pledges made before and after nis election. In a few localities where the Democrats need the votes of the civil service reformers, slight concessions had been made to this "sentiment" while the doctrine "to the victors belong the spoils" Of the 3,600 civil officers, of whom the President has the appointment, he had dready nominated successors for more han 2,000 and the ax was constantly falling upon the necks of worthy and faithful public servants for no other reason than that they were Republicans, and that he Certainly some of the recent changes of soldiers' widows and the humbler employes in the departments have been more brutally repulsive than the most outrageous exhibitions of the "spoils system" ever seen before this "reform" era humped its hypocritical back up before the eyes of a disgusted people. One of the conspicuous decapitations in this line was that of the nurse matron, who at the time of Garfield's murder had the care of his young children. 'After the President's death some one got this lady a place on the laborers' roll of the Pension office, but her place was wanted for a stalwart democrat from one of the rebel states and she was dismissed for the scion of disloyalty.

MORE VETOES. Several more vetoes voted old soldiers and their widows have come up from the White House. The President's pretense is that he is thus protecting the treasury. Does he reflect there would have been no vice, sufferings and wounds of such as these and that the appropriations, for the President's flower conservatories and grounds, will aggregate more than these pension bills to say nothing of $29,000 asked for new furniture for the White cheerful alacrity signed the bill for the restoration of Fitz John Porter to a $3,000 per annum place on the retired list of the army rolls, but he could not approve the bill granting $50 per month, or $600 a year to the sick and destitute widow of Gen. David Hunter, President of the Porter Court martial and the court martial that tried the assassins of Abraham Lincoln.

Randall's tariff bill is aptly called piece of legislative crazy quilt. It will not receive any favorable consideration at this session, which according to Senator Beck is sure to last through the month of

CONNECTICUT AND THE TARIFF. Several Connecticut papers seem to scan Representative Seymour's vote as if there the tariff question. Here no one doubts that Messrs. A Norwalk Invention

An ingenious and simple device is the nvention for the propulsion of canal-boats conceived and patented by Mr. Emmett R. Austin of this town, a working model of which may be seen at his foundry on Brook street. The invention, working size, will consist of a substantial box about eight feet long by five feet wide and a foot deep, the bottom being of wrought iron, and having no top. This is to be placed under the bottom of the boat, near the stern, open side down. At either end a shaft runs across with a pulley on each side over which run two endless doublejointed chains to which are attached the blades or paddles, so adjusted as to be in position to "draw" on the under motion and "cut" the water on the upper. These paddles will be operated by an engine on the deck connecting by a belt with a pulley wheel at the outside of the paddle box. The blades will be five feet long by 14 inches wide, and when driven by an engine, of 20 horse-power with a 25-horsepower boiler, Mr. Austia thinks will propel a canal boat at double the speed now obtained by the use of horses and at a cost of less than one-half the present expense. The cost of horse towage is from 25 to 35 cents per mile; whereas this contrivance, in the opinion of the inventor, would do the work for not to exceed 12 Mr. Austin first gave his attention to this subject about fifteen years ago. It is said that during Governor Tilden's term, the state of New York made an offer of $100,000 for the production of a scheme of canal boat propulsion that would excel horse power, the points of superiority to be greater speed and lower expense. This offer, however, has expired, but Mr. Austin has been assured by the canal board of trade that when he shall have demonstrated the practicability of his invention special appropriation can be secured without difficulty. He worked out his plans at odd spells, mostly nights, and in 1875 got a patent on his invention, having first attached a small model with blades only 5x21 inches to a row boat, and tried it experimentally on the creek with results of a most satisfactory nature. Since taking out his patent Mr. Austin has done comparatively nothing in the way of improvng or perfecting the article. until quite recently, when he again brought it out, and he is now preparing for another experiment with his model, to be witnessed by expert engineers and mathematicians with a view to the perfection of the details. The Austin invention has been pronounced by practical canal men to be correct in theory and likely to be successful in operation. Other methods of steam propulsion are failures when applied to canal boats. Side wheel paddles are entirely impracticable owing to the fact that there is no room for them between the sides of the boat and the walls of the canal. Stern screw propellers find their objection in their inability to move a boat backward or stop quickly as is sometimes necessary in approaching a canal "lock." They also are objectionable from the fact that the violent "swash" washes and damages the canal banks, a difficulty which Mr

Austin's machine obviates by having a steady draw in one direction, and that in exactly the centre of the ditch. Mr. Austin's plan for the production into use is, instead of forming a joint stock company, to place 1,000 subscriptions at $5.00 each, for which he will give his notes for $19. payable in five years, which per cent., subscribers be secured by mort-gages on the patents and property.

After the next experiment, which will occur soon, the work of organizing a plan for vigorous operation will be at once un-dertaken and the fate of the invention will soon afterwards be determined. Our Contemporaries. The Litchfield Enquirer seems to have been improved by its late flery experience. Since it was burned out it looks better

Our vivacious contemporary, the Winsted Press of last week, in its announcement of the attractions for the 4th, included "a public thunder shower at 4 p. m. to which all will be invited by attractive na-Pinney deduced his prophecy from past events, and got left. Now will this wickment, or will he accept it as a point, vouchsafed through the irony of fate, in support of his argument that prophets

The Waterbury American has an efficient correspondent in Winsted, who reoorts that a recent clap of thunder knockhorse "flat upon the ground," and that the horse was so frightened that "he cried like a child," and the occupants of a house near by "went to the door with a light thinking a child was crying."

The Canaan News, in its last week's ssue, announced itself "sweet sixteen" Its youth has been prosperous, and its prosperity well deserved, for it is a bright and wholesome local paper. We sincerely trust it will never die, and hope Brother Beckley will edit it forever.

The New Haven Palladium and the Journal and Courier publishers have raised the subscription price of those papers, which were lowered two years ago. They announce that experiments have proven that former prices, $5. a year and 2 cents a copy, are too low for papers of their size

A Catastrophe of the 4th. Among the 4th of July casualties we have to record, is the involuntary immersion of our esteemed fellow townsman, Mr. A. H. Camp. He had passed the day with his family and a few friends on Tavern Island, and the party were returning in a sail boat which had a small skiff in tow. Mr. Camp thought to vary the "even tenor" of the voyage by stepping from the sail boat into the skiff and being towed to shore. Accordingly he took his bearings and stepped jauntily onto the prow of the skiff-but alas for the futility of human calculations on the 4th of July ! the boat tilted, Mr. C's. arms sawed the air wildly in a vain effort to preserve his equilibrium. Despite his grand hailing sign; despite the willingness of friends powerless to save, he toppled over, and with a dull, sickening thud 175 pounds of undignified dignity disappeared from mortal view in a thousand feet of briny deep. The "even tenor" of the trip was varied. However, as truth crushed to earth rises again, so Mr. Camp, though submerged, soon floated, and willing hands applied the strong grip and quickly raised him from a sea level to a dripping perpendicant advances the suggestion that Mr. C., who has always been an adherent to the Episcopal faith, had taken this means of demonstrating his leaning towards the Baptist doctrine. This seems hardly just as he struck the water he proved his fidelity to first principles and exemplified "the ruling passion" strong in salt water, by gasping, "Good Lord deliver us!"

On Wednesday last the military guard that has been on duty at the tomb of General Grant at Riverside Park ceased its long and solemn watch and, with the sectional houses in which the soldiers have lived since last fall, returned to Governor's Island. The Sun of Wednes-

The soldiers of the Fifth Artillery are orately discussed last week, but no vote taken.

M. F. Scanlan, publisher of the Connecticut Catholic, who, a few weeks ago, received the appointment of chief in the office of the fifth auditor at Washington, has been appointed superintendent at Castle Garden, a position worth about $4000 a year.

The soldiers of the Fifth Artillery are not exactly tired of watching the grave of the dead general, but they will be glad to be restored to regular duty, which they understand better, some of them said yesterday, than the reason of the solemn tramp before the iron gate of the tomb. The key of the vault will be handed over to the park commissioners to-day, and the park police will hereafter watch the tomb, but there will be no encampment formed, and no special guard kept. and no special guard kept.

A NARROW ESCAPE. The day we clebrate began early. It The Graphic Account of a Most Wonder rose before its predecessor thought of re-ing and was kept up until four o'clock yesterday morning, when it swelled to a roar. Cannons boomed, fire crackers rattled, guns and pistols contributed to the clattering chorus and the deep, solemn tones of the church bells rang out in harmony with the general hullaballoo so essential to the proper celebration of our Nation's sacred birthday, and so soothing to the nerves of sensitive people who are unpatriotic enough to prefer sleep to panmonium. In the early forenoon the streets were crowded with our folks and their visiting cousins, all going somewhere, and by noon the streets were deserted. Everybody was off, some picnicking, others shooting, or fishing, or flirting, or etting drunk in due and ancient form, all memoration of the glorious results of our forefathers' struggles and sacrifices and sufferings. In the evening the heavens were brilliant with the shimmer of pyrotechnics. The town was painted red from one end to the other. Probably the nost elaborate display was given by Mr. Ira Cole on Union Park, which was witnessed by a large fraction of a million of people. There were rockets with sticks as long as fish poles, that wriggled their way skyward with a roar and a hiss. climbing up into the blue so high that the stars dodged and even the moon slunk down and hid behind the trees; Roman candles and pin-wheels, and flower pots and mines filled the air with colored fire balls, wriggling snakes of flame, flery balloons and showers of dazzling lights that set the heavens afire with their bright kaleidoscopie changes and elicited innu merable "o-o-h's!" and "a-a-h's!" from the tiring. The popping began Sunday even-spellbound spectators. It was a glittering wind-up for the biggest day in all America. Mention was made in our last issue of party of New York Sunday school picnickers who had the bad luck to miss the return boat from Roton Point on Saturday, June 26th, and who were provided with passage home by rail, by contributions solicited by Mr. George S. Grumman, manager of the Point. How well Mr. Grumman's kindly interest was appreciated is

Sunday school of which the walfs were New York, June 30, 1886. G. S. GRUMMAN, Esq.,

Dear Sir:—On Saturday last you were very kind to some members of our Sunday school in helping them to get home after having been left at Roton Point by the having been left at Roton Point by the excursion boat.

We are very grateful to you for your kindness and you will please accept our sincere thanks. But we want also to refund the money advanced by you and others for their expenses to New York, and if you will be kind enough to advise me of the amount, I will be glad to remit it to you.

We were very anxious about the young people, when the captain could not be prevailed upon to go back for them, and they had to be left behind, but were very happy about 8:80 o'clock, Saturday evening to find that they had fallen into such good hands and had arrived at home safe and sound.

Hoping to hear from you soon, I am, Yours very truly, S. H. Burk, Sup't. of Mount Morris Baptist S. S.

The salvation army is making progress. It is certainly getting notoriety, and notoriety is the glory of the cheap clement, of which the "army" is principally composed. During the salvation convention held in Hartford last Wednesday one of the he captains took a couple of the she captains into the back room of a saloon and ordered three lemonades, giving the wink to the waiter for a "stick" in one of them. The waiter gave the tinctured beverage to one of the sisters by mistake, which set her to singing, while the brother looked daggers at the waiter for getting the

A Winsted captain, Charles Stiles, is accused of a worse "imprudence," however, and one which bids fair to remove him for a season from the missionary field. He went to the house of a sister salvationist some days ago, but found the sister out. Her little daughter, Bessie Shepard, 11 years old, was alone in the house. According to the girl's story, "he called her into a room and attempted to take liberties with her. She resisted and he threw her down and endeavored to assault her. The girl screamed for help and after vainly endeavoring to accomplish his purpose, Stiles fled." The girl told her mother, who, being a salvationist, resolved to make no trouble for the erring brother, but other members got hold of the affair, and Stiles felt himself called upon to forgive the meeting, said the Lord had punished him sufficiently for his crime, and hoped his comrades would forgive him. This came to the ears of the authorities a complaint was made out and Stiles fled to sted captured him Wednesday. He was brought back to Winsted and placed under bonds to appear for trial this week. Sweet's Snake Story.

Mail Agent John Sweet, of the Naugatuck road, lives in Winsted. One evening recently he locked up his car and went home as usual, but, as was not usual, he observed as he approached his gate a big black snake that had crawled up on the gate post and was amusing itself with trapeze performances, contortions, etc. When Mr. Sweet stopped in amazement it stuck out it tongue, and thumbed its nose at him. Although Sweet is a temperance man, the runs to Bridgeport every day where he has several hours of leisure in the inspiring atmosphere and among the lively surroundings of that bustling city, and this fact, with the remarkable and startling nature of the snake's performance, prompted him to pinch himself to ascertain if he really "had the jims," but when a passing neighbor assured him that he too could see the sarpint, and that there was no doubt of its being a genuine snake, his alarm vanished, and, grabbing a club, he assailed the reptile vigorously and soon dispatched it. It measured over three feet long and weighed several pounds. John thinks the snake came over from Satan's Kingdom to join the salvation army and mistook his house for the bar-

Mrs. Mary Fitzgerald, the oldest Irish resident of New Haven, died at her home last Monday, aged 93 years. Her son was the first child baptized in the Catholic faith

(Special Correspondence Boston Herald.) An event has taken place in this city so remarkable in its nature that I venture o describe it in full. The principal in the affair is Mr. Jere Smith, son of Cornelius 3. Smith, of the State Insurance department at Albany, who is well known, stands very high and is in every way reliable. I have had a long and most interesting interview with him, which I transcribed and send you in his own words, trusting it may prove valuable to your

"During last year," he said, "I could not understand what was the trouble with me. I had always felt strong and hearty not understand what was the trouble with me. I had always felt strong and hearty but I gradually became aware that something was undermining me: I first began to feel drowsy and then in a day or two I would be unnaturally wide awake. Strange pains would come in different parts of my body. My head did not ache much but it usually felt heavy. I was sometimes hungry and sometimes I hated food, while my sleep was very irregular. I could not understand what it meant but thought it might pass away after a time; but it did not I don't see how I could have been so blind but I suppose I was like most people who are troubled in the same way, and thought it was nothing dangerous. After awhile I noticed a peculiar color and people who are troubled in the same way, and thought it was nothing dangerous. After awhile I noticed a peculiar color and oder about the fluids I was passing; that they were dark at times and very light at others. Finallly I began to gain flesh but I knew it was unnatural and that I was bloating. This frightened me and I consulted physicians who very kind in their attentions but did not help me in the least. My father then went with me to New York and we consulted with the eminent Dr. Keyes, who treated me for several weeks. At that time my condition was horrible. At that time my condition was horrible. I was bloated from head to foot, it was al-I was bloated from head to foot, it was almost impossible to breathe and I could not sleep. In several places on my body the skin burst open, so great was the pressure from within. The agony I endured was indescribable. Then the doctor told me my case was hopeless, that I had Bright's disease in its worst form and that I had only a few days to live."

"Fortunately I had a friend who accompanied me and would not see me die without a struggle. He did not urge, he insisted on my making one more effort, and I did so. I noticed an improvement at once; in four days the swelling greatly once; in four days the swelling greatly decreased and the pain wholly ceased. I continued to improve and am a well man to-day and owe my life to the marvellous effects of that wonderful preparation, Hunt's Remedy. I believe this is the shown by the following letter received last week by the Superintendent of the world might know what it has done for

"I know there are thousands of people troubled as I was and in just as great danger, but they do not realize it. Bright's disease is the most deceptive, the most horrible malady the world has ever known. It has no settled symptoms, but assumes every imaginable form. I had no idea it was Bright's disease that was undermining me until I began to bloat, and now that I am well and enjoying life I feel like telling everybody about my miraculous escape. Is it any wonder this town is aroused over my resurrection?"

Such is the account of probable as narrow an escape from death as was ever known. The first symptons which Mr. Smith felt were such as many others feel but do not consider worth noticing. It is plain, however, that the early indications of a dangerous disease cannot be trifled. of a dangerous disease cannot be trifled with, but must be met promptly, and by such a remedy as has been proven to be indeed a friend in time of need.

A Historical Mansion. preservation should be of interest hardly than to the entire state and nation:-It may not be generally known, nevertheless it is a fact, that the H. & C. W. railroad passenger depot at Lakeville, Ct., stands on historic ground—the identical spot where formerly stood the dwelling house of Ethan Allen, of Ticonderogo fame. Ethan Allen's well is still in existence. ence, about twenty feet south-east, of the depot, and from it you can draw as re-freshing a drink as ever graced an "old oaken bucket." Ethan Allen's furnace, in which iron for cannon was made previous to and during the Revolutionary war, stood a few yards west of the depot, on ground now occupied by the Holley Man-ufacturing company's cutlery shop.

Ex-Governor Holley, who is preparing to celebrate his eighty-second birthday on the 12th of August next, was born in the Ethan Allen house where the depot now General Montgomery, of Quebec fame, after whom Montgomery Lodge, No. 13, F. and A. M., was named, lived on Town Hill in Lakeville, about one mile south-east of the village. The old stone house, where Montgomery lived, is still standing and is owned by the Cleaveland family. The house was a magnificent one in its day, but is now falling to decay and is not oc-cupied. A small sum, however, expended on it would save this historic building on it would save this historic building from complete ruin for another generation at least. It seems a pity to lose this ancient house around which cluster so many memories, and which has been the scene of many historical incidents. Public spirited citizens should take measures to preserve this grand old building.

Montgomery Ledge was chartered in 1783 by the Grand Lodge of North America, and is older than the Grand Lodge of the State of Connecticut. It will be remembered that it celebrated its centennial membered that it celebrated its centennial June 20, 1883. Hezekiah Fitch was the first master of Montgomery Lodge, and the jewel of his office worn by him is still in possession of the Lodge. Lemuel Bulin possession of the Lodge. Lemuel Bul man, of Lime Rock, is the present master This lodge that takes Montgomery's name should take the lead in saving his old dwelling house from untimely and uncessary extinction.

Next Thursday there will be a big dele ration of pleasure seekers from Norwalk at the State temperance picnic at High Rock Grove. It is expected that at least 10,000 people will be in attendance on that day from different parts of the state. There will be a special train from South Norwalk, running through without change at $1.00 a ticket for the round trip; chil-

In the morning they gave a parade, headed by the Americus drum corps, and giving the GAZETTE three rousing cheers as they passed. If the financial results were as satisfactory to the managers, as the event was to the participants, which, from the numbers in attendance they must have been, they have reason to consider their twenty-sixth annual picnic fully up to their high standard.

A young man named Ahern of Woodbridge, N. It was some time before Drs. McGonegal and Pardee arrived, who, after much labor and difficulty, succeeded in resuscita-ting the sufferer. During the absence of the family of Mr. Henry L. Spicer at Silver Mine Saturday morning, the house was entered by a burglar at about ten o'clock, forenoon, who forced an entrance at a window and stole a black silk dress, a quantity of jewelry and Mr. S's best suit of clothes. The loss was discovered shortly afterwards, the neighborhood alarmed and vigorous search was made for the miscreant. One of the pursuers saw a man well dressed, with a light straw hat, coming across the lots with a good-sized bundle. He was traced to Winnipauk where he sold, in Powers' store, a good overcoat for $1.50, probably stolen. The fellow was a stranger, and up to latest accounts had not been captured.

The game of ball on Union Park, Friday p. m., between the Main and Wall streets, was well attended. It was amusing in many respects for after the third inning the umpire was changed regularly every inning-not on account of dissatisfaction so much as fatigue. In the 5th inning Ben Allen of the Main streets acted as scorer for a few moments and his side were soon far ahead. A new scorer was then found and as he had kept a correct score since the commencement of the game-play was proceeded with. In the 8th innings Doc. Baldwin's dog ran away with the ball and time was called while eighteen earnst men chased one poor little dog. The animal was finally caught and made to dis gorge and then the game proceeded without farther incident. Following is the score by innings:

Roton was the objective point for pleas ure seekers from all the stations on the D. & N. R. R. and elsewhere in this region yesterday. Trains ran between Norwalk and Wilson's Point every hour, and the steamer Island Belle, in connection with which the Joshua Leviness was chartered by Capt. Mills, made quick trips and obviated the difficulty of last year by transporting passengers to Roton Point without the tedious delays of heretfore. The crowds brought by the trains were handled by the boat people expeditiously and without confusion, and Capt. Mills received much deserved credit for his zeal in looking after the welfare of his patrons. The Messrs. Shepard, proprietors of the boats were also on hand to assist in making everything comfortable. The principal feature at the Point was the Danbury Bachelor Club's picnic, which brought about 1500 people from Danbury alone. The boats carried upwards of 3,000 passengers and the crowd on the grounds was estimated at 4,000. Everything went off smoothly, and greatly to the credit of Messrs. Grumman, managers of the Point. The last excursion from Wilson's Point for Danbury left at about 9.30 p. m. with two engines and eleven densely loaded

The Clarke Benefit.

The "grand benefit performance" given in the Opera House on Tuesday evening by our distinguished fellow townsman, George Clarke, the eminent actor of New York, which was tendered him by his host of admiring friends in Norwalk, was, so far as the performance was concerned, an unqualified success. Its "benefit" feature, however, was hardly so apparent. Despite the imposing array of subscribers' names appended to the invitation to the accomolished actor to appear before an aristocratic Norwalk audience in a testimonial performance, the "compliment" cost the esteemed Mr. Clarke something over $100 above the gross receipts. Possibly the gratification afforded him by the privilege of appearing with his excellent company

before a select audience of his fellow townsmen was worth the sacrifice. The cause of the failure of the attraction to draw a crowded house was undoubtedly the unseasonableness of the date and the oppressively hot weather. The house was about half filled at $1.00 a ticket, the receipts being about $210. The audience was, as predicted, composed of the refined and fashionable portion of the community. who, throughout the performance, manifested their appreciation of the entertainment in a manner that must have been gratifying to the actors. Mr. Clarke's appearance was greeted with enthusiastic applause. The play, "New Year's Eve," was presented in a faultless manner by the following cast of talent selected from the principal theatres of New York :-Lord Chilton, Earl Dushington,

Colonel Howard,
Captain Bragleigh,
Frank Percy,
Alfred Yowett,
Ballie Mr. George Clarke Mr. Tilford Arthur Phillip,
Magdalen Atherleigh,
Miss Josephine Bailey
Constance Howard,
Mrs. Howard,
Mrs. Howard,
Miss May Roberts
Miss Ada Gilman

Every feature of the performance attested the fact that the confidence of our foremost citizens in Mr. Clarke's ability to present a really high toned and enjoyable entertainment was well placed, and it is a consummation devoutly to be wished, that he may be induced at some future time. and under more favorable circumstances, to favor his admiring fellow townsmen with an opportunity to at once enjoy an other such regreshing dramatic treat, and manifest their regard by filling the house to the verge of suffocation.

The closing exercises of Mrs. Arthur

Bissell's school, to which we made allusion last week, are worthy a more extended notice, since they were not only a novelty in the way of an entertainment, but displayed a system of study that was new to many of the large audience that witnessed them. The extended German recitation by Master Karl Vogel was remarkably sustained and was readered with dignity and a touching pathos that surprised and delighted all. The recitations showed an ease in speaking that revealed the care given to the bringing out of the sense of the authors; and the compositions revealed the instruction that had been given in English prose writing. But the especial delight was in the exercise in colors by the very small people during the ribbon march of the Rainbow, and in the description of curvilinear forms by little tots who could evidently seach some of us older ones who have college and seminary diplomas. They seemed to reveal in hard terms of science, and it was the more charming because it all seemed to be fun to the midgets. Quite a number present said they saw this Kintergarten exercise for the first time, and it is certainly a very effective and amusing made of study in fundamentals. Yet the calisthenics were the charm of the forenoon. With the chairs moved back, lines were discovered on the floor, back, lines were discovered on the floor, and as these were occupied by the pupils in their pretty gymnastic drosses, there began the very poetry of motion, and that of a nature to bring into safe exercise every muscle of the body. The dumbbells played their part until the grand march, which was a very maze of circles and lines, and one wondered that children could carry them through.

The colloquy of nations was unique and beautiful in both conception and dress.

The exercises were varied by solos on the plano-forte by Miss Sadie Miller, who gave a waltz from Rubenstein and a Norwegian bridal song from Greig.

The hard and matter of fact study of our boyhood and girlhood was here seen with the dullness of routine forgotten under the sense of recreation, and yet who could say that it was less thorough. It was a pleasure to see healthy bodies and healthy minds retained under the rigor of a genuine discipline.

The New York papers are indulging in their regular summer idiocy of sending their Sunday issues by "special trains"—which, by the way, do not cost them a dollar—to New England towns. There is not a good sized fown in New England which does not print better newspapers than those printed in New York. There would be vastly more sense, for instance, in sending the Boston papers to New York by "special train" than there is in sending the New York papers to Boston in that way.

Several weeks ago a Detroiter purchased a piece of land in the west end of the county. After the purchase had been completed, he engaged a surveyor's services to see if he had been cheated. The discovery was made that a line fence was over on his land eight inches. When he went to the owner of the adjoining property with the statement, the man replied:

"Stranger, the row about that fence began twenty-eight years ago. It was then five feet over the line, and the two men fit and fit until one was killed and the other crippled. After a while it was moved a foot, and then two other owners fit and fit until the lawyers got the two farms. The fence was then moved another foot and the two new owners spent half the year in jawing each other and the other half in lawing. One died and the other got sold out on a mortgage, and when I got this farm the fence was moved over another foot. Then I fit and fit, and two years ago was kicked in the ribs and laid up for three months. During that time the fence was moved to the present line. So it's still on your land?"

"Yes." "Well, I s'pose the proper thing is a row. If you'll get out by the barn with your revolver I'll come out and hunt for you with the shotgun. If you git the drop on me don't let go, because I shall shoot to kill." It took the Detroiter some time to convince the farmer that he didn't care for eight inches of land, and that he wouldn't have the fence moved for fifty dollars, and when he had succeeded, the old man drew a long breath of relief,

"That's kind o' you, and it leaves my boys a chance to fit and fit after I'm gone. I hope you ain't comin' out here to live alongside o' me?"

"Glad on't. If you lease, git some man who'll want them other eight inches. The boys and I is lonesome for

BAPTIZIN' BY MILITARY ORDER.

Gen. Stevenson relates the following ncident of the war. He said that in his command was a very devout and energetic chaplain, exceedingly earnest in regard to the spiritual welfare of the soldiers, especially before going into "The preacher," said Gen. Stevenson, "came down to where Billy Wilson's Zouaves were encamped and had a talk with Billy. He said that his efforts had been wonderfully blessed; that he had baptized fifty men from one regiment, a hundred from another, and so on, enumerating the fruits of his religious labor, and he suggested to Billy that as they were on the eve of a battle it would be well for him (the chaplain) to talk with Billy's men.

"Billy was very proud of his command, and he turned to the chaplain and said: 'That ain't necessary; I'll save you that trouble. Adjutant, said he, calling an officer, 'you just go and make a detail of 300 men, and take 'em tized. No d-d regiment in this corps shall go ahead of Billy Wilson's Zonaves.' "And," continued the general, laughing heartily at the reminiscence, "blamed if the adjutant didn't obey Billy's orders."

WOMAN'S RIGHTS.

Silas is a country character, who means well. He tries to earn a living and "tinkers around" at odd jobs and chores and whatever he can get to do, but he works a good deal as he talkswith a painful drawl that is very suggestive of that state of natural restfulness which his ilk call "born tired." Silas came to mend a fence the other day for one of his patrons in the suburban village where he belongs, with a peculiar air of festivity about him. He had on a bright, new necktie of blue Japanese silk, and his honest face was covered by an expansive grin all the time he was receiving his orders. "You seem happy, Silas," said Mr. Blank, with some curiosity, when he had finished about the fence. "Ya-as," drawled Silas. "Ya-as, I've been a gittin' married this mornin'."

"Married! You? Why, Silas, man alive, what on earth have you gone and done that for? You can't support yourself as it is!"

"Wull," said Silns, "I ken pooty near support myself, 'n' I think it's a durn pity if she can't help some!"

THE FASTEST SHAVE ON RECORD.

"Talking about quick shaves," said s passenger on a Rock Island suburban train, "I came down to the depot the other day just four minutes before train time. I ran into that shop across the way, kept by Mrs. Whatshername, and said: 'Gimme a three-minute shave.' 'All right,' said she; 'sit down.' And I'll be darned if she didn't go over my face in good shape in just three minuter by the watch, and I got brushed off and caught my train nicely." This stirred up the story-tellers. One man had been shaved in two minutes, another is a minute and a half and

"Just wait till you hear from me," said a low-browed, tough-looking passenger. "For seven years I shaved in s shop where one barber run the razor over an average of sixty faces an hour. What do you think of that?" "Impossible," exclaimed several listeners in chorus "No, it isn't impossible," continued the low-browed man. "This barber didn't do anything but use his razor. The men lathered their own faces while waiting their turn, and a boy handed him freshly honed razors. Seven or eight slashes was a shave, and the customers wiped their own faces after leaving the chair."

"How much did the barber charge "Nothing; and he got no wages. He was the barber in Jeffersonville Prison."

FOLLOWING HIS LINE OF BUSINESS. They were both Johnny Bulls and she had him arrested for abusing her. "So you say your husband has been abusing you?" asked his Honor. What did he do to you?" "Well, e'd been hout drinkin' with a party of friends hand 'e come 'ome hand raised 'ell as usual."

"What's your business, Mr. Man?" "I'm a helocutionist, your Honor." "A helocutionist, eh! Do you take out a license?"

"Yes, sir; I do." license to be a helocutionist, I don't see why you haven't the right to raise as much hell at home as you please."

TOO FOND OF THE MEDICINE. "I see you have got that black bottle filled again!" remarked Mrs. Splatterby, the other day, as Splatterby was hunting around for the sugar. "Yes," replied Splatterby, "a little something is good to have about the house in case of sickness."

"I don't think whiskey a good medi-cine," said Mrs. Splatterby.

"And why isn't it, I would like to know?" asked Splatterby, with some degree of feeling. "Many of the most eminent physicians recommend it." "Well," said Mrs. Splatterby, with a composed cast of countenance, "if it is a good medicine, it don't agree with your system. I notice that you are never well while there is a drop of the stuff in the house."
