THE SEVEN DAYS.

June, 1887, Brings Back Their Quarter Centennary.

THE ARMY OF THE POTOMAC

Splendid Fighting on the Bloody Retreat to the James River.

After the battle of Fair Oaks, both armies rested a while. Hardly had Sumner's corps crossed to the south side of the Chickanominy, May 31, 1862, when the Chickahominy rose in mighty flood and swept all before it, Sumner's Grapevine bridge included. If the flood had come in the forenoon of that day at Fair Oaks instead of toward evening, the corps of McClellan's army south of the stream would have been Thenceforward till the eml that illustrious name stood at the head of its roll of generals. Its defeats were his, its successes his successes. At the time the war broke out, Robert E. Lee was an officer of thirty-six years standing in the United States army. He was 55 years old. His father was "Light Horse Harry Lee" of the revolution, he felt bound to the state of Virginia. There forc, June 18, 1861, the day after the Virginia Gen. Scott and resigned his place in the army. He said of his resignation: "It would have been presented at once but for the struggle it has cost me to separate invself from a service to which I have devoted all the best years of my life and all the ability I pos-Some of McClellan's ablest officers were of Lee's men were in divisions under Gens. Longstreet, A. P. Hill, D. H. Hill, Magruder Huger, Whiting and Jackson. Gen. George A. For the third time it was omised that McDowell should join him. A econd time "Stonewall" Jackson prevente this by making a feint in northern Virginia. McClellan believed that McDowell did not wish to join him as a subordinate, and was irritated thereat. He wrote Secretary Stan ton: "It ought to be distinctly understood that McDowell and his troops are completely under my control." There never was a good understanding be tween the commanding general and his su-periors at Washington. Time passed on, with sorm and rain, the commanding gen-eral execrating the weather, the authorities at Washington and Gen. McDowell, the soldiers in the meantime standing waist deep in mud and water building bridges and earth-

June 13, the famous Confederate cavalry commander, J. E. B. Stuart, made a brilliant raid, circling quite around the army of the Potomac. He dashed even into their base of supplies at White House, on the Pamunkey, and carried off a large number of horses and prisoners. It gave the Federal authorities a meomfortable shaking up in their minds.

June 25, McClellan made a move forward at Seven Pines. There was a small fight at Oak Grove, in which the Union forces were victorious, and pickets from Heintzelm

The generalship of Gens. Lee and Stone-wall Jackson at this time commands admira-tion. After finishing his movements in the Shenandoah Valley, Jackson wrote to John-ston this significant letter, dated June 6: "Should my command be required at Rich-mond, I can be at Mechanic's Run depot, on the Central railroad, the second day's march. Lee, in command when the letter was re-ceived, wrote him back that if he could leave the valley, and "could deceive the enemy," so as to make him believe he was still in the

as to make him believe he was still in the Shenandoah region, to come on.

The two generals hit on the plan of apparently sending re-enforcements from Richmond to the Shenandoah, to Jackson, giving the impression that Jackson still meditated mischief in the valley. In reality, he was to meet the re-enforcements and hurry back with them to Richmond. Lawton's and Whiting's commands were marched out of Richmond with a flourish, care being taken that the Federals should be aware of it. At Harrisburg Jackson met them June 17, and all started back to Richmond. The plan was a complete success, and it was this trick which for the third time prevented McDowell from joining the army of the Potomac.

It is to be noted that Secretary Stanton only, of all the Federal managers, was not described by the Lieuten of the porth side.

only, of all the Federal managers, was not de-ceived by the ruse, but declared that Jack-son's real movement was toward Richmond. Everybody was undeceived when, June 20, McClellan hastily telegraphed that his pickets were being driven in north of the Chicka-

Until then, day after day, it had been telegraphed to Washington, "All quiet in the army of the Potomac," So bent on having additions to his army had Mc-Clellan been that June 10 he had telegraphed Secretary Stanton, advising that a considerable force be detached from Halleck's western department and sent to him. Long before this, early in March, Mc-Clellan had been relieved from duty as commander of all the armies of the United States

SEVEN DAYS' BATTLE GROUND. McClellan and Lee had each fixed on Jun of as a day for attacking the other. Mc-Clellan meant to storm Richmond and take it by assault. • Lee intended to attack McClellan and raise the siege of Richmond. Then McClellan dismissed his plan of taking Richmond for the time, and made preparations for a secure retreat to the James. which was now in possession of the Federals from its mouth nearly to the Confederate slight skirmish had taken place June 25. Beaver Dam creek, with Ellison's Mill upon it. McCall's Pennsylvanians were stationed on the rising ground near Ellison's Mill, commanding the creek. To the right, left and dale, Griffin, Meade and Seymour, with their icsville bridge crossed the Chickahor of the 26th. Branch's Confederate brigade then strike eastward, join Stonewall Jackson, and make an attack on the Federal rear cast of Mechanicsville. Meadow bridge crossed the Chickahominy north of the one at Mechanicsville. As soon as Meadow bridge was cleared of Federals. A. P. Hill was to cross it rapidly, push still further south and then take the road to Mechanicsville. That movement would leave the Mechanicsville bridge clear. Longstreet and D. H. Hill were to cross it march hastily on and join the attacking column. Thus McClellan's army on the north bank of the Chickahominy would be involved front and rear, and could be cut to pieces. Jackson was late. The two Hills and Longstreet carried out their part of the pro gramme, attacking the Federal front as it work was with the Federal left, Jackson's

Seymour, who held the left. The Confederates had hoped to turn the Union flank and cut the left to pieces. In the midst of déadly fire they were hurled back, and the movement failed, and so the battle of Me crously attacked Richmond, he could have cut Lee's army in two. Magruder, indeed, ex-pected it. He wrote in his report: "I passed the night without sleep. The second battle of the seven days' fight ing was that at Gaines' Mill, or Cold Harbor, McClellan made ready for his right wing ocross the Chickahominy. During the night of the 26th the heavy guns and wagons were sent across to the south bank. Porter's corps, the Fifth, was drawn up at Gaines' Mills, a position several miles south of Me ville. This place was between Cold Harbor and the Chickahominy.

The Confederates had not retreated. Another attack was to be made on Fitz John Porter's corps, north of the Chickahominy, Porter's men were ranged in a semicircle drew somewhat. He kept up a half fight for two hours, waiting for Longstreet and Jack-son. About 4 o'clock Stonewall Jackson arrived, and at once engaged in battle with all his force. The Confederate forces in the fight at Gaines' Mills were the divisions of the two Hills, Longstreet, Branch, Ewell and Whiting. The battle roared and thundered from 2 o'clock till after sunset. Here was got off in safety. Continued on 4th page.

Desperate efforts were made to break Por ter's line. Regiment after regiment of Confederates were rolled against it and recoiled others came, as though they sprang from the ground. Ewell, from D. H. Hill's left, led one advance. As he came upon the ground his men met two regiments beaten backward

But then it was too late.

Porter's terribly cut up line had broken in the center at last. The soldiers who had fought so bravely and so long were rushing pellmell toward the Chickahominy, in full rout. The comrades who had come to save hem could only cover their retreat and stor the Confederate pursuit.
It was Hood's and McLaw's Texan brigades f Whiting's division, that at last broke Fitz John Porter's line. The regular and zouave regiments did not break.

In the fight of Gaines' Mill two regime one of New Jersey, the other of Pennsylvania, were surrounded and taken prisoners. With them was Brig. Gen. Reynolds. Under the protection of Meagher's and French's brigades Porter's whole corps, what vas left of it, retreated to the south bank of the Chickahominy. Some of his artillery was left behind. Thus one corps and a division of McClelthirds of the whole Confederate army aroun Richmond. In this bloody battle Porter's corps lost 6,000 men, killed, wounded and prisoners; the Confederates, 9,500. Morning found Fitz John Porter's corps across the river, and the bridges destroyed behind it. Stoneman's and Emory's cavalry, cut off from the rest of the corps, escaped by the way of White House and Yorktown, and went down the York river and up the James and rejoined the army of the Potomac.

During the Peninsula campaign the French princes, the Duc de Chartres and the Comte de Paris, received a thorough experience of American warfare. They served as aides on McClenan's staff, with the rank of captain, from September, 1861, to the close of the seven days' fighting. They were the grandsons of King Louis Philippe, and were the same two princes that have been recently exiled by the French government. With their uncle, the Prince de Joinville, they followed the fortunes of the army of the Potomac. They were brave, dashing young fellows then, full of fun and merriment. They kept up their own establishment, with their uncle, who was very deaf. Some of McClellan's happiest hours were passed in their tent, in those weary days. went down the York river and up the James

At midnight after the klisaster at Gaines
Mill McClellan sat in his tent and wrote to Secretary Stanton a dispatch, the like of which was never sent by a soldier to his superiors before: "If I save this army now, I tell you plainly that I owe no thanks to you or to any other persons in Washington. You have done your best to sacrifice this army."
Then he announced to his officers his intention Then he announced to his officers his intention to begin his march south to the James. At daybreak he was at Savage station, on the York and Richmond railroad, breaking camp and preparing for the journey to the James. By noon that day, June 28, Keyes' division had crossed White Oak swamp and taken position on the other side of it to guard the passage of ammunition and provision trains. Sumner's, Heintzelman's and part of Franklin's corps were to remain on the Richmond lin's corps were to remain on the Richmon side of White Oak swamp, to cover the move ment of retreat. It was well planned.

There was a slight action on the morning of the 28th. A heavy Confederate artillery fire forced Smith's division to abandon its position at Gold-seize the railway and war supplies. They were a day too late. The stores had been mostly removed, and such as could not be carried away were destroyed. The White House itself had been burnt. The night of the 28th of June, it suddenly dawned on Lee that McClellan had changed his base, and was in petreet to the Larges with the intenwas in retreat to the James, with the tion of drawing supplies by that way. He determined to send his army in pursuit a

He gave orders that all supplies which could not be quickly conveyed should be destroyed. Says Gen. Webb, in the "Peninsula Campaign:" "Lines of fire marked the camps and depots of the Union troops. Millions of rations, hundreds of tons of fixed ammunition and shells for the sieg guns were thus lost." June 29 McClellan's headquarters were re moved from Savage station to the James river side of White Oak swamp. The line of retreat can be seen on the map of the seven days' battle ground. McClellan, in arranging his retreat, had ordered Keyes to go forward first and take position on Malvern Hill, near the James. Porter and Franklin were to follow, and so, watching the rear and the right, they were to push on to the James. This was the morning of the 29th. McClellan himself had already ridden on toward the James, to se lect a suitable position. The heaviest supplies were already well on the way. Among them was a drove of 2,500 beef cattle, which were

NORWALK GAZETTE.

A. H. BYINGTON, Editor. J. RODEMEYER, Jr., Associate Wednesday.June 22,1887 Of Special Interest to Workingmen.

The last number of the Nineteenth Century magazine, of London, contains a very erudite and able paper on "Our Great Competitor," meaning thereby the United States of America. The article is by James Keith and he enumerates several, of what regards as advantages, we of the United States enjoy over England, and among the chief Greater encouragement of invention by the Government, lesser taxation, free and universal education, the better regulation of local affairs because of our State system, the far more prosperous condition of agriculture in a country where the farmers generally own instead of hiring their land, the smaller cost of food, and the vastly superior natural

The only advantage which he finds that England has over us is in its cheaper labor, by reason of which it is enabled to send into our markets manufactured articles, despite our heavy import duties. But that advantage will soon be lost, in his opinion, because the United States are "tending toward the adoption of free trade," when "the the price of labor in America will come

Another of the advantages possessed by us, as enumerated by Mr. Keith, is the better condition of our working men. "Though clothing, luxuries, labor and attendance are considerable dearer than in this country, [England] still the average American workingman lives 100 per cent better than the average workingman does in Great Britain, because he has higher wages and cheaper food in greater variety."

Free trade is one of the doctrines of Mr. Henry George, whose point of view is so generally English, but it is no more popular among American workingmen, than his land theory is among American farmers tilling their own soil. They prefer the higher wages which Mr. Keith says they owe to protection, and the 100 per cent better living than the English workingmen get.

Yet Mr. Keith encourages himself and the British public, by the fact that at least one great political party in America is committed to free trade, and when that is secured, as he flatters himself it is to be, then wages must of necessity come down, and we of the U. S. will not continue to be the damaging competitor of England we now are, in the manufacturing and commercial world. Here is abundant thought for the best intelligence of the American workingman.

Chandler Elected.

The threatened bolt in the New Hampshire Legislature did not show itself, and Chandler was, as he deserved to be, triumphantly elected U. S. Senator. 'The mugwump and democratic howl of "crucify him, crucify him," has filled all the land, and with no more justice than when that mad cry was uttered of old. Mr. Chandler's, only crime has been being an earnest, as well as honest republican. He was active in preventing the stealing of southern electoral votes, and the outright purchase of Oregon in the Hayes election. But neither the malignity of desperate democrats, nor the spite of those few republicans who; vote the democratic ticket, could find one single illegal or improper act that he had committed in that desperate encounter with political scoundrels. Had he been at the head of the National Committee in the last election, the great state of New York would not have been stolen from Mr. Blaine, after a majority of votes, however small, had been cast for him, as is well known to have been the fact by members of that committee and others. What the nation and the republican party needs for its best interests is a large addition to the number of just such high-minded resolute and fearless republicans as Wm. E. Chandler, and "may his tribe increase."

THE GAZETTE states, and THE RECORD copies thus: "Judge Clark Bissell was not" a judge of our courts, etc." The history of Fairfield County states: "In 1829 he was sent from Norwalk to the legislature, and at the session of that year he was elected a judge of the Supreme Court of Errors, He occupied this position till 1839, when he resigned. In 1842 and 1843, he represented the Twelfth District in the senate; and in 1847 and 1848, successively, he was elected Governor of the State. While holding this office he accepted the appointment of Kent professor of law in Yale College. As chief magistrate of the commonwealth, his sound judgment, his purity of purpose, his unaffected demeanor won the confidence and respect of all parties. As a member of our highest court of judi-cation, his probity, learning, strict impartiality, and uniform courtesy, conferred additional luster upon the dignity of the bench '

Gov. Hill has finally signed the bill for the heating of steam railroad cars. It provided that,-

It shall not be lawful for any steam railroad doing business in this state after the first day of May, 1888, to heat its passenger cars or other than mixed trains by any stove or furnace kept inside the car or suspended therefrom except it may be lawful in case of accident or other emergency to temporarily use such stove or furnace with necessary fuel, provided that in cars which have been equipped with apparatus to heat by steam, hot water, hot air from the locomotive or from a special car, the present stove may be retained to be used only when the car is standing still, and provided also, that the acts shall not apply to railroads less than 50 miles in length, nor to the use of stoves of a pattern and kind to be approved by the railroad commissioners for cooking purposes in Safety posts for bridge trusses are also provided for; the penalty is $1000 and $100 a day during continuance of the violation. After Nov. 1, 1887, guard posts shall be placed in the prolongation of the line of bridge trusses, so that in case of derailment the posts and not the bridge trusses shall receive the blow of the derailed locomotive or car. Upon application of any railroad covered by the provisions of the act the board of railroad commissioners may approve of any proposed safeguard or device to be used under the provisions of the act.

Fourth of July. A good and enjoyable, old-fashioned Fourth of July celebration might be had here, in Norwalk, if some one man would only move in the matter. An oration could be had from Dr. Anderson, the Declaration read by some of our other patriotic clergy, the band could play and our singing clubs give us patriotic songs, the old cannon could be mounted on Town House Hill and give us a national salute bells rung and a show of fireworks be had in the evening, and it all pocket time table which can be obtained need not cost over a hundred dollars. Yet no one here seems to have life enough to start the matter, and so our people will go to Stamford and Port Chester, where they do celebrate, or down to Staten Island on the City of Albany's excursion, because no attractions are offered at home. The Gap Left by Mark Hopkins. Not since Dr. Leonard Bacon has the Con. gregational church lost a leader whose death has left a greater void in her councils than that of ex-President Mark Hopkins. He belonged peculiarly to that type of intellectual patriarchs in the church, whose strong personality as well as age of service, had done so much to quell dissension and point the way of peaceful church progress. It seems strange and sad that he should have passed away just as the controversy of the two theologies is fairly joined, and he had stepped to the van of the struggle, not as a warrior, but as a peace-maker .- New Haven

Y. M. C. A. A meeting of the Y. M. C. A., of Norwalk, will be held at their new rooms, at Lockwood's Hall, this, Wednesday evening, at 8 o'clock, to perfect arrangements for the uture usefulness of the Association. Mr. Philo P. Haven, the resident secretary, is now on the ground, and is rapidly completing the detai's of the organization. The room in the Lockwood Building already presents an attractive appearance. The floor has been nicely carpeted, the walls made attractive by a neat wall paper and a wellappointed desk for the use of the Secretary placed in the room. Arrangements are being made for a choice selection of reading matter for the young men of Norwalk. Mr. Haven, the general secretary, would be pleased to know of any one who would like to give a year's subscription to some leading paper or magazine. A list of desirable papers may be had from him at any time. There will be supplied a constantly increasing list of papers and magazines, which are free to all who will call and read them, thus affording a place where an hour, or a day, or

Charles Moeler. The sad intelligence was telegraphed here, Monday evening, that Mr. Charles Moeler, a native of Wilton, and who learned the machinist's trade of Isaac Church, in Norwalk, had just been killed by electricity in Chicago. He was superintendent of an electric light plant in Chicago. Mr. S. B. Wilson visited him only a few days since. He was a widower, without children, and the step-son of Mrs. Julia A. Moeler, a well-known nurse residing here in Norwalk.

At the annual banquet of the Sons of the Revolution, held at Delmonicos, last Friday evening, a vote was taken to erect a monument to the martyr spy, Nathan Hale, in City Hall Park, as near as possible to the spot where this brave Connecticut youth, who wept because he had but one life to give to his country, was executed by the British. A vote was also taken on the choice of three models submitted by sculptors for approval. and it is a compliment that Karl Gerhard of Hartford, the artist who has just completed the Hale monument for our own state, that his cast was selected by a large majority of the vote cast. The parade of yesterday was the biggest thing New Haven has ever seen, and the memory of it will never die from the recollection of the "old inhabitant." The city, was decorated from one and to the city was decorated from one end to the other with flags and bunting. The day was ushered in with the ringing of belis and the roaring of artillery at Indian Head; the chime of bells at Indian Head rang out a concert of ten national airs. The parade column was addressed, on reaching the monument, by the orators of the day, who were eloquent and world-re-

The best looking men by all odds riding in the procession were from Norwalk. No officer better became the good looks of his uniform than Gen. Chas. Olmstead, and Majors Doty and Crowe were close seconds. Judge Asa B. Woodward and Gen. D. N. Couch were as conspicuous in their carriages as were Gens. Sherman, Sheridan or Alf. Terry. The procession was immense and the concourse of people immenser. The National Guard had an unexceptionally large representation, and the Grand Army Posts of the state were out in great numbers. Norwalk was largely represented in the line, and among the sight-seeing crowds. No veterans made a better show in line, or kept the old "tramp, tramp, tramp, the hoys are marching" step, than those from Norwalk.

With plate, foot notes and appendix it makes an svo. book of 126 pages. The cut is a view of the old church, parsonage and church yard. It indicates by disc several of the old burial plots. The foot notes explain the address, and are condensed biographies of former rectors, and brief mentions of several of the old St. Paul's and other families. The appendix contains an account of the centennary observances in July last, and the 1886 calendar of the officers of the parish. It also presents the names of the "forty-two corporators" for the parish, and the fext of 1784 petition of the parishoners to the Connecticut General Assembly. Added to these are the names of the Norwalk colonists prior to 1655, and the list of the elergy of the Episcopal church, who have been natives of the Norwalk colonial households—the Isaacs, Browns, Hoyts, Fitches, Churches, Rogerses, Boutons and Warrens.

The work is not voluminous, but its preparation has been attended with considerable expense. It is offered to the public at a charge of $2.50 per copy.

INCREASE YOUR PENSION.

Many pensioners borne on the rolls are entitled to a much higher rate of pension than they now receive. In a great majority of cases in which pension was granted for disease, the pensioner is entitled to an increase of rate, and in most cases where it was granted for wounds or injuries the disability increases each year. As time passes the disability of alliciases naturally increases. Many were at first rated too low, and it often occurs that pensioners are unjustly or erroneously reduced by examining surgeons. A pensioner is entitled to increase on a disability not set forth in his original declaration. The pension laws are more liberal than formerly, and better rating can be had for many disabilities. I make a specialty of Neglected and Rejected Claims, and if you will present me with a brief statement of your case, stating by whom it was presented, I will obtain a rehearing of your case, and, if it has merit, will procure a favorable settlement. Many claims stand rejected before the department, when it only requires a competent attorney to make them good cases. Soldiers suffering with disabilities contracted in service, who have not applied for a prension, should do so as it is their Right.

SOLDIERS OF THE MEXICAN WAR, INCREASE YOUR PENSION. SOLDIERS OF THE MEXICAN WAR, Who were in that service sixty days, for their widows if not rp-married] are entitled to $8.00 per month from January 20th, 1867.

The Federal forces grouped around Savage station in the battle of that name were Franklin's corps, with Smith and Slocum as division nanders, Sumner's corps, and McCall's division of Franklin's corps. Heintzelman had been ordered by Sumner to take position on the left, but Heintzelman simply withdrew his corps, and took no part in the battle of Savage Station. He said there was not room for so many troops, so he destroyed the stores at Savage station and started for the James. It was well known that there was no love lost between Heintzelman and Sumner. Lee had expected Jackson to take part in the action at Savage station, but Jackson had not yet been able to rebuild the Grapevine bridge, and so Magruder fought alone. At 5:30 Magruder brought his forces into action. With them was the peculiar rifled cannon which the Confederates called the "Land Merrices". rimac." It was mounted upon a car, and the front of it was covered with a sloping iron roof, from which shots rattled harmlessly off.

The sides were protected with armor plate, over which was another covering of heavy

Just before sunset Magruder's Confederates made a rush for the Union forces at Savage made a rush for the Union lores at savage station. The "Land Merrimac" was used with great effect. They were met with a heavy fire from the Union line. Then for half an hour there was nothing but roar and smoke and deadly fire. At the end of that time the Confederate lines were broken.
They gave way, fell back and left the road to White Oak swamp open for the Federal re-treat to the James. The retreat was con-tinued as soon as the wounded could be gathered up, and Sumner's and Franklin's corps went on their way, through White Oak swamp, leaving behind them Savage Station, with its huge hospital of sick and wounded and its medical stores. This was McClellan's order. It fell into the hands of Stonewall Jackson next morning, with its federates lost 4,000 men, the Federals 3,000. The Federal Gen. fought desperately. The battle occurred on Sunday.

Next morning,
June 30, Stonewall Jackson crossed the Chickahominy and followed in pursuit.

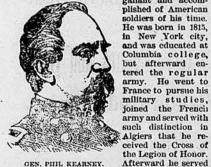

GEN. M'CALL. that fated 29th of June was at Willis' skirmish with Confederate cavalry on the Quaker road, by which McClellan was retreating. With the great number of Conright, and Jackson's men after him in the rear, this retreat of McClellan to the James June 30 McClellan had reached his new neadquarters at Malvern hill, near the James. But the army of the Potomac had by no means arrived there. It had yet more lighting before it ere it rested on the James. In this bloody retreat fighting enough was done and lives enough were sacrificed to have taken Richmond many times over if the Federal generals had only known how to do it. Three roads leading out from Richmond ntercept the Quaker road by which McClellan retreated. When Keyes began his retreat, he fortunately discovered an old road run ning parallel with the Quaker road. He struck that, and by hurrying his men along it, reached Malvern Hill speedily. A double ine of troops was thus also formed against

There was a constant danger of attack by the Confederates along the cross roads, already mentioned, leading from Richmond, namely, the Charles City, Central and New market roads. As soon as Lee discovered the line of McClellan's retreat he ordered Hill and Longstreet to recross to the south side of the Chickahominy and follow south and intercept the Federals. The Central road runs into Long Bridge road, and that crosses the Quaker road. At the intersection of the Long Bridge and Quaker roads Hill and Longstreet found part of the Federal forces. A mile further on, at the junction of the Newmarket and Quaker roads, McCall's divi-

Then took place the sixth contest of the seven days' fighting-the battle of Glendale sometimes called also the battle of Nelson's Farm-Monday, June 30. It is called, too, the battle of Frazier's Farm. In all the stubborn fighting of the Peninsula the absence of the commanding general from so many of the severest fights is matter of note. While his corps commanders, and in some cases division and brigade generals, were bearing the brunt of battle without a leader as best they might, McClellan was apt to be off somewhere else, superintending the throwing up of intrenchments or the selection was unfortunate for his fame as a military ent ahead, to Malvern Hill, to James river and the gunboats. During the bloody fight dale the general in chief knew nothing about it till late at night. He had been part of the day at his headquarters at Malvern Hill and part of the time upon a gunboat. In the battle at Glendale Gen. Philip Kearney distinguished himself. He was one of the most gallant and accom-plished of American the Legion of Honor Afterward he served in the Mexican war, and lost an arm while gal-lantly leading a charge. July 2, 1862, at the close of McClellan's Peninsula campaign, he was pro-moted to a major generalship for gallantry. He did not long live to enjoy his new honor, however. He was killed at Chantilly, Va., Sept. 1, two

There was fighting all along the line that bloody Monday, June 30. Back at White Oak Swamp bridge, on its south side, Gens. Smith, Richardson and Nagle were posted with their commands and Ayres' and Hazard's batteries. They had crossed White Oak Swamp bridge and destroyed it behird them. Jackson came up in hot pursuit, and there was desperate fighting. Hazard was mortally wounded and his battery cut to pieces, but still Jackson was held back a whole day and evening by the Federals.

Still, is the story told How well Horatius kept the bridge In the brave days of old. During the night the Federal forces dropped outhward, still heading toward Malvern fight at Glendale came off. At Willis' church, near the village, McCall's division was posted. It had suffered frightfully at Mechanicsville and Gaines' Mill, having been reduced from 10,000 to 6,000; but it was here again, fighting in the thickest of the battle at Glendale Kearney's division was at the right of McCall, as they faced southward. Sumner's corps was to the left of McCall, with Hooker's division on S er's left. Hooker and F

ney belonged to Heintzelman's corps.

Longstreet had hoped to gain the intersection of the Long Bridge road before the Federals could pass it. But he was too late.

Keyes' and Porter's corps had already passed. Heintzelman's and Sumner's men were at Glendale, with only Franklin in the rear at White Oak bridge.

Longstreet, finding so many Federals at Glendale, was obliged to wait till Magruder came up. Gen. Lee and Jefferson Davis were with Longstreet, waiting to see the battle. Gen. Couch took prominent part in the first battle of Malvern Hill, which closed the so-called seven days' fighting, July 1. He was one of the old school military men, having been born in volunteers. He resigned from the army at the close of the war. At Glendale, June 30, the first and heaviest blow of the Confederates fell with crushing force upon McCall. Col. Simmons met the attack bravely, and drove the Confederates back into the woods. McCall. Col. Simmons met the attack bravely, and drove the Confederates back into the woods. Suddenly they turned, and pursued became pursuers. There was a frightful slaughter, in which Col. irresistible fury, yelling like wild Indians. Nothing could withstand them, with men swarming under, over and around the guns, and cutting loose the horses Gen. Kearney said afterward that artillery was out of the question. Finally McCall's line broke, and he was driven to the rear, losing some of the guns. Kearney came to the rescue after McCall's defeat, and formed two lines in the woods. The Confederates charged on the guns three times during the afternoon, but were repulsed each time. Gen. McCall, in trying to rally his men, about dusk, was taken prisoner. At Richmond he saw one of his brigade generals, Reynolds, captured at Gaines' Mill.

Fresh troops coming from White Oak Swamp toward evening finished the fight and drove the Confederates back, and with the darkness the battle of Glendale ended. At another point in the Federal line, Hunt's artillery and Gen. Sykes' troops repulsed a Confederate attack, at Malvern Hill, making the third for that bloody June 30. Gen. Meade was dangerously wounded that day. The Federal line of retreat had not been cut in two, though it had been fearfully strained, and that night and the next day the last of the weary Union troops straggled into the new camp at Malvern Hill.

As the troops came in they were posted in strong positions about Malvern Hill by Gen. Barnard, chief engineer. They changed front and were faced toward Richmond. It was finally settled, however, that the perma-It was finally settled, however, that the permanent camp was not to be at Malvern Hill, but at Harrison's landing, on the river, where supplies could be better obtained and where the army could be under the protection of the gunboats. Gen. McClellan went on board the Galena to consult with Commodore Rodgers about the supplies.

According to his usual luck, the general was absent when the battle of Malvern Hill began. With the changed front, Porter's corps was on the left. Skirted in an oval around Malvern Hill were the other Federal troops: Couch's division on the right of Porter, next Kearney and Hooker, next Sedgwick and Richardson, next Smith and Slocum, then the remainder of Keyes' corps. Gen. McClellan himself had ordered this disnosition of troops.

corps. Gen. McClellan himself had ordered this disposition of troops.

The Confederates were in close pursuit. At 1 o'clock their advance was seen. They were ranged in this order: Magruder and Huger on the Confederate right, while circling after them to the left were Jackson, Ewell, Whiting and D. H. Hill. Longstreet and A. P. Hill were in the rear, too weary to fight.

The Confederates had been ordered by Gen. Lee to "charge with a yell" if the Federal line was broken. Next, they were to advance with fixed bayonets and "drive the invaders into the James." But the shouting did not come off. Gen. Armistead, who was to carry out this part of the programme, advanced to a point where he could not come on or go back, and his troops lay down upon the ground to escape the artillery fire. The Confederate plan was to take Malvern Hill by assault. But tier after tier of Union artillery rose above the heads of the Confederates and poured a deadly fire into them. Three desperate assaults were mode upon the hills in year. slaughter and confusion. Three desperate as-saults were made upon the hills in vain, With the darkness the broken Confederates drew off and gave up the fight. The day was decided by the tiers of Federal artillery among the hills. Once more, July 2, McClellan's generals be-lieved that he could have advanced and taken Richmond. But he did not. On the contrary he moved all his army to Harrison's landing, three miles down and wrete to Weshlorden for we miles down, and wrote to Washington for re-enforcements. Of the 180,000 men which had posively been furnished him he reported that he had only 50,000 left. Of Lee's 80,702 men, he lost in killed and wounded during the seven days' fighting, includ-ing Malvern Hill, 18,409. The fighting throughing Malvern Hill, 18,409. The fighting throughout was awful and bloody, without decisive result on either side. Six weeks of inaction followed.

Of the leading generals who took part in this terrible campaign few are left. The Army and

Duties of an Interviewer. No man is willing to admit that he likes eing interviewed, but most people are nevertheless pleased to be consulted by the repre sentative of any well known newspaper. At such times most people talk with pleasure, gesticulating gracefully, using animated expeople are cross next day, when what they aid appears in print without the gesture, the modulation, the smile, tender or mirthful, none of which are possessions of type, and they are apt to call the interview untruthful, or, at least, they declare it is not exactly what they said. Of course not; the reporter lly gives to his interview a dignity it does not in fact possess. He weeds out the super-fluities, clears away the verbiage, links the ogical sequence, and minds the grammar. To render the interview exactly as it was spoken would be the most crucl exercise of his power. That often men go into journal ism and stay in it and relish it after all these rebuffs is a better sign for the future of the press than the utterances of prophets. The reporters are better-more able by nature and education—to-day than they were five years ago, and the standard is still going up. The fascination of journalism is exerted as strongly as that of the footlights; her servants could not go back if they would, and the press will be noble and progressive so long as able men are willing to devote their lives to writing an exact history of to-day!—Willis Steell in Chicago Times.

It Stopped Their Boom. "Having a boom here?" asked a stranger as he put his head out of a car window at a Da kota station.

"Naw," replied the native "That's strange; thought every place had "They be, mostly," and the man sighed and leaned up against the depot. "Then why isn't this town having one?" "Why, you see, stranger, it was owin' to a little mismanagement. We platted a big Brighton beach boulevard addition over on the lake j'inin' the town, and you know the land there is just a little bit soft like. Well, the first spec'lator that come along the boys got too fast and took him down to it, and he started to walk off across the lots, and I'm blamed if he didn't stick there, and we couldn't git to him to pull him out." "How long ago did it happen?"

"He must be dead, then?" 'Oh, yes, I reckon he's dead all right enough, but before he sunk out o' sight he hollered to other buyers that we took down and warned them 'bout the place, and somehow capitalists kinder got prejudiced ag'in' our real estate and we han't havin' no boom a-tall. SCROFULOUS ULTERS.

James E. Richardson, Custom House. New Orleans, on oath says: In 1870 Scrofulous Ulcers breke out on my body until I was a mass of corruption. Everything known to the medical faculty was tried in vain. I became a mere wreck. At times could not lift my hands to my head, could not turn in bed; was in constant pain and looked upon life as a curse. No relief or cure in ten years. In 1880 I heard of the Cuticura Remedies, used them and was perfectly cured.

Sworn to before U. S. Com. J. D. Crawford.

We have been selling your Cuticura Remedies for years, and have the first complaint yet to receive from a purchaser. One of the worst cases of Scrotula I ever saw was cured by the use of five bottles of Cuticura Resolvent, Cuticura, and Cuticura Soap. The soap takes the "cake" here as

difference between this method and spot cash is that to the cash price is added the interest of the deferred payments, and surely the possession of the goods so much earlier is well worth this slight difference.

KASKINE. The Mutual Life Insurance Co., of New York.

A POWERFUL TONIC A SPECIFIC FOR MALARIA, RHEUMATISM,

NERVOUS PROSTRATION, And all Germ Diseases.

The MOST SCIENTIFIC and SUCCESSFUL BLOOD PURIFIER. Superior to quinine.
Mr. F. A. Miller, 630 East 157th street, New York, was cured by Kaskine of extreme malarial prostration after seven years suffering. He had run down from 175 pounds to 97, began on Kaskine in June, 1886, went to work in one month, regained his full weight in six months. Quinine did him no good whatever.
Mr. Gideon Thompson, the oldest and one of the most respected citizens of Bridgeport, Conn., says: "I am ninety years of age, and for the last three years have suffered from malaria and the effects of Quinine poisoning. I recently began with Kaskine, which broke up the malaria and increased my weight 22 pounds."
Mrs. T. A. Solomans, of 159 Haliday St., Jersey City, writes: My son Harry, eleven years, was cured of malaria by Kaskine, after 15 months' illness, when we had given up all hope.
Letters from the above persons, giving full details, will be sent on application.
Kaskine can be taken without any special medical advice. $1.00 per bottle. Sold by Geo. B. Plaisted, Norwalk, Conn., or sent by mail on receipt of price.

INDIGESTION & DYSPEPSIA. A POTENT REMEDY FOR

Indigestion, Acute and Atonic Dyspepsia, Chronic and Gastro-Intestinal Catarrh, Vomiting in Pregnancy, Cholera Infantum, and in convalescence from Acute Diseases.

Over 5,000 physicians have sent to us the most fattering opinions upon Digestylin as a remedy for all diseases arising from improper digestion. For 20 years we have manufactured the Digestive Ferments expressly, for PHYSICIANS' use, and for the past year DIGESTYLIN has been by them extensively prescribed, and to-day it stands without a rival as a digestive agent. It is not a secret remedy but a scientific preparation, the formula of which is plainly printed on each bottle. Its great DIGESTIVE POWER is created by a careful and proper treatment of the ferments in manufacture. It is very agreeable to the taste, and acceptable to the most delicate stomach. For the reliability of our statements we would respectfully refer to all Wholesale and Retail Druggists, and PHYSICIANS generally. Price $1.00. Sold by Druggists, or

FOR THE HOT SEASON.

A Machine Which Turns Out a Glass of Soda for a Tenth of a Cent. A portable apparatus has recently been constructed by which soda water can be reduced in cost from twelve cents to three cents a gallon. It has three cylinders, respectively a gallon. It has three cylinders, respectively for gas, water and prepared soda water. The gas cylinder, which holds twenty-two pounds of liquefied carbonic acid, is narrow, but enormously strong, being capable of resisting a pressure of 7,000 pounds to the square inch without bursting. When empty it can be taken apart from the rest of the machine and recharged where the carbonic acid gas is condensed. Charged cylinders may also be obtained from the natural gas wells on the banks of the Rhine in Europe. The middle cylinder is made like an ordinary hot water reservoir, and holds about sixty gallons of Croton water. It withstands a pressure of 150 pounds to the square inch. The third cylinder is simply an ordinary soda water drum, such as may be seen about stores where aerated waters are sold on draught.

The process of liquefying or solidifying carbonic acid gas is becoming an important industry. Many volumes of the gas are pumped into a small chamber, which is kept under a freezing mixture, until condensation and liquefaction is produced. Until lately it has been used chiefly for adding gas to lager beer and for causing intense cold in the laboratory; but fresh uses are being constantly found for it. Chemists who manufacture their own soda water prepare this gas from marble dust, which is a carbonate of lime, and sulphuric acid. The gas is then forced under pressure into a cylinder containing water, which is then rolled about until the gas and water are thoroughly mixed, when the carbonated Ils purpose is solely for the legitimate healing of a case and the relief of pain, and it does ALL it claims to It will cure entirely all ovarian or vaginal troub inflammation and Ulceration, Falling and Displacemen and consequent Spinal Weakness, and is particular adapted to the Change of Life.

ANACEL OF MERCY. water constitutes the soda water of com-merce. Many chemists have abandoned this merce. Masy chemists have abandoned this process, and get their soda water ready made from the wholesale manufacturer.

By the new process a cylinder of liquefied carbonic acid gas is capable of turning out 250 gallons of soda water. The gas passes from the first cylinder into a small chamber where the pressure which is required for the re-mainder of the manufacture is regulated. It AT All Sold by Druggists. Th MRS. is about seventy-five pounds to the square inch. The gas is then divided into two streams; one being admitted into the top of the second or water cylinder, while the other passes into a chamber through several injectors. A pipe runs from the bottom of the water cylinder to this chamber, and as the BY USING hes through the fine nozzles of the inectors it draws the water with it past a valve. the gas and water are by this time mixed, but in order that they may become com-pletely so a small turbine wheel obstructs oughly incorporated after passing through it. The third cylinder is connected with the soda water fountain in the usual way. Two gauges are added to the apparatus to show the amount of the pressures. In making soda water by this method the cost of a five cent glass is about one-tenth of a cent.—New York The war papers that are so valuable to the funny paragraphists as a source of newspaper humor have proved quite as valuable to The Century. za, and it is an undoubted fact that in the last six months their circulation has increased very nearly 35,000. It is one of the most valuable literary properties in this country, and when these interminable papers do come to an end they calculate big sales on the volume into which they are to be collected. The "Life of Lincoln" has been a big boom for them, too, and I happen to know they paid those two secretaries a sum that would take any mere literary man's breath away for the privilege of publishing.

This sort of thing must make a great man pretty uncomfortable. He can't help a feeling that his secretary, his stenographer and probably his valet has a note book in which they jot down every night what he has done probably his valet has a note book in which they jot down every night what he has done and said during the day, what clothes he wore, what he ate for dinner and all the other exciting details of his daily existence. Then when he misses a letter or paper he may be sure the secretary has filed it away to use in settling a disputed question in his memoirs. The boy who blacks his boots, the barber who shaves him and his tailor and grocer—all are shaves him and his tailor and grocer-all are treasuring reminiscences of him which they soon after his demise as it is practicable to get them into print. Mr. Beecher's experience in that line must be suggestive to other prom-inent men who are past the prime of life.—
