THE CITY. They do neither plight nor wed
In the City of the Dead,
In the city where they sleep away the hours;
But they lie, while o'er them range
Winter blight and summer change,
And a hundred happy, whisperings of flowers.
No, they neither wed nor plight,

They do neither sing nor sigh, In that Burgh of By and By, Where the streets have grasses growing cool and long; But they rest within their bed, Leaving all their thoughts unsaid, ig silence better far than sob or song No, they neither sigh nor sing, Though the robin bea-wing, Though the leaves of autumn march a million

There is only rest and peace
In the City of Surcease
From the failings and the wailings neath the sun,
And the wings of the swift years
Beat but gently o'et the blers,
Making music to the sleepers every one.
There is only peace and rest;
But to them it seemeth best,
For they lie at ease and know that life is done.

A MEMORY LESSON.

was sitting in my room in The Free Press building the other day, working hard, with my feet on the desk, when the doorway darkened and I looked up. There stood, with a hand on each of the door posts, a most disreputable looking specimen of a man. I sized him up instantly as a drunkard and made up my mind that he wanted to work me for twenty-five

In this I was wrong, as it shows how a person should be slow in coming to an opinion about an unknown fellow creature. He wanted only ten cents.

"Say, mister," he said, "you don't happen to have ten cents you could spare?"

"You have struck it the first time. I "Say, mister, I haven't had anything to eat for twenty-four hours."

"Then why in the old Harry don't you go and have dinner? They set up some good meals at the first class hotels in this 'Ah! do they? Now commercial travelers have told me that they can't get a decent meal in the city. I'll halve the difference with you. Make it five cents. "I can't keep myself in lager and so don't intend to try to supply with beer any tramp that comes along."

The fellow coolly came in and sat down.

"I see you are mistaken in my character. I have never tested a drop of ligner.

"I see you are mistaken in my character. I have never tasted a drop of liquor in my life. I was at one time in one of the best wholesale houses in this town, but was ruined by my desire for improvement. I was often warned that I was taking the wrong course, but, alas, I did not see my error until it was too late. Most of my comrades used to take a glass of beer now and then and go to the baseball games and be out nights, but I stuck to study and you see what I am."

I was a little bewildered at this. It seemed to be reversing the preconceived seemed to be reversing the preconceived ideas I had on the subject, and I weakly allowed the fellow to proceed.

"Yes, I am now an awful example of the terrible folly of taking a wrong course.

My beer drinking companions are pointed to as model citizens, while I am practically a tramp. "Well, the finishing stroke was the memory lessons. I had naturally a good memory, and my firm told me that if I learned to speak French they would send me to Paris as their agent there. I pitched into French and was advised to take memory lessons, as that was a great help in acquiring a language." "In a way—yes. You know how they strengthen the memory, I suppose?"

...No. Never heard it could be done.

Well, the first thing they do they make you swear an awful oath you will never divulge any of the methods, and then you have to sign a bond to that effect with a heavy penalty attached."

"Then if I were you I would not tell anything about it. I don't care to know." Oh, that's all right. I can plead that I have forgotten all about the oath. That is one of the benefits of the memory system. You can forget anything so easily. Yes, sir. Now if you were to lend me $5 I would very likely forget all about it before to morrow.

"It's quite true. In that way the system is very valuable. Now to show you how the thing works. My girl's 'Oh, you have a girl then?"

"Had, my dear fellow, had." "Excuse me if I have brought up sad "It don't matter in the least, I assure you. You see I can forget it right away."

"Well, about the system?"
"Oh, yes; I had forgotten. What were You said your girl's name was"-"Exactly. My girl's name was"— Here his brows wrinkled up and he said to himself audibly:
"Girl — dress — dressmaker — thread spool—cotton—cotton mill—spinner—bob-bin—bob—Robert—Roberta. That's it. Her name was Roberta-nice girl, too."

"What was her last name?"
"Her last name? Let me see." Here he fell into the same sort of an audible brown study and murmured: "Roberta— Robert-Bob-bobbin-cotton-factorymill-mills. That's it again. Mills is the name; Miss Mills. Let's see; what did I say her first name was? Girl-dress-Never mind going over that again.

You said her name was Roberta."
"That's it; Roberta—Ro"—
"Mills?" "You're right, Roberta Mills; awfully Know her?"
"No, I don't."

"Well, she's lost to me forever. don't know that it matters now. I have rarely the money to pay the ferry fare, and if I had it I might wish to spend it "I don't doubt it. How did the separa-"Memory system did it. I suppose you understand the system now?"
"I can't say that I'do."

"Well, you see, you corral any word you want to remember."
"I have heard of corralling an animal,

"Same thing, my boy, same thing. You get a word up in a corner, so that it can't escape you. That is where the system comes in so good in learning French. Now, for instance, supposing you want the French for water. You corral the two words together. Water makes you think of whisky, doesn'tt?"

"Natural combination."

"Of course, it is. Now whisky makes "Of course, it is. Now whisky makes letter to post."

"You may as well suppose something probable while you're at it. She wouldn't do it. She knows I'd forget it."

"Well, I'm just supposing a case. You remember that you have forgotten what your wife told you to do. You say wife—that reminds you of expense—expense recalls cash—cash means money—time is money. So you think of time—time makes you think of a slugging match"—

"What's that?" "Why a fight where they call "time."
The match suggests betting. There you are at 'bet." Betting is against the law, so you have 'law,' But betting is only against the letter of the law, the statute is not enforced, so you have 'letter' and then you go and post it."

"Wonderful. Still it seems to me that it would be easier to remember the letter itself than go through all that."

"So it would if you were not a victim of this system, but once that gets a hold on you you can't remember anything unless you corral the words. That's how I came to lose my situation."
"Oh! How did that happen?"

"Well, a man by the name of—of"—here he murmured a lot of words to himself and then brightening up, said:
"Smith—by the name of Smith, telephoned me to tell my boss as soon as he came in, to call him up. There is the telephone. That suggested 'ring,' ring naturally brought to my mind 'aldermen'"—
"How is that? I don't see that."
"Why the aldermen always form rings "Why the aldermen always form rings and the fellow who wants to get anything has to pay the ring."

Volume LXXXVIII. PIR. YGRUDDM A GRAHDIB "Fact. Well, ring shows that a man is a fool who expects things to be otherwise; fool suggests idiot; idiot suggests asylum; asylum, prison; a prison is a workshop; a asylum, prison; a prison is a workshop; a workshop must have a blacksmith shop; such a shop must have a smith, and there you are. Well, when the boss came in I went up to him working on the corral and said: 'Ring—alderman—fool—idiot'—but before I got to 'prison' I was kicked into the street."

"That was unfortunate. Why didn't "That was unfortunate. Why didn't you go back and explain?"
"I have often started out to do so, but I always forgot it before I could get

"And I suppose that because you lost "Oh, no. I had forgotten about that.
Glad you reminded me. No, that was a case of a good corral going wrong. It sometimes does that. I went over to see her and was working the corral for all it was worth. When got there I ran it this way: 'Girl — dress — dressmaker—sewing—thread — needle — pins—pinafore "I don't see how you get that last word."

"Why Josephine is the principal character in 'Pinafore,' you know. Well, when I met her I said, 'Hello, Josephine,' and she thought I was thinking of another girl, and then it was all day with me. You see, I should have gone on 'spools' from 'thread,' and instead of that I went on 'needles' and then, of course; when a man gets on needles you can't tell at which girl you will bring up."

"Well, I am sorry for you. I have been very much interested in your case. I never knew there were any memory sys-tems in existence. Here is half a dollar for your trouble." I am very much obliged to you, I assure you. Won't you come out and have something?"

"No, thank you. I never drink." "Oh, that's so. Neither do I. I had forgotten. You see I forget everything." "That's all right; good-by."

Paganini's Favorite Instrument. Paganini purchased many other violins, continually buying and selling fine instru-ments, but nothing could induce him to part with his "Joseph del Jesu." He kept it constantly with him, and watched it as father might watch a delicate child. Once it was sick, appearing suddenly to lose all its quality, and he took it to Vuillame, known as the most famous repairer of fildles in Europe The expert said that it must be taken apart. Paganini insisted that it must not go out of his sight, and compelled the work to be done in his own apartments. Vuillame told afterward that Paganini watched him as he put in the knife and pried the deli-cate wood apart, and started at every fresh thrust as though the knife were going into his own body. Afterward Vuillame had to take it to his shop to put it together. When the work was done Paganini gave him a gold box set with precious stones, which Paganini said was exactly the same as one he had to give to his physician, and that the doctor of his body and the doctor of his violin were entitled to equal consideration. The box was worth several hundred dollars, probably ten times as much as the original maker received for the violin when it was

While the violin was in his shop Vuilmensions down to the very unevennesses of the varnish, and from these he subse-quently made another violin that was the exact duplicate of Paganini's, but when the latter heard of it he insisted that it should be sold to him, and so no one eve had a violin like that of Paganini until dying, Paganini bequeathed the copy to Camillo Sivori, who has ever since played upon it. The original violin Paganini left ever in remembrance of him. It is kept with scrupulous care, and only the most famous artists are or have ever been allowed to touch it. Once before the honor has been accorded to Sivori. This time Leandro Campanati, the director of the Milanese quartet, shares the honor with Sivori.—New York Sun.

Hold It Over a Day. Let me tell you how I write mean letters and bitter editorials, my boy. Some time, when a inan has pitched into me and "cut me up rough," and I want to pulver-ize him, and wear his gory scalp at my girdle and hang his hide on my fence, I write the letter or editorial that is to do the business. I write so mething that will drive sleep from his eyes and peace from his soul for six weeks. Oh, I do hold him over a slow fire and roast him. Gall and aquafortis drip from my blistering pen. Then, I don't mail the letter and I don't print the editorial. There's always plenty of time to crucify a man. The vilest criminal is entitled to a little reprieve. I put the manuscript away in a drawer.

Next day I look at it. The ink is cold;
I read it over and say: "I don't know about this. There's a good deal of bludgeon and bowie knife journalism in that.
I'll hold it over a day longer." The next day
I read it again. I laugh and say: "Pshaw!"
and Lean feel way cheeks getting a little and I can feel my cheeks getting a little hot. The fact is, I am ashamed that I ever wrote it, and hope that nobody has seen it, and I have half forgotten the article or letter that filled my soul with rage. I haven't been hurt, I haven't hurt anybody, and the world goes right along, making twenty-four hours a day, as usual, and I am all the happier. Try it, my boy. Put off your bitter remarks until to-morrow. Then, when you try to say them deliberately, you'll find that you have forgotten them, and ten years later, ah! how glad you will be that you did! Be good natured, my boy. Be loving and gentle with the world, and you'll be amazed to see how dearly and tenderly the worried, tried, vexed, harassed cld world loves

During the heavy rain storm at Winon During the heavy rain storm at Winona the residence of Police Officer Bambenek was struck by lightning and the family narrowly escaped death. The bolt struck the chimney, completely demolishing it, and following the stove pipe down into the room, thence passing through the floor into the ground. The floor was badly torn up, and several pieces of furniture were broken. Mrs. Bambenek was lock in bed and was not affected except sick in bed, and was not affected except through fright. Her 3-year-old son had both legs badly burned and one shoe torn completely from his foot. Mrs. Bam-benek's young sister of 11 years stood near the path of the bolt. She was brocked senseless and both her legs hadly knocked senseless and both her legs badly burned. It was thought she was dead, but the neighbors carried her into the yard and buried her in the ground up to her neck. This method is always employed in that part of the city in case of a person struck by lightning, and the people have great faith in its withdrawing the electricity from the system. Both the injured are doing well.—St. Paul Pioneer Press. Rev. Albert C. White, of Amesbury, who enlisted in the late war when 9 years and 20 days old, is said to have been the youngest soldier of the whole army. He ften walked twenty miles a day, and it was his duty to beat the taps at night. His father was a lieutenant in the same company, and accompanied him on his rounds at night to keep him from falling asleep. He must have been handsome as well as young, as the following amusing story would show: He once met three women of whom he begged some milk. One was a beautiful southern girl about 18, who with an elderly woman supported a de-crepit colored woman. They willingly filled his three canteens and charged a kiss each for them, but White says the youngest one took a dozen.—Springfield Republican.

The very high class of art work notice able in advertising matter calls attention to the fact that almost the very best A Fruitless Expedition.

artists are now employed by advertisers (at the highest prices they command for any work) to draw pictures for circulars, pamphlets, guide books, the advertising pages of the magazines, and for the public columns of the newspapers. The artists have taken warning from the fate of a bright young fellow who allowed his sig-nature to appear too often in pictures in railway advertising books, and all these fine pieces of work they now turn out are copied without their signatures; indeed, they contract that their names shall neither appear nor be mentioned in connection with their work. Not long ago a large firm of manufacturers was so a large firm of manufacturers was so pleased with the pictures a very famous artist drew for one of the pamphlets that they scattered broadcast the statement that the head of the house offered to pay the artist his original price over again if he would sign the picture he had made, in order that they may hang in the manufacturer's parlor. The artist said he could not do so for any price within the means of the rich man.

The same companies that make use of these high grade pictures also employ excellent talent for the writing of the reading matter that accompanies the pictures, and great advertisers now have private arrangements with literary or at least semi-literary men, whose work in the back columns of the papers attracts almost as much attention as the news itself. Here, again, the high prices are paid and secrecy is maintained. One nat-ural effect of this is that which led an enterprising member of a small firm to com-plain to the writer the other day that it was no longer possible for him to adver tise in such a way as to make his calls upon the public attractive to the general eye. He said that small business firms in all the cities are now at their wits' end because they have not got the money to pay for ingenious writing or for displaying it at the proper length in the papers.

When this distinguished gentleman came to have his picture taken he didn't know exactly what he wanted; he said that he thought he preferred something that would set off his good points to the best advantage; he had not had a picture made since the days of ambrotypes, and he was determined now to get the best, no matter how much it cost. I asked him how he'd like to try a dozen of "inspira-tions," and he said: "Let 'er go, Galla-gher." So I set him down at the little table and made him rest his right elbow table and made him rest his right elbow on a copy of Shakespeare's plays, with his hand gracefully supporting his head. In his lap I placed another book, upon which I usted his left hand carelessly. "Now, look up, toward the ceiling," said I, "and try to look expectant." "What's that?" he asked. "As if you were looking for a corner in lard," says I. "Oh, I see," says he, and he rolled up his eyes beautifully. "Don't miss the diamond," says he; "I paid a heap for it and wouldn't swap it for the best herd in Texas."
"Now the result," continued the pro-"Now the result," continued the pro fessor, "was that I got a splendid negative. The pork packer's daughter was delighted. 'Oh, papa, how perfectly lovely!' she cried. 'I never saw you look half so sweet before!' Of course not. If I'd wanted to get a characteristic picture of this man I'd have to set him in a chair and make him tilt the chair back, stuff his hands into his trousers pockets, and put a chew of tobacco into his mouth. That would have been nature. But photography is art, and the truly artistic photographist is he who tries to make a unique every time."—Eugene Field in Chicago News.

Value of Eggs as Food. No honest appetite ever rejected an egg in some guise. It is nutriment in the most portable form and in the most concentrated shape. Whole nations of mankind rarely touch any other animal food. Kings eat them plain as readily as do the humble tradesmen. After the battle of Muhldorf, when Kaiser Ludwig sat at a most with his hungary and creat each with his hungary and creat each. meal with his burggrafs and great captains, he determined on a piece of luxury

"one egg to every man and two to the excellently valiant Schwepperman." Far more than fish—for it is a watery diet eggs are the scholar's fare. They contain phosphorus, which is brain food, and sulphur, which performs a variety of functions in the economy. And they are the best of nutriment for children, for in a compact form they contain everything that is necessary to the growth of the youthful frame.

Eggs are, however, not only food-they are medicine also. The white is the most efficacious of remedies for burns, and the oil extracted from the yolk is regarded by the Russians as an almost miraculous salve for cuts, bruises and scratches. A raw egg, if swallowed in time, will effec-tually detach a fish bone fastened in the throat, and the whites of eggs will render the deadly corrosive sublimate as harm-less as a dose of calomel. They strengthen the consumptive, invigorate the feeble and render the most susceptible all but proof against jaundice in its most malig-nant phase.—Eastern Farmer.

"I never get angry except at the stupidity of people, never at their wickedness."

By the way, have you ever noticed that it costs a great deal more to go back to Europe than it cost originally to come from there? Look at the number of peo-ple who on very small wages have saved up enough to leave Germany and Ireland and other places and come to America, and can't on very large wages save enough to go back. It is funny when you come to think about it that a man who came t to think about it that a man who came to California years ago at a cost of about $75, tells you today he can't afford to take a trip to the old country because it would cost him too much money. America seems to change people a good deal.—San Francisco Chronicle.

There are several fixed rules—we might lmost call them tricks-for the produc tion of vocal sounds on the stage, quisition of which is invaluable to the artist. The abrupt force, for instance, as it is technically called, which distinguishes Mme. Sara Bernhardt above all other living actresses, and which consists of an exceedingly rapid, yet distinct, utterance of the words of her most passionate speeches, beginning in a very low tone with extraordinary swiftness, and ending the phrase with a loud and vibrating cli-max, which gives an impression of inten-sity and power well calculated to startle the audience and rouse the greatest en thusiasm, is only an acquired art-a trick —and simply the result of hard practice.
She herself has said that her quarrel scene in "Frou Frou" took her many months to learn. Her method is to first read the speech as she would like to event-ually speak it on the stage, but in an undertone, as slowly as possible, pronounc ach word with a long breath before and after it. This exercise she by degrees increases in rapidity until she has almost insensibly the habit of pronouncing the sentence with what appears to the spec-tator to be a perfect whirlwind of inspired passion.—Saturday Review.

KEPT ISLANDS FOR SALE. Novel Method of Procuring a Livelihood

NORWALK, CONN., WEDNESDAY, JUNE 6, 1888.

One man in a seaport town seemed to be entirely alone in his method of procur-ing a livelihood. He discovered islands for a living. There have been explorers since the days of Columbus to these days of Heavy M Stanlay but this since the days of Columbus to these days of Henry M. Stanley, but this man was not an explorer; he did not fit out an ex-pedition or lead a party for the enrich-ment of geographical knowledge. Other men, being short of provisions, sometimes go out to a stream and cast in their lines to catch a mess for supper or breakfast.

This man, when short of funds, went out to sea and fished at an island that he might live off it until he could discover another. When he was sailing the main another. When he was saining the main it had to be a very wary and circumspect island that could elude his search. His name was Capt. Jennett. He was of French blood, but born in this country; and at the time the writer met him he claimed to have discovered ninety-nine islands, and as he claimed to have obtained a patent for each island from the United States government, he was the owner of that number of islands, scattered around the globe.

When he mentioned in a casual way that among his unconsidered trifles he had so many islands, the writer expressed his astonishment, and said that the fondest desire of his heart had always been to possess an island.

"Well, I'll give you one," said the captain, with all the free heartedness that characterizes a sailor. "I've got more than I want."

"Your kindness almost overpowers me What must I do to enter into possession?"
"All you have to do is to fit out a vessel to occupy it and ship the guano on it, of which you are to deliver to me one-third of each cargo. All my islands are guano islands. When I find another kind of island in my net I just let it go. I have too many to be bothered with any that haven't a fortune on the surface ready for shipment."

He then produced a time worn patent, issued Nov. 30, 1869, by Hamilton Fish, secretary of state, which stated that the gallant captain had discovered "the Island of Roucador, on the Muskiteer bank, in the Caribbean sea," and was entitled to the guano on it if he worked it. A list the guano on it if he worked it. A list of articles necessary to the working of it was next produced, in which the exact number of picks, shovels, planks, nails, tents, wheelbarrows, provisions, and, indeed, everything required was set down in tabulated form. The first load of guano brought to market, he declared, would pay for all of these articles, and leave a handsome profit besides.

Some of the islands he discovered were in the Pacific ocean, some lie near the

in the Pacific ocean, some lie near the banks of Newfoundland, others—the greater portion of the list—are in the Caribbean sea, and some along the coast of Brazil. They are not down on the charts, as the captain cares more about keeping them for his own profit than for occupation by the public. Several expeditions have been fitted out to search for the captain's islands and bring back some of the guano. One went out from Norfolk, which is a center for the manufacture of fertilizers, in which large quantities of guano are used. The expedition went out fully equipped, every item on the list of implements and provisions being provided. The captain was stationed at the bow to look out for the was warned off and was not allowed to take a pound of guano. The expedition cost $2,500, the captain's share of which supported him very nicely until he discovered another island and another customer.—New York Press. No one today is secure from gossip Whence comes this license? Look in their mail box morning after morning. Follow their continual intercourse with the people concerning whom they write, and draw your own conclusions as to the source of their information. Why, I distinctly recall in the office of a once leading Sunday newspaper, seeing upon the desk of the society editor, as he was called, a poor devil to whom they paid $4 a week for furnishing from four to fourteen columns of society rot, a bushel of letters at a time, and every one of ther or letters at a time, and every one of them contained either a ticket to some place of entertainment, or a bit of gossip from Mr. Toodles, or Mr. Traddles, concerning a betrothal, a wedding, a social festivity of some sort or kind, with the names of the guests, and quite likely the cost of the whole affair. Now who was to blame the $4 a week man or Mr. Traddles, who sent the information, inclosing a $5 bill to secure its publication?-Joe Howard in New York Graphic. l'eculiarities of American Eyes. The efforts of the war department to secure a field glass for the service of greater power than the one they now use has discovered the fact that the eyes of the average American are closer together than those of men in foreign countries. than those of men in foreign countries. The double glass, known as the field glass, now used is weaker than that used in the armies of Europe. It is of only from five to six powers—entirely too weak for the purpose. The only glass they can get of sufficient power is a single spy glass, which is defective in that it does not take in a broad enough field. This is not take in a broad enough field. This is a very serious defect in the equipment of the American army, but there seems to be no immediate prospect of its correction because our eyes are too close together. Some of the colored troops may be able to use a different glass, but the white Yankee soldier cannot overcome the national pecu-liarity. The best military field glass in usa is that with which the German army is supplied. An attempt was made to adopt them by the war department, but it was found that the eyes of the glasses were so far apart that they could not be used by Americans. The department is studying how to overcome this difficulty.

A Deep Distinction. Little Winifred was visiting at her aunt's and the children were very much amused by her funny speeches. "You think you are very smart, don't you?" one of the boys said teasingly. THE PAINS OF FEAR. THE EXQUISITE TORTURE ENDURED

The Night Has Its Terrors and the Day Its Dangers-Mothers Who Make Thele Motherhood a Long Drawn Agony. Peril Everywhere.

Think what that poor, dear, timid woman undergoes who nightly looks under her bed for the burglar she believes to be secreted there; who goes round the house after the servants are abed to see that all is safe, and that no ticket-of-leave man is profiting by his lib-erty to do her harm. With what a sense of dread she locks the doors of those dark, underground places into which she dares not peer. Ghosts and robbers—she turns the key on both with a quick throb and trembling hand, then beats a retreat with ever the same feeling of nameless terror, the same sensation of being followed by some vague horror, which she has not the courage to turn round and confront. Night after night this torment is re-newed, as unfaikingly as that which the old hag inflicted on the merchant Abudah. If the night has its terrors so has the day its dangers. Such a person as this in the country dies a thousand deaths in quick succession; and the one is as unnecessary as the other. A tramp loitering on the highway means robbery first and assassination after. A few harmless cows going home to be milked, and driven by a c.... are as dangerous as a stampede of the in a field, however well worn the pubway across, make that field taboo; for not each dull, slow, grazing ox, each mild eyed "milky mother of the herd," can tangle polled yearling calf, as dan-gerous as a wild bull, "man mad," and to be approached only with caution and in force? That distant, barking collie; that restless, neighing horse prancing up to the gap in the hedge, through which he thrusts his sociably inquisitive nose; that wayside encampment of traveling gypsies—all the circumstances of the country are so many causes of fear to the timid pe-destrian, beating along the public road for a constitutional, and taking no pleasure in what she sees. In a carriage she fares no better. Up hill she is sure the horses will jib; down hill they will slip and fall, or the pole will break, and then heaven have mercy on her soul! On the plain road, put to a sharp trot they will run away; indeed, they are running away. If they whisk their tails they are about to kick; if they screams at the smallest difference between them and their driver; and when they have to meet another carriage, or pass a lumbering cart, she pinches her compan ion black and blue in the spasm of her when it is centered on one's self. What is it when it spreads itself abroad and includes others—the beloved—in its meshes?

For the beloved, indeed, is no security. Every railway journey includes a smash every sea voyage is a foregone shipwreck; if an epidemic touches the outside fringes of the district, it is sure to make a leap into the home where the dear ones live. The smallest cold is bronchitis; and when the little people cough they have whoopstationed at the bow to look out for the island, and after a long cruise in the Caribbean sea it was found. The island was there, and also the guano. But so also was the British flag, and the vessel as quarter of an hour beyond her usual ing cough, no less. long drawn agony by the fears with which quarter of an hour beyond her usua time? Straightway the grave is opened and the cherished and adored lie therein stark and cold. Wild wanderings to and fro, wild surmises as to what can have happened, angry rejection of any common place explanation as to a longer walk than usual, a longer session under the trees than was calculated on, passionate tears of frantic despair, passionate outbursts of as frantic wrath; when lo! the nurse comes quietly up to the house door with her charge as fresh as a flower and as gay as a lark, and that voluntary descent into Hades proves itself as futile as it was unnecessary.

These fears accompany a mother of this uneasy kind all through life. When her boys go to school she is sure they will be mauled by the bigger ruffians of their class, maimed for life in the playground, overworked, underfed, put into damp sheets and morally corrupted. She suffers more than they from the dire necessities of learning, and wishes that there was a royal road to knowledge where her darroyal road to knowledge where her dar-lings could bowl along at railroad speed, with never a hill to climb nor a valley wherein to descend. She thinks the mas ters cruel and the curriculum inhuman, pected from such young brains and growing bodies.

All through life it is the same cry of evil. The fortunes of war take her sons here and there, and the mother frets over the possibilities of disaster, as if that poshad no side alley for escape. And when it comes to matrimony the whole thing is renewed under another name; for surely was there never the girl born who was while the finest man extant makes but a poor kind of a care taker for her daugh-ter! So she perverts the great gift of love and the divine glory of maternity into a scourge, and not a blessing, and weeps behind her mantle of self-made mourning because she has not the courage to believe nor the common sense to hope. - The Fo

Old men's eyes are like old men's memories—they are strongest for things a long way off.—George Eliot.

A sharp eyed little man attracted the writer's attention in a Chicago hotel by the close watch he maintained at the dinher table upon the jaws of the other gueets. After watching them all pretty closely for a while, he finally concentrated his attention upon an elderly gentleman BY THE TIMID WOMAN.

opposite, who ate his food with some diffi-culty. Even a casual observer could have noted that he selected only the softest articles on the bill of fare.

"That man has a bad fitting set of teeth and I'll get them," said the little man. When the elderly gentleman left the table the little one followed, and in a few moments was in conversation with him, and, as it afterward transpired, had engaged to buy his false teeth as soon as he had obtained a new set. This little man picks up a great many sets of false teeth in the course of a year.

Most persons that have a set before they reach 30 years of age are obliged to buy two more sets, at least, before they reach 60 years, and the mouth changes so that teeth that fit well and serve their weares well at first after a while do not fit and cause the wearer a great deal of discomfort. The man that makes a living in this line has acquired a great knack for discovering ill fitting teeth, and he scarcely ever fails to secure a bargain, for notwith-standing false teeth are the only immortal material about our bodies, inasmuch as they are said to be capable of resisting 4,000 degs. of heat (Fahrenheit), very few people know that they are worth anything second hand, and so the little man gets them at his own figure.

He told the writer that many sets of false teeth are found. Owners are more careless of them than is supposed, and instances are more frequent than would be imagined in which they have been left in hotel bedrooms. They have been found in railroad cars and even in horse cars, and quite frequently turn up in cabs. As the cabbles and railroad employes cannot wear other people's teeth they hunt up the buyer, and he gets the set for a few shillings. The scavengers sometimes rake up a set in an ash barrel, and sets are sometimes picked up in the streets. One set was found in a magpie's nest in Pennsylvania, and another was picked out of woman's throat by a surgeon. The patient would never wear them again, and they were sold for a song. The little man picks up a nice living by his purchases, adding to it now and then by buying a second hand wig or two. — New York Happy and Home Loving Freuch.

I assert that, to those who will look at us without bias, we must appear in our true light the happlest and most home loving people among modern nations. That provincial life in France is narrow, I have admitted, but what a very dove cote is almost every little home! If the time to be happy is now, and the way to be so is to make all those around us happy, then are we the most enviable people on earth, for we put that theory into practice. In what other land will you find so many households whose members are of three or four generations? Parents and children cling together to the exclusion of all the world outside. Not a boy is brought up with a view to emigra tion. The thought of the young birds leaving the nest is dreaded. I know girls who have refused splendid offers of mar-riage and preferred humbler ones because near papa and mamma, and parents who have put themselves to any amount of in convenience to make room for daughters in-law rather than part with their sons.

A French father would think you mad if you told him that you left your family at 7 in the morning to return to them a 7 or 8 in the evening, as so many Americans do; and that on Sunday, your only day at home, you were too exhausted to enjoy your children's prattle or to take a walk with your wife. The little French provincial tradesman, who locks his shop door while he spends a joyful hour at dinner with his family, has come nearer solving the problem of happiness than the Anglo-Saxon jockey in the race for ducats.

—Max O'Rell in The Cosmopolitan. Hungry Fire Department Horses.

Fire department horses in the big cities are, as a rule, ravenous feeders. There are certain hours of the day when they are fed, and the horse soon con the feeding hours as well as the hostlers. As early as 5:30 o'clock in the morning is oats feeding time. If the feeder happens to be a little slow in getting down stairs, if he is only two minutes late, there is the greatest tramping of hoofs on the wooden floors, kicking the sides of the stalls and the wickedest champing of bridle bits ever seen or heard in a stable. This sort of racket is kept up continuously, too, until the oats are divided out for the meal. The moment they commence feeding, if an alarm comes in, every horse in the place under the swinging harness, and will impatiently dance around anxious to get off for a run. The fire department horse is, I believe, the only one that wil leave his oats voluntarily to go to work. The best hostlers in the department always take the bits out of the mouths of the horses at feeding time. This is done to give the animal a chance to thoroughly masticate his food. The horse that eats with the bit in his mouth soon leses his appetite from indigestion, and will not last long in the department.—Fire Chief in Globe-Democrat.

EDITORIAL LETTER WASHINGTON, June 4, 1888. DEAR GAZETTE:-In the Senate the special interest last week, centered in Senator Frye's masterly speech, in opposition to the fisheries treaty, and in the bill prepared by Generals Hawley and Manderson elevating gallant Phil Sheridan, ere he should pass away, to the place of General of the Armies, the office previously held only by Washington, Grant, and Sherman. This latter compliment to a dying hero was an act in which the Nation's representatives have honored themselves as greatly as they honored Sheridan. In the spirited fisheries debate, led by Senator Frye, it was clearly revealed why the Democratic senators, who had all along been clamoring for open Executive sessions, changed front so suddenly. They felt, and have owned themselves, at a serious political disadvantage in regard to this fishery treaty. Their President and Secretary of State have connived, as Frye charges, at the acceptance by this country of one of the most humiliating and disgraceful surrenders of the people's rights ever assented to in the history of this Government, and the Democratic senators now see the fatal error their administration have have been guilty of. They say that the Republican senators from New England have been familiar with this fisheries subject in all its bearings all their lives, while senators from other sections have felt called upon to study it only in a general way. The Democrats appreciating that the Republicans are better equipped for the contest, did their best to prevent open sessions. They say that Senators Frye and Hale, Edmunds and Morrill, Hoar and Dawes, and others have been compelled from their entrance into public life to keep pace with the fisheries question, because their constituents have been and are still directly interested in it. The controversy on the Democratic side will be chiefly conducted by Senators Morgan, Harris, Gray, Beck, Voorhees, McPherson and Harris, who will do the best they can, with their self consciousness that they have been put on indefensible ground by their own administration. Among the rattling hot shots poured into the apologists for this disgraceful treaty,

Frye related the following: One more ease. I am not citing these cases because I think the senators on the other side have never heard of them. I am citing them because I wish the American people to weigh your treaty with the threats and the outrageous acts which produced it. Take the Marian Grimes. in October the American vessel Marian Grimes, of Gloucester, Mass., Capt. Landry, put into Port Shelburne in a terrible gale, anchored in the outer port, anchored in the first place she had safety in, six or eight miles from the custom house port, without the slightest intention of going into that. She laid there nearly the whole night. The storm abated. She hoisted her sails and started out for sea. when Capt. Quigley, of the Canadian cruiser Terror, fired a shot across her bows, brought her to, went on board, took ssion of her, told her that she must to port, make entry and report. He she did not go in and report and enter she should be fined $400. She was fined $400 as it was, and the money was deposited

The Marian Grimes was fined $400.
This fine was imposed by the urgency of Capt. Quigley of the Terror, and Capt.
Landry was informed that he would be detained at the port of Shelburne until a denosit to meet it was made. deposit to meet it was made.

While the vessel was in the custody of Capt. Quigley, Capt. Landry hoisted the American flag, hoisted it on an American vessel, on his own, as he had a right to do, and Capt. Quigley ordered this American citizen to haul it down. Capt. Quigley ordered the American flag hauled down, and it was hauled down. en, shortly afterward, when Capt. Landry was ready to sail, he hoisted the American flag once more on that American ship, as he had a right to do, and Capt. Quigley came on board, and, with an oath, took the halyards in his own hand, hauled down your flag, and you to-day, sir, [pointing to Senator Payne of Ohio,] are apologizing for him in the United States

Hereupon the galleries broke out into a tumult of applause at Payne's discomfort, that could not be snppressed.

Proceeding, Mr. Frye said: The senator from Ohio wants me to say that an apology was made for that. A weak apology, readily accepted by a weak administration, was made, but Captain Quigley kept his office as captain of the hip. He sailed afterward through those waters and seized vessels as he met them bearing the American flag. Seventy-five years ago, if Capt. Quigley had not been immediately displaced by his Government there would have been a declaration of war. We made the declaration of war in war. We made the decimal any greater 1812 for no offence that was any greater colrect our vessels I adthan that. They seized our vessels I admit; they searched them and took our sailors; but they seized this vessel without right of law, and they tore down with their own hands the emblem of the sovereignity of a Republic of sixty million

And Senator Frye was right, for it is recalled that in the very throes of our civil war, when the resources of the Government were strained to their utmost, for an irsult no greater, an apology was promptly demanded, and from Great Britain. There has hardly been an administration in power since the foundation of the Republic that would not have forced the Dominion Government to send Capt. Quigley and his cruiser to hoist and salute the flag he hauled down, under penalty of an immediate declaration of war. That is the only apology that should have been true American of whatever party he may

SHERIDAN MADE GENERAL.

When the bill reviving the grade of general was introduced into the Senate, it was feared Lieut.-Gen. Sheridan could not live the day out, and a special effort was made to have the bill passed, engrossed, and sent to the President without a moment's delay. But it was left for a rebel brigadier, Senator Berry, of Arkan sas to object. Democratic senators, as well as Republicans, pleaded with him to withdraw his objection to granting this last honor to a hero believed to be fighting his last battle. But to no effect. His pigheaded bitterness at last relented, and he consented that a yea and nay vote might be taken, when all but six Confederate sympathizers supported the bill. Possibly Berry's opposition was to be in part excused by the fact that he lost a leg at Corinth, while fighting to destroy the Union. The bill having been previously engrossed, was hurried over to the House, where the House Committee on Military Affairs had given it their unanimous approval, and it was expected it would be mmediately passed. But no-the rebel brigadiers in the House also made a fight, led by Kilgore, of Texas, and aided by Oates, of Alabama. This put its passage over till next day. Kilgore was wounded at Chicamauga, and Oates lost an arm before Petersburg, as both were fighting to destroy the Union, and so their lack of humanity and decency may be overlooked. The bill passed the House at one o'clock, and Senator Hawley took it to the White House and had the President sign it, and he having suggested to the President by telephone that it might be wise to have Gen. Sheridan's commission made out in advance of his arrival, and in readiness to be hurried to the bedside of the illustrious dying soldier. This was done, and in less than a half hour Sheridan had attached

A very wonderful exhibition was held all last week of the products of the scholars in the public schools of this city. The wonder of this industrial exhibit increases when it is remembered that it embraces the products of the youngest as well as the older scholars, and no scholar is allowed more than two hours in any one week to construct the many interesting and useful objects. Most of the exhibits are what is called "spontaneous" products. That is where the child has been permitted to build, construct, or model whatever it likes best. Others come within the school requirements of manual labor. One boy takes to wood and another to metal working, and the articles of use and furniture are varied and excellent. The girls are taught to model, draw, and cook and sew, and many of them become exceedingly expert. Two small lads have constructed two electric telephones complete, which work as perfectly as the Bell instruments. The draughting is superb, and is done by both boys and girls. This remarkable exhibit is the result of a purpose to introduce into the public schools here, in addition to book learning, such manual training as that the scholar may be so equipped on leaving school, that a living may be earned by all hands taught to produce useful and practical results. In view of the modern exclusion of our boys from opportunities to learn a trade, this project cannot be too

I found it satisfied the cravings, and suffused a feeling of stimulation and Much interest is manifested in this case, based upon former friendship and intimacy with the deceased and kind feeling and sympathy for his widow. I should be glad to respond to these sentiments to the extent of approving this bill, but it is one of the misfortunes of public life and official strength. When I was discharged I continued this cure and persevered till the thirst was conquered. For two years I have not tasted liquor, and I have no desire for it. The Methodists have settled the vexing itinerancy question, as well as elected their new bishops, and it is now possible that a preacher should have five years continuous service in one place instead of three. So that the petitioners for the extension of time have got the utmost that any large number of them asked for, while the provisions are continued for exceptional emergencies as under the three years' limit. The majority report made the term four years, but the minority report, as above, was adopted by this vote: Yeas-Ministerial 208, lay 88, total 296;

nays-Ministerial 66, lay 65, total 131. Messrs. Barnetn and Brothwell have had a long consultation with Mr. Barnum's partner, Mr. Bailey. It was decided to have the winter quarters of the big show remain at Bridgeport and six acres will be added to the present site on State street, making twelve acres in all. Fireproof buildings will be constructed of brick, stone and iron. These structures will be for different uses, some for elephant rooins, others for circus use, breeding rooms; stock rooms, animal quarters, etc., etc. This location is to be made permanent, the circus contract being for fifty years. There are from $30,000 to $40,-000 worth of animals bred with the great show every year and it is intended to have accommendations so that at least $100,000 worth of new animals will come into the world under cover each year. The annual meeting of the Joint Board f School Visitors and Selectmen will be held at the office of E. J. The celebration of the anniversary of the battle of Gettysburg will be opened by the 1st corps July 1 at 1 p. m., at the spot where Gen. John F. Reynolds fell. The programme will be as follows : Address of welcome, Gov. James A. Beaver; response, Gen. Abner Doubleday; speeches by the war governors, A. G. Curtin, Austin Blair, J. Gregory Smith, S. J. Kirkwood, Frederick Holbrook, William Sprague and Frederick Smythe and Gens. John C. Robinson, James Longstreet, Lucius Fairchild, J. H. Stine, historian 1st corps, Gen. James A. Hall, Joseph Dickinson, and J. P. Rea, commander-in-chief of the Grand Army. The monument just erected on the bat tle-field to mark the place where Gen Hancock fell in Pickett's charge, suggests that Gen. Reynolds is the only other corps commander honored in a like manner. A little daughter of Charles LaCroix had a narrow escape frrm a fearful death yesterday morning. She was riding on her little tricycle along the sidewalk on Wall street, and when in front of the GAZETTE building, from some cause her tricycle ran off the edge of the walk directly under Dr. Gregory's horse, which was tied to a post, and striking against his hind legs. The child was thrown into the gutter, and the horse began to kick and prance, demolishing the tricycle, and while the horrified bystanders held their breath in awful suspense, the child's mother, who had been walking along behind, rushed forward, and at the risk of being herself trampled by the horse, grasped the child from between the heels of the frightened animal, and snatched it out of its dangerous position. Luckily lt was unhurt, but the escape was simply miraculous, as those angry hoofs came down wickedly several times within a hair's breadth of the child's head. Dr. Ellery C. Clarke, whose mental condition has been growing worse for some time past, was finally taken to a medica institution in Hartford yesterday morning by Officers Lockwood and DeForest and Charles Burr, his nurse. Several times during the past week efforts were made to induce him to consent to be taken to some institution but he stubbornly refused to go or even allow himself to be dressed, and it was only by shrewd generalship that he was finally started yesterday. A plan was devised which induced him to go "just out of spite." According to an understanding between the officers and Mr. Burr, the latter, early yesterday morning. told Dr. Clarke confidentially and in apparent alarm that they were both to be arrested for some trumped-up misdemeanor, whereupon the Doctor said that as he was not guilty he had no objection to being arrested, and when the officers came and went through the form of making the two arrests, the Doctor submitted gracefully and dramatically an I was soon on his way to Hartford, where he was received by competent experts who predict his full re-

A. H. Wilcox, Gen. Secv. What if the Boston & Maine railroad should lease the New York, New Haven & Hartford and the New York & New England and operate both as part of its line from New York clear through to the far "down east" The Boston & Maine, paying 10 per cent dividends, with its stock above 200, has already taken in the Eastern and the Poston & Lowell and consequently the Massachusetts Central. Its policy is decidedly aggressive, and long ago the story spread that New York was its destination. It has fought the Boston & Albany already and is not afraid of it, as the Consolidated road is. If the Consolidated takes the New England, that is supposed to mean war with the Boston & Albany. But if the Boston & Maine takes both, it will only be extending a policy that it is already initiated and it can, work its two acquisitions together. If the Old Colony offers obstacles at the Shore Line end, then the New England can be used as a Bosmake a strong combination, certainly, and

The Bridgeport Farmer says :- A little matter of punctuation- namely, the alleged wrong placing of a comma-may have an important bearing on the question whether the state board of pardons have the authority to commute the death sentence of Philip Palladoni to one of life imprisonment. The working of the law transferring to the board from the legislature the the power of pardoning convicts renders it doubtful whether their authority is sufficient to cover the cases of criminals who are under sentence of death. By the transfer of a comma, however, the interpertation that the board does not possess this power becomes a perfectly reasonably one, whereas at present the opposite is to be inferred. Judge Lockwood, the condemned man's connsel, will ask the board to construe the passage in question in accordance with its palpable intent, or what would be its intent with a slight change in the punctuation, urging that the appearance of the comma in question in its present place is plainly a printer's error The case comes up for a hearing at Hartford Monday, and the first question raised will be that of the board's jurisdiction. Should it be decided that they have power to commute Palladoni's sentence some interesting medical testimony ont he question of Palladoni's sanity will be offered.

A difficulty with the water main near the New Canaan road, cut off the supply of huckleberry water on Sunday after noon, but the effect of soda or something stronger affected many as they drove recklessly through the city.

A paper called the Voice is being gratu tously distributed in this section, especially among well known Republicans, and it is evident, for the one purpose of creating discord in the party-and thereby aid the democracy. One has said of it "The Voice is the voice of Jacob, but the hand is the hand of Esau," and it does not take an intelligent man long to discover this fact in reading it. Mrs. C. D. Mathews and family have returned from New York, and are occupying their attractive summer house at Elmworth.

Capt. Bearse has turned his attention t finance and insurance, and is now to b found at the office of Jacob M. Layton. Editor Lyon seems willing to have others enjoy his good things beside the Republican. He has placed a glass goblet at his never failing spring of water on Bay View avenue, and many take a by a special service, in which Bishop Wil draught of the cool and sparkling water. Mrs. Rufus Hotchkiss died suddenly Saturday at her home in Saugatuck aged about 60 years. On Monday preceding she did some trading at a store near the railway station and was then apparently in her usual health. The funeral occurred Tuesday from her late residence and the remains were taken to Meriden for burial. The officiating clergyman was Rev. Mr. Cooper of the M. E. church, Saugatuck.

by the sight of human bones, portions of a skull being among them, which woodchucks in burrowing had brought from their supposed last resting place, to the surface. The grave is situated in the western corner of the ground, and the bones, from their appearance, had been buried many years. There was no stone marking the grave, but the mound appeared to have been recently cared for. Further investigation showed seven more burrows. Each in or near a grave, and near the centre of the ground, among the old graves there were evidences that these little animals had busying themselves for years. membered, and those who gathered on the Point to see the race will be likely to be there when another race, said to be on the tapis, occurs. One of these features was a printed card, the work of Treasurer P. G. Sanford of the club, the name, number and class of every yacht appearing on one side, the reverse side showing a pretty engraved chart in miniature taken from the U. S Coast Survey, with lines showing the triangular sailing course of 15 miles, depths of water, names of points of land, buoys, rocks, etc., regulations governing those sailing the boats, and other imformation necessary in order to intelligently see a race. Indeed it is superior to the ordinary score cards used at horse trots, for the reason that there are no abbreviations. Mr. Sanford, who is noted for thoroughness in all he undertakes, in particular with marine matters, though repeating rifles, with which he deals may not be overlookton connection. after the pastor, Rev. H. S. Still, had finished his sermon. In a few well chosen remarks he outlined the efforts made by former pastors to remove the debt, and of the work the present pastor had performed to that end. As indicative of the success achieved he exhibited so that all in the congregation could see them, three notes representing $15,000 raised, paid. and the notes cancelled, remarking in effect that, while possession of the notes was, in fact, sufficient to show that the society owed nothing, the ashes of the manuscript upon which, menacingly, bad been displayed for so many years the evidence of their indebtedness would tell the story of total extinguishment more forcibly. Each note was then ignited and burned. NODWING CARETTE, WEDNESDAY, JENE 6, 4885

Say, what is the wild sea's message,
It so eagerly bears to the land;
That so fondly it crooms to the pebbles,
As it dries it sad eyes on the strand?
Do the pebbles it dallies and kisses,
And forsakes with a sob, as they part,
Alone know the seb of that linears. Alone know the echo that lingers, Like the voice of a fond, faithful heart

Is the pebble an exile, I wonder,
From some sea bedded cavern of yore?
Are the waves but its couriers bearing
Sweet tidings from grotte to shore?
Does it harken and send back its greeting Is the kiss on the wave's lips a part? As swift and as sure comes the answer, From the voice of a fond, faithful heart.

Does the surf change forever, or ever?
Do these couriers pause in their chase?
Are the depths of the sea ever broken
By the tempests that wrinkle its face?
Ah, no! And as strong and enduring,
Though ocean and continent part,
Are the whispers, heard but by the loved one,
From the voice of the fend, faithful heart.

Deep down 'neath the bosom of ocean,
Unsounded by plummet or line;
At peace from the storm and commotion,
That rage o'er its billows of brine,
There are secrets that time shall not fathom,
There are jewels unknown to earth's mart.
As deep, as true and as precious
Is the voice of the fond, faithful heart,
—Jessie Bartlett Davis. THE MAID."

Since "love is flower like," I will trip From bloom to bloom; some I will clip To cast away, and some I'll glean While I am young.

While I am young shall not sip
The sweets that gem-each honeyed lip?
By sweets, of course, you know I mean
Such nothings soft as style me queen
Of hearts and beggar rivalship.

What care I if the plants I strip
Of sturdy bloom, as hoar frosts nip
The buds! Their hearts survive, I ween,
And bourgeon still more buds as green;
With freshest flowers I'll me equip
While I am young!

SMANTHY.

Two generations of flabby muscles will obliterate intellectual superiority and courage. One generation will impair it. Of course, the influence of either parent may be peculiarly adverse, and this may account for the more remarkable cases of degeneracy. Take the case, then, of an exceptional intellect in a weak body. It is the fruit of physical energy in parents and it is the end unless that weak youth is strengthened by regular physical exercise. The application of these truths is first of all to the public schools, and it has been shown by positive experiment that children playing four hours and studying four hours make more progress than children studying eight hour. Mr. Chadwick, in England, has even taken factory children and taught them four hours a day and worked them four heurs, and has shown that they excelled schelars kept at study eight hours.

Practical recommendations, therefore, The point which I had reached in the long, sinuous ascent was as high as the crests of the range of hills beyond the valley to the westward. Dazzling shafts of light came straight and level across the undulating line of dark green with which the distant declivities were cov-ered, and I found myself in the warm glow of a summer sunset.

Three miles away, by the road I had come, but appearing to lie almost at my feet down in the valley of Salt creek, was Georgetown, the only village in Indiana populated by gold miners. Nor are they miners, in a strict use of the term, as their labor consists only of washing the yellow dust from the beds of sand along the creek, where, according to one of those wonderful stories which geologists tell, it was dropped by a melting glacier from the far north.

But, however its presence may be accounted for, there is a very light sprinkling of gold dust through the sand along the "crick" just at this point, and a score or more of slow moving men, by close industry and tedious washing and sifting, continue to maintain a laborious existence. The reckless extravagance and lucky "finds" which have been associated with the richer mining of our western states are lacking here, and there is simply and without exception heavy labor with its meager returns. Even the un-kempt farmer who 'tends his "craps" along the rocky hillsides of the surround-along the rocky hillsides of the surrounding country has a better opportunity to wrest a competency from the soil than has the "gold digger."

"But, ez I 'uz a sayin', Smanthy wuzn't like Cajer. She 'uz alluz a talkin' about the hills a bein' so purty an' green in the spring o' the year, an' she'd nigh a'most take a fit about a little spring o' clear like water a runnin' over the rocks er tricklin' out from under the roots o' a tree. Seemed like about a roots o' a tree. Seemed like about a roots o' a tree. Seemed out from under the roots o'a tree. Seemed like she 'uz sort o' weakly, too, an' not peart an' rugged like Cajer's side o' the fambly. Many a time I've seed her go down to the spring below them trees you see over thar whar the smoke is, an' set down on a rock an' jest set an' look up hyar at this hill without sayin' a word fer sometimes half an hour, in the evenin' when the sun uz a-shinin on the top, the way it is now an' ever'thin' down yander way it is now, an' ever'thin' down yander in the holler 'uz still an' sort o' dark like. She set a heap o' store by flowers, too, an' when the johnny-jump-ups an' dandylions begun to come out an' the weather 'uz a

They had made a fire in the leaves ter. They had made a fire in the leaves that laid on the ground thick over winter, an' it had spread out and got clean around 'em, an' when Smanthy see 'em, it 'uz a-burnin' tur'ble fierce an' gettin' closter to 'em ever' minit. She never stopped her runnin', but jes went tearin' right through them blazes ten foot high, an' grabbed the two youngest, an' held 'em clost agin her breast an' bent her head down over 'em like, an' run out to a safe place. Then, without stoppin' to take a breath, she run, back agin—fer the fire 'uz a drorin' up into a mighty small ring by that time—an' grabbin' the other one o' the children up, she hugged it clost, an' sort o' wrapped her dress around its head, an' then run out with it.

Sneezing Catarrh.

The distressing sneeze, sneeze sneeze, the aicd watery discharges from the eyes and nose, the painful infammation extending to the t roat, the swelling of the mucus lining, causing choking sensations, cough, ringing noises in the head and splitting headaches,—how familiar are these symptoms to thousands who suffer periodically from head colds or influenza, and who live in ignorance of the fact that a single application of Sanfords Radical Curs for Catarrh will afford instantaneous relief.

But this treatment in cases of simple Catarrh gives but a faint idea of what this remedy will do in the chronic forms, where the breathing is obstructed by choking, putrid mucuous accumulations, the hearing affected, smell and taste gone, throat incertated and hacking cough gradually fastening itself upon the debilitated system. Then it is that the marvellous curative power of Sanford's Arbical-Curse manifests itself in instantaneous and grateful relief. Cure begins from the first application. It is rapid, radical, permanenr, economical, safe.

INCREASE YOUR PENSION.

Many pensioners borne on the rolls are entitled to a much higher rate of pension than they now receive. In a great majority of cases in which pension was granted for disease, the pensioner is entitled to an increase of rate, and in most cases where it was granted for wounds or injuries the disability increases each year. As time passes the disability of all classes naturally increases. Many were at first rated too low, and it often occurs that pensioners are unjustly or erroneously reduced by examining surgeons. A pensioner is entitled to increase on a disability not set forth in his original declaration. The pension laws are more liberal than formerly, and better rating can be had for many disabilities. I make a specialty of Neglected and Rejected Claims, and if you will present me with a brief statement of your case, stating by whom it was presented, I will obtain a rehearing of your case, and, if it has nerit, will procure a favorable settlement. Many claims stand rejected before the department, when it only requires a competent attorney to make them good cases. Soldiers suffering with disabilities contracted in service, who have not applied for a pension, should do so as tis their BIGHT.

THE ONE WHO STAYS AT HOME.

Morn with its matin melody
And night with its vesper song;
The tides are out and the tides are in, Like the sea in its ebb and flow,

For there's always one to stay at home Where there is one to go. Abroad on the highway's noisy track There is rush of hurrying feet, The sparks fly out from the wheels of time To brighten the bitter and sweet; But apart from the beaten road and path,

Where the pulse of earth runs slow There is always one to stay at home Where there is one to go. Over and over good-bys are said, In tests that die with the day, When eyes are wet that cannot in And smiles have faded away;

Smiles that are worn as over a grave
Flowers will blossom and blow;
For there's always one to stay at home Always one for the little tasks

And watch with the stars alone And he who fights on the world's broad field, With banner and blast and drum, Little dreams of a battle gained By the one who stayed at home

The Weaker Sex No Longer. Society women nowadays thoroughly realize the importance of good health in the matrimonial market, and New York women are today much stronger and healthier, as a rule, than the men are. A few minutes on Broadway, between Fourteenth street and Thirty-second, on the west side of the street, of a Saturday afternoon, will demonstrate the truth of this assertion. The women, as a rule, are fresh of face, erect of carriage, their heads are well poised and their arms well rounded. Their figures are trim and they walk along with a strong and regular stride. The men, on the other hand, are too often sallow and loose jointed, flat chested and hollow eyed, and certainly but little else can be expected when the late hours usually kept by them are condozens of cigarettes they smoke during the day and how many deadly cocktails are imbibed.—New York Mail and Ex-

An Ancient Buried Forest. During the late violent storms in the English channel the sea washed through a high and hard sandbank near St. Malo, almost four meters thick, laying bare a portion of an ancient forest, which was already passing into the condition of coal. The London Times says: "This forest at the beginning of our era covered an ex-tensive tract of the coast, but with the sinking of the land it became submerged and covered up by the drifting sand. Mont Saint Michel once stood in the middle of it. The forest had quite disappeared by the middle of the Tenth century. Occasionally, at very low tides after storms, remains of it are disclosed, just as at present. It is believed that some centuries ago the highest tides rose about twelve meters above the level of the lowest ebb. Now the high water level is 15.5 meters above the lowest."-Home

No Longer a Trade. "Baseball," said John Ward a couple of days ago to a newspaper man, "used to be a trade; now it is a profession. No mere mechanic can play ball as it is played these days. Before a man can properly fill an important position in a first class club at the present time he must be so thoroughly absorbed in the game that he must, figuratively speaking, eat, drink and sleep baseball and nothing else. He mustn't allow his mind to wander to anything outside the game, or he is lost. To be a great ball player requires a special genius, just as much as it does to achieve greatness in any of the other branches of life. The game has improved, and so have the players.—New York World.

An Economical Father. A miserly old man lived with his son, who was somewhar of a reprobate. The son turned seriously ill one day, and the symptoms proving very alarming a doctor was grudgingly sent for. The doctor arrived in due time, and, stooping over the young man, began to sound him with a stethoscope when he was interrupted by the father: "Noo, doctor," he said, "hefore gaun ony farrer lat we say this, gin ye say he's no worth repairin', dinna put out muckle expense upon him."—Scottish

Farmers' institutes have become an institution in Wisconsin. Eighty-two were held last year in forty-five counties, and 279 practical topics were discussed. More than one hundred lecturers and specialists imparted instruction, and the state appropriated $12,000 to help the farmers' cause alone.—New Orleans Times-Demo-Tempered by Electricity. the wire is immersed in the oil bath first and is then brought, by means of an electric current, to the desired degree of heat.-Boston Budget. Working People's Plants. Plants most cultivated by working people in cities are said by a florist to be the geranium, the heliotrope, fuchsia, daisy, gillyflower, primrose, pink and oxalis. These will grow where less hardy plants would die, and will thrive in small quarters.—Chicago Herald. England's Watch Trade. The introduction of American watches into England has reduced the number of gold cases marked at the London assay office from 34,844 in 1876 to 20,416 in 1886, and of silver cases from 119,394 in 1876 to 95,708 in 1886.—New York Sun.
