We had met between the two lines, and were were waiting patiently for the order to charge because we then knew it would end charge because we then knew it would end knives, handkerchiefs, news papers and a one way or the other very soon. The order great many other things. We were engaged that way for about one hour when a rebel officer jumped upon the works and holloed "Johnnies, come in, and Yanks, you get inside of your lines and cover yourselves,"and in less than fifteen minutes it was dangerous to let ourselves be seen unless we would like

We had one very large mortar on the line that was used to throw shell into Petersburg, and it was known to both parties as the "Petersburg Express," and one day two of my company were playing a game of cards with two rebs in front, and the stakes they had up was Abe Lincoln and Jeff Davis. The two rebs beat in the game and then wanted to know how they were going cock's corps was having a heavy battle to to get Abe Lincoln, and Kip told them he would send him over on the "Petersburg Directly in front of where we lay one day

What a laugh the boys had on before night and would bet on it, and I did. In the afternoon our mail came and I had paper from home, and as soon as I finishd reading it I told the captain I was going to get some corn. I raised my paper over my head, and it was but a few minutes before I saw a rebel waving his paper direct about half way, and after we had traded, he said that he was going to have some corn and that I had better get some. I told him I had brought out my rubber blanket for that purpose, and spread it out. He had nothing to carry any in so he did not get more than a dezz n ears, but after he got all hat he wanted he helped me to fill my blanket, and then helped me to tie it up and TOILET USE. Then we shook hands in, but bear it in mind I had to keep the paper I had held over my head so that the tebs woulds not fire on me. I had nearly corn enough for the whole company. Everything passed along very smoothly until the 7th of September. That day I was on the sharpshooter's line and we had tried atil he would sign it, but if there was a every way to draw the rebs' fire. One way from each regament along the line, and they could fire at the flish of their guns. The left wrist and pealed the flesh off to the bone. It felt as if a whole pile driver had struck me. He had been struck in one of his eyes and was so blind that he could not see where he was going, and I took him by the hand and we both went to camp together. That afternoon another one of the boys was brought in. He was shot through the head. He lived in great agony until the

The doctor dressed my wound and then gave me my choice to go to the hospital or stay with the regiment. I told him I would rether stay with the regiment. A told him I would rether stay with the regiment, so my name Francs Cheap as the Cheapes' was put on the sick list. I had not lost a day before that one since I came back from

I had nothing to do but stay around camp and enjoy myself the best 1 could. Some days when I felt like it I would go out in the rifle pits and set with the boys. I remember one day I had lots of fun. I gathered all the old ramrods I could find and my luck, and instead of loading with ball 1 used a ramtod. When I could not see any one to shoot at I would fire over the top of the rebel works. It was fun to hear them ring going through the air, and see them go end over end when they struck, and the way they would make the dirt fly when they struck into a bank was a caution.

One day when I could find nothing to do I asked the captain to give me a pass to go and see a cousin of mine that was stationed on the Weldon railroad. He belonged to Duryea's Z waves. The captain gave me the pass and next morning I started. I had a long walk before me. The route I could that he would have remembered, but I never go was ten miles to where his regiment was, but if I could take a bee line, it would not be more than three miles. But the rebs would object to me going across lots so I had to go around. It was then that the old saying came true, "the furthest way round the safest way there." I arrived at his regiment about eleven o'clock, very tired; besides my wound was paining me considerably, but all I had to do was bathe it with cold water and I brought my canteen on We had to devise all kinds of means to purpose for that. I was disappointed when on the sharp-shooters line, so as to get a he was on picket, but I had traveled so far chance for a shot. Some days everything to see him I would go further. They showed there was no cover but some small trees, and the center, which we did, but all of the time would be quiet, not a shot being fired from me which course to take to find him, and we had to lay down and fire the best we under a heavy fire, for in front of us was either side, and then we could take comfort. cautioned me to be careful or I would get we had to say down and here the best we could, but in front of us, not more than a strong line of the enemy's works. rebels from line of works we had to keep pressing on towards Richmond, but yery slowly for the rebs were well for ified. At night we were within three miles of Ric mond, and I was detailed with some other to advance out as scouts. We got to the top of what is known as New Market Heights and we could see into the famous City of Richmond, but it was completly fenced in with forts, line after line. We had got a far as we possibly could and then fell bick to the regiment again. That night the whole line fell back to Fort Harrison and bivouacked. The morning of the first of October the colonel gave orders for all o the men whose time expired on the second to fall out if they wished to. I will here my that there was a number of the boys that were willing to go into another battle. One man in my company said that he wa going to see one more battle before he wen home, but he never lived to go to his earthly home. He was killed during the day and went to his long home. His name was Geo. W. Williams.

TO BE CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK. At a meeting of the board of directors of the Connecticut Western Rullroad company held in Hartford, Monday, for the purpose of considering what course the company should pursue in regard to the sufferers by the recent Tarriffville disaster, the board held to the view that the company were not gally or morally liable, the accident being inevitable, yet they were unanimous in favor ef. In accordance with this disposition ittee was appointed, who were in d to confer with the injured and and families of those who were killd, to see what they are willing to accept the company as aid for damages re ed. This action on the part of the comis purely voluntary, and is taken without allowing the legal responsibility of the company. L. B. Merriam of Hariford and L. W. Culler of Watertown are the com-
