Eye-Witness Report:

Eichmann Won't Get Death, Says Newsman

BY EVVY MARSHAK

"The holocaust which took twenty million lives during the reign of Nazi terror could happen again," said Mr. Morton Blander.

Speaking to the Hillel graduate students and Faculty Club on "The Eichmann Trial, A Second Look," Mr. Blander, who is news director of WPRO TV, Providence, continued, "People have forgotten the haunting history of Europe during the 30s and 40s." They have forgotten that 14 million other people were killed in addition to 6 million Jews.

"As history fades from memory it doesn't take with it the chances of another mass extermination and the possibility that another Eichmann could rise to power."

Eichmann was brought to trial for several reasons, one of which was the chance for the horrible story to be brought to light. In this the Israel government did not succeed. Soon after the trial began, the news of it was pushed from the front pages by the Cuban Invasion and the orbiting of Soviet and American astronauts.

The emotional trial which could have been, turned into a dry and drawn out event in most parts. "Several things I saw, however, I cannot forget," he said.

High Point

Probably the high point of the trial was the beginning of testimony by Eichmann. This man against whom 16 indictments have been placed, refused to swear upon a Bible as to the truth of his statements. Rules were relaxed and another oath was administered.

"You could not be unemotional when a man was removed for demonstrating and it was later found that he was the only member of 162 people in his family to survive the concentration camps."

One witness had suffered a heart attack a week before she was scheduled to testify but she testified anyway. And her story was horrifying. She told of being shot and landing in a ditch eighty feet long and filled with bodies. She gave her testimony in Jewish and a translator gave it in English and reflected the horror she (the translator felt). The woman continued, "I felt that I was being strangled by bodies but I was only slightly wounded and finally managed to escape."

Yesterday the judges reconvened to submit their findings and sentence Adolph Eichmann. Indictments totalling 16 have been lodged against Eichmann for his crimes against humanity. The judgment will be long as was the trial, and probably will total over 600 pages.

"Personally I feel Eichmann will not be sentenced to death but probably will be given a life term to be served in the Judea desert."

After showing films of the trial and the people of Jerusalem, Mr. Blander answered questions.

Question

In reply to a question about his feelings at the beginning of the trial Mr. Blander replied, "This is an often asked question and I must say that I didn't feel anything toward the man. Thought others did and we were searched every time we entered the court."

The legality of the manner in which Eichmann was captured was also discussed. It was revealed that Israel could never have extradited Eichmann from Argentina if it had tried.

Mr. Blander gave as an example the attempts by West Germany which has an extradition treaty with Argentina, to extradite men for trial in West Germany. All five attempts failed and this was not during the time of Peron as head of Argentina but when President Frondizi was in office.

"The Israel had no chance of getting Eichmann legally out of Argentina and I'm not suggesting what they did is correct."

It is debateable as to the success of the trial in accomplishing what it hoped to. Many Americans look at it as another piece of jurisprudence and experts on international law doubt if it will change international law.

Eichmann will be sentenced soon and then perhaps the effects of the trial will be known.

'60 Nutmeg Printed At Last; No Extra Copies Available

The 1960 Nutmeg is off the presses and is being distributed to subscribers. Within the next few weeks, subscribers will receive their copies of the book. There are no more books available for sale.

The actual date of release of the '60 Nutmeg was about 15 months later than the proposed date of release. The main reasons for the delay says Don Nierling "are irresponsibility of the associate editors in doing assignments and misplacement of material."

The book finally was finished in the following manner. The Board of Trustees, after receiving several letters of complaints and questions concerning the delay of the book, looked to Mr. John Evans' office for an explanation of why the book had not been printed. He turned to Mr. John Dunlop who obtained the assistance of Richard Pignone, editor of the 1960 Nutmeg; Mr. David Bain and several interested students, all of whom completed the book over the summer.

The book is dedicated to Jerold Armington Manter. Mr. Manter taught here for 41 years, longest span on record at the time of his retirement in 1953, ever since he was graduated from the University of New Hampshire in 1912. He was a professor of ornithology and entomology. As a motion picture and still life photographer, he supplemented many of his lectures with his own photographs.

Beck, Gerson Debate Berlin Issue Tonight

To Speak At First Meeting of ADA Club

The University of Connecticut chapter of Americans For Democratic Action will sponsor a debate on the Berlin issue "Is Berlin Negotiable?" tonight at 7:30 p.m. in Commons 316. Tonight's discussion between Dr. Curt Beck and Dr. Louis Gerson of the University Political Science Department is aimed to help clarify student thinking on the complex issues involved in the Berlin situation.

Dr. Beck is an expert on European diplomacy with a particularly strong interest in Eastern European affairs. On the other hand, Dr. Gerson specializes in the history of American diplomacy and is intimately acquainted with the means and ends of diplomacy. Hence, the debate promises an interesting and thought-provoking evening for all students interested in American policy toward Berlin and West Germany.

The Uconn chapter of ADA is a recently formed organization dedicated to the promotion of liberal student attitude toward national and international affairs. Tonight's program is intended to further this goal.

Medieros Suggests Const'tional Amend. To Limit Scope of Senate Activity

The basic question of Student Senate reorganization was dominant in the proceedings at the Student Senate meeting on Wednesday evening, December 6. Vice President Al Medieros proposed a change in Senate policy designed to limit a phase of the Student Senate's activity. As it was termed a constitutional amendment, the proposed change was tabled for a week to be brought up at the Student Senate meeting this week.

A constitutional amendment which had been tabled for a week, concerning a change in the position of the WSGC representative from an ex-officio to a voting senator, was discussed and defeated. A change in the finance policy was approved by the Student Senate. The new advisor to the Student Senate, Mr. McAlister, attended his first meeting in his new capacity.

Vice-President Al Medieros' motion, to be removed from the table this week, stated "Resolved, that the Student Senate concern itself with the resolution germane to the problems of student government and student activities at the University of Connecticut until the reorganization of the Student Senate is complete."

Discussion

Before the motion was termed a constitutional amendment and tabled for a week, discussion followed on the motion. Senator Dick Thorsell (ISO) stated that, if passed, the motion would be a "blinder, limiting policy of the Student Senate . . . right now we must put our own house in order."

Senator John Perry (ISO) was the first Senator to speak out against Medieros' motion. Senators Joe Hammerman (ISO), Ann McLaughlin (ISO), and Vic Schacter (ISO) followed suit. Senator Perry stated that it has "been hard on the Senators to pass resolutions such as the one on the House Committee on Un-American Activities which they can do nothing about. Their work is just a drop in the bucket compared to all the work done by others and they can't stomach it."

Dividing Line

This was his explanation of the need for the motion which Medieros proposed. He further stated that a dividing line of absolute control would be drawn, as someone would have to determine what was "germaine to the problems of student government and student activities at the University of Connecticut." Perry also suggested that it would be quite hard to determine when the "reorganization of the Student Senate is complete."

Senator Joe Hammerman (ISO) further echoed Senator Perry in saying that the students here do not exist in an island by themselves, but are rather an integral part of the world, in which they have to take part.

Not Intent

Senator Kevin Dunne (USA) stated that the points made against the motion showed that the persons making the points had not understood the intent of the motion. He stated that it was fine to be interested in outside activities and outside events and problems, such as the House Committee on Un-American Activities, if the Senators can clean up their own house at the same time. But, according to Senator Dunne, "We haven't been."

The change in finance policy, passed by the Student Senate is hoped to provide for a more accurate estimation of income by the various organizations, thus providing for a more accurately determined budget for those organizations. Senator Kevin Dunne (USA) proposed a change in finance policy, along with the platform of the USA Party. His proposal was that the finance committee look into the possibility of a system of class dues to be administered to all classes.

Uconn Therapist Publishes Book

A new book, which brings under one cover the latest methods of therapeutic massage has been compiled by a University of Connecticut physical therapist.

Entitled "Massage Techniques" and published by MacMillan Co., the book was written by Assoc. Prof. Frances Tappan, technical director of Uconn School of Physical Therapy. It represents a decade of research and study in this country and abroad.

Step Forward

The recent adoption by the Board of Trustees of the Faculty Senate's proposal for minimum scholastic standards in extra-curricular activities is an important step forward for the University.

Under the new rulings, the officers of all major campus activities, and all athletes will have to maintain a cumulative quality point ratio of at least 18. This is the number required for graduation.

We feel that students will not be denied the opportunity of participating in activities, but will be protected from becoming involved to the extent that they will not have high enough grades to graduate.

This attempt to raise the academic standards of the University is one of the many projects that the Faculty Senate is presently working on. We would like to offer our support and help. When the students and faculty work together there are few problems that can't be adequately solved.

Liquor Record

From the CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

Year after year newspapers of the United States are circularized by the Licensed Beverage Industry, Inc., with a booklet setting forth in as favorable a light as possible the data on production and consumption of alcoholic liquors.

One object of this compilation is to show purported benefits to the country since the repeal of national prohibition of the sale of intoxicants in 1934.

The American Business Men's Research Foundation in Chicago has examined some of these figures in the spirit of a favorite phrase of Governor "Al" Smith, a leading proponent of repeal. "Let's take a look at the record."

Whereas the industry's book of "facts" lists 400,000 retail liquor outlets, the United States Census of Business in 1958 counted only 152,000. While the brochure claims that manufacture and distribution of alcoholic beverages give employment to 1,320,000, the same census found only 529,000 such jobs.

One figure the research foundation checks as being accurate. The total expenditure of Americans for alcoholic beverages in the 27 years since the repeal of prohibition has curate. The total expenditure of Americans for alcoholic beverages to have bought $3,800 worth of improvements—reroofing, carpeting, heating equipment or plumbing—for every household in America.

The current rate of outlay for intoxicants is on the order of $11,500,000,000 a year. This approximately equals the expenditures of all Americans for clothing, jewelry and accessories.

As for employment created by the expenditure, it may be conceded that even the 39 per cent federal excise tax provides some jobs, though not at the local level where police and relief costs resulting from use of liquor are a problem. The same amount of money might produce more jobs if spent on more lasting objects or more constructive pursuits.

Finally, the figures show that per capita consumption of alcoholic arrests for drunkenness and drunken driving, and the proportion of alcoholics all have increased rather than decreased under what was to have been a regime of "moderation."

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

DREW PEARSON SAYS: JUSTICE DEPARTMENT HAS BECOME POLITICAL ARM OF GOVERNMENT; ROBERT F. KENNEDY IS IN EMBARRASING POSITION.

Washington—The worst New York Judicial bribery scandal in the past quarter of a century illustrates the embarrassing predicament in which the president has put his brother by making him Attorney General.

The details of this scandal were published in this column six weeks ago — Oct. 29 — and need not be repeated here.

The important fact which causes embarrassment, however, is that the brother of Judge Vincent J. Keogh, charged with splitting a $35,000 bribe, is Congressman Eugene Keogh. The Congressman was one of the strong workers for John F. Kennedy's nomination at Los Angeles and necessarily was investigated, because of reports that he had been approached by the fixers. Attorney General Kennedy announced that he was not involved.

Republicans are bound to point out that in the pre-convention period when Bobby Kennedy was his brother's campaign manager and was working night and day to get him nominated, Congressman Keogh was one of his best supporters. In fact, Keogh was the New York spokesman for the Kennedy forces.

Now, during the investigation of the Keogh's, the man who worked intimately with the judge's brother sits in judgment on a man who helped make his brother's election as President of the United States possible.

This position is fair neither to Attorney General Kennedy nor to Congressman Keogh and is why a campaign manager should not hold the job of Attorney General.

Bobby Kennedy, who didn't really want the job but who has been a good Attorney General, is of course following plenty of precedent. Eisenhower appointed the former chairman of the Republican National Committee and Campaign manager for Governor Dewey, Herbert Brownell, as Attorney General. Truman appointed Howard McGrath, former Chairman of the Democratic National Committee, as Attorney General.

This is because the Attorney General has become the chief political arm of every recent administration. No longer is the post office the department that hands out the political plums. Civil service for postmasters has changed all that. The really big political power, with the right to prosecute or not prosecute, pardon or not pardon, push an income tax case or not push it, is the Justice Department.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

You remarked in a recent editorial that you had no readers. It is no wonder; you have no news. By news I mean issues of which we, to be active and thinking citizens, should know. I do not mean news, in a university newspaper, to be concerned with issues pertaining to the new Moonlight Girl and "Like Wow! Like Free! The Sprite!" The readers you want are not concerned with those issues, and as most of your news is not concerned with the important issues of our time, you will not get discussion of interest.

For instance, where was your coverage on the following events that took place last week? The World Federalists' Meeting on December 1st? T.S. Eliot's lecture at Yale on December 1st? The Americans for Democratic Action Meeting on December 1st? The Student Peace Conference at Wesleyan on December 2nd? and 3rd? It is not from the DAILY CAMPUS that we learn these activities are taking place, nor do we learn anything about them afterwards.

Would it be possible for you to acquire from nearby colleges, (Trinity, Wesleyan, Yale, Connecticut College, Harvard) a list of activities, lectures, plays, etc., that would be points of interest to us? At least we would know what is happening elsewhere, and this might stimulate some activity on this campus as well. Why should we be inactive while other universities and other campus newspapers are aware of and take an active interest in current events?

Discussion and interest would be aroused here on this campus if differing viewpoints on such issues as Nuclear Disarmament, Civil Defense, etc., were presented in the DAILY CAMPUS. These are vital points of discussion, and there are many more, but your editorials are unstimulating and secluded. We want more than you are giving us.

As the campus' main communicative organ, you have a responsibility to keep the students abreast of the most important happenings in the political and academic spheres. It is embarrassing for a university publication to be not only behind the times, but unaware of them.

Uconn To Offer In-Service Science Institute Next Semester

Some 45 teachers will be offered a chance to expand their knowledge in several scientific fields by enrolling in the University of Connecticut's In-Service Science Institute next semester, Dr. David Blick, director, announced today.

According to Dr. Blick, who is an associate professor of science education at the Uconn, teachers who enroll in the National Science Foundation-supported program, will receive free tuition and limited travel expenses.

The Uconn is conducting the Institute for science teachers under terms of a $12,670 NSF grant. Thirty teachers were enrolled in the fall phase of the program.

Starting in February, the Institute will offer three courses on the Storrs campus each Saturday morning. A teacher may take only one of the three-credit courses at a time, Dr. Blick explained. They include: "Astronomy for Teachers," "Recent Advances in Chemistry," and "School Greenhouse Operation."

"Throughout the Institute," Dr. Blick pointed out, "emphasis will be placed on augmenting the teachers' knowledge of subject matter and increasing their ability to motivate competent students toward careers in science."

He noted that some courses carry Graduate School or Sixth-Year Diploma credits, but none of the courses can be applied for graduate credit toward degrees in pure science.

Uconn Business Professor Heads New England Group

Uconn Engineer New Member

Dr. Ralph Kochenburger, a University of Connecticut professor of electrical engineering, has been appointed as the American member of the Honorary Advisory Board of "Automatika," a new international publication.

This multi-lingual journal will be the organ of the International Federation of Automatic Control. The publication will include technical papers associated with work in the field of automatic control from both sides of the "Iron Curtain." It will also carry items on professional activities in the field.

Permagon Press of Oxford, England, will handle publication arrangements.

Dr. Kochenburger, who is an authority on automation, spent two weeks touring Soviet industrial and research facilities in the summer of 1958. He was one of a delegation of U.S. engineers. Two years later he participated in the First Congress of the IFAC, which was held at Moscow.

Uconn Commuters Meet Today To Plan For National Affiliation

A meeting of commuters will be held today and tomorrow, December 12 and 13, in HUB 208 from 12-1 p.m. All commuting students are invited to attend to help formulate preliminary plans for the forthcoming spring conference of the Intercollegiate Commuters' Association which will be held at the University of Connecticut. The program of the Commuters' Club for the remainder of the year will be planned at this time also.

The University of Connecticut has been invited to become a charter member of the Intercollegiate Commuters' Association. The ICA has been organized by commuting students representing a number of colleges and universities in the New England area. Meetings of the association have been held at Brown University and Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Both conferences were attended by representatives of the Commuters' Club of Uconn and the club adviser, Dr. Harold Burke. The ICA plans to hold its spring conference at Uconn during the first weekend in April, 1962.

The association, which consists of college professors of business administration, high school business teachers and businessmen, elected Dr. Malsbary at the annual business meeting and convention at Boston.

Business Education." He has written a number of articles for professional journals and is author of "Spelling and Word Power."

Dr. Malsbary joined the Uconn faculty in 1953 after receiving his doctorate from Indiana University. He also has taught at American International College and the reference of the Intercollegiate Commuters' Association which will be held at the University of Connecticut. The program of the Commuters' Club for the remainder of the year will be planned at this time also.

The purpose behind the Intercollegiate Commuters' Association is to provide organizational assistance to college commuter clubs or organizations interested in enriching the experiences of non-resident students. The assistance takes the form of advice, suggestions, and the sharing of experiences on mutual problems relating to non-resident students.

For example, Plantations House at Brown University came into existence when male commuting students became interested in finding a residence which would serve as a commuters' center when they were faced with an increased commuting student enrollment.

The Non-Resident Students' Association at MIT was established to meet the needs of commuting students; and, it eventually led to the Institute providing them with a centrally located residence for their exclusive use. Similar organizations exist at Pembroke College for women commuters.

Important Role

At present sixteen colleges and universities have indicated interest in the Intercollegiate Commuters' Association and have sent representatives to the semi-annual conferences. It is anticipated that the University of Connecticut will continue to play a role of leadership in the growth and development of the ICA. An all-out effort to entertain the delegates to the April conference is being planned by the Commuters' Club. Commuting students are urged to attend the meetings on Tuesday or Wednesday (December 12 and 13) in the HUB between 12 and 1 p.m. to help develop preliminary plans.

Seniors Interested in Grad Schools Should Apply Now

Many Seniors who will be continuing their education in graduate school are reminded that the time to apply is now. Most graduate schools require applications to be completed by February or March.

Mr. Powers, student placement director, emphasized that in selecting a graduate school, a student should consult the head of the department, usually the dean, in which he desires to major. This is the key to selecting a suitable institution in which the student wishes to do graduate work. Here the student can receive guidance from a specialist in his field concerning where it would be best for him to apply. The Placement Department, located in Room 111, Koons, is also available for aid. The office has for the students use, an up to date file containing information covering many areas of study.

Fellowships, awards, scholarships and openings for graduate students are posted on the bulletin board in Koons. Additional information can be obtained by consulting Miss Palmer in the Administration Building to secure catalogues on various graduate schools.

Members of the committee Ethel Winters (chairman), Gordon Kravet, Robert Pinsky and Sheila Garbus have decided upon the following qualifications for candidates: The president must have served on the executive council and must be above fourth semester standing.

The first vice president should have a year's experience on Council, a committee chairman, and above second semester. The second vice president must be above second semester and have been on Council for a semester. The corresponding secretary, recording secretary, and treasurer must be Council members.

For those who feel that they will further Hillel goals on an executive capacity, these interviews will supply information and opportunity to apply.

WITH MICE AND MEN

SALVATION'S NEW SAVOR

by J. D. Perry

How many hours have I been sitting here? It seems like years. Will he ever call? I wonder if . . . no, he's not my type. Gods, what a torture. I should be studying for that damn Chem exam . . . maybe I'll go back. Still, it's a shame to sit up holding hands with a Chem book on a night like this.

I ought to give up. I could be something great if I did. I've got brains, Dad told me so. I got 700's on my college boards. Top of the class. Most likely to succeed. How did I ever get in this situation. I really wish I knew. Was I too harsh with Phil? No, you just can't let a guy get away with that. Still, maybe . . . Three weeks without a call. I wonder if he . . .

He couldn't be serious about her. Her! She's a bitch. What could he see in her? I know that guy better than he knows himself. If only I knew why he didn't call. I've got my pride. After all, everybody's got to have pride—some pride. Did she . . . Did he . . . If they did . . . She's the type that . . . Oh, my God, why did this ever happen to me? I'm always nice to people. I pay my bills. I brush my teeth after each meal. Why me. There's so many bad people in the world. Why me?

Maybe God's punishing me for drinking at the party. I never did feel right about that. Still, everybody knows that there's nothing wrong with a little beer now and then. Getting drunk is one thing. But a beer now and then . . . Even the church is beginning to get sensible about drinking. There's so much junk in religion these days. Pastor even said that drinking is not necessarily going to send one to hell. I wonder if he is right? So much depends on him. I wonder . . .

If he is right, then God couldn't be punishing me. God, God, God, I don't even know if there is a God. But I suppose there is. He used to mean a lot to me. Remember that summer camp when . . .

But that was a long time ago. Before I read Freud. I just don't know what to do. Freud is a scientist, and the stuff he said is proven fact. People really do have super-egos and ids. That must be my problem. It's my super-ego that's winning over my id. There should be a balance. I'm unbalanced, that's my problem. I should let my id win once in awhile. I wonder . . . No. People just don't do that sort of thing. I mean respectable people. Anyone can be a slob. It's hard to be a Christian like me. I really have to suffer.

I wonder if those pills really do work all the time? If they're really 100% effective, then what's the risk? Still . . . Well . . . I mean the church just doesn't understand my situation. They don't understand science, that's the problem. If only pastor knew about ids. Roomie was right, man is what he is. Man is the measure of all things. That's what the Greek philosopher said. That's been around almost as long . . . no longer than the Bible.

Who's right, anyway? It doesn't matter what you believe, just so long as you believe something. Even the President said so. Ike was a great man. You've got to have faith, that's what he said. I have faith. I have faith that man can make a better world. There's no limit to what man could do, if he tried. I'm going to try. God, I'll prove to them I'm not just anybody. I'll prove who I am.

I wonder . . . If man is basically good, then why all this suffering. I'm a good girl. I never did anything wrong . . . well, that wasn't my fault. I've lived a good life. Always did the right thing. Why am I so unhappy, then? If I'm right, I ought to be happy. I mean everybody's got to be happy, that's for sure. Why does this happen to me. If there's a God, he couldn't do this to me. If God loves everyone, then why doesn't Phil call me. God must be punishing me. But I haven't done anything wrong. I never . . . if there is a God.

I wish Phil believed in God. I wish Phil was here. I wish he loved me like I love him. How could I love that slob. Three weeks. Can't spend a lousy dime to call.

Maybe I ought to have let him . . . anything would be better than this mess. Hell is a small risk compared with this. Even if there is a God, a place like hell, it couldn't be this bad. This is hell. A living hell. Life is what you make like it.

it. If this is the way God runs the world, then I don't I can make my own happiness. Oh . . . when Phil touches me like he did . . . How much better could heaven be than that? That's heaven, heaven is what you make it. I never felt like that in church! She's a smart kid, that roomie. She's been saying that all along. Heaven is the way you live right here and now. None of this pie in the sky bit. College really touches you a lot.

I wish Phil would call. If only he would call. I'll show him that I love him. I won't make the same mistake again.

Yale Students Demonstrate For Missiles

Nine Yale students were nursing bunions and blisters today after walking 55 miles in support of the Polaris Missile program. But they had happy memories of their reception in Groton, object of the march and home of the General Dynamics Corporation's Electric Boat Division.

The students demonstrated briefly in favor of the program in front of Electric Boat's shipyards, where Polaris-firing submarines are under construction. They received a hearty welcome from Electric Boat employees and were treated to doughnuts and coffee at union headquarters.

For more than one year, pacifists frequently staged protests at the shipyards and urged the workers to seek other employment. The pacifists also included many college students.

Leading the Yale group was a 19-year-old sophomore from Glastonbury, William Johnson. He said the work at Groton does more to insure the peace than years of fruitless negotiations.

Johnson and the other marchers were members of young Americans for freedom—a conservative group. They set out on Friday, stayed overnight in Old Saybrook, and went the rest of the way Saturday in bone-chilling cold.

Pacifists voiced approval of some aspects of the Yale demonstration. Robert Swan of Norwich—a pacifist leader—declared: "We're glad to see them using our methods." However, Swan added that he's opposed to the beliefs expressed by the Yale workers. Swan challenged the Yale men to a debate on merits of the Polaris program. The offer was rejected. KEELEY'S KORNER

by Carol Keeley

The festive holiday season is not far from view. Judging by the looks of the city streets and stores, this season appears to be ushered in earlier and earlier with the passing years.

With the coming of the holidays, UConn coeds not only turn their thoughts to final exams and filling out their Christmas lists, but what to wear to the various winter formals.

I am certain that most girls will agree that during the past few years this campus has seen a change in the traditional formal attire. The "dazzling" floor length and even the dressier-type cocktail dress have been replaced by either a simply-styled cocktail dress or the dressy sheath.

The fashion houses are still creating the new and different—bordering on the fantastic. Yet, they seem to be surpassing these styles with the simple yet attractive dress.

Often the richness is not found in the elaborateness of the design, but with the material.

Celanese

Increasing in popularity are the fabrics of Celanese acetate, peau de sole, satin, taffeta and brocade combinations of these materials in brocade.

David Hecht has created a stunning lavender scooped-neck dress with a tear drop shape, fitted sleeves and a partially full skirt. The dress is made of Celanese acetate and can be purchased at Bonwit Teller for $28.

Another simply, but richly styled cocktail dress is one featured in a pale green iridescent taffeta material. The styling consists of a square neck, sleeveless top and a semi-flared skirt. The dress can be bought at Lord and Taylor's for $35.

Holiday Shades

Featured in a range of holiday shades is a dress created for Loris Deb in 100% satin acetate. The dress has a modified scoop neck with 3/4 sleeves and continues into a sheath skirt. It can be worn with or without an additional semi-flared overskirt. This dress can be found at B. Altman and Co. and purchased for $40.

Stanton Juniors has designed a lovely cotton and acetate jacket dress. The jacket has a wide pointed collar, 3/4 sleeves and is cropped at the waist. The jacket covers a plain brocade sheath dress. The outfit is available in gold, black or Ice at $23. at Abraham and Strauss, N.Y. and Filenes in Boston.

Continuing the theme of brocade sheath dresses, Juniorite shows one in vibrant red and ice blue acetate. This dress has a modified V neck, 3/4 sleeves, fitted waist and sheath skirt. A dyed-to-match hand bag and shoes would make this a very attractive holiday outfit.

Most prominently found in the fashion conscious girls wardrobe is the dressy black sheath. Never out of fashion, quietly dramatic black is appropriately found at many winter formals. Gay Gibson has created a bare armed sheath of rayon and cotton that comes with an "A line" styled coat that features a wide boat neck and 3/4 sleeves. This smart ensemble can be bought at Jordan Marsh.

Leonard of Oppenheim Collins features a black silk sheath with a mock bolero top, scoop neck and longer than 3/4 sleeves. The dress is reasonably priced at $29. Another dress by the same designer is a sheath styled with a square neckline and a semi-tunic effect.

Franklin Simons is but one of stores that features the ever popular basic sheath. This sheath may easily adapt itself to a winter formal if the appropriate accessories are worn with it. This particular dress is a wool jersey and is shown with large size double strand pearls, pearl earrings and elbow length gloves. Franklin Simon prices this sheath at $14.

Symphony Conductor Feels Modern Music Won't Last

One of the world's foremost symphonic conductors has serious doubts about the chances for survival of the music by most modern composers.

Pierre Monteux, who, at 86, is soon to become chief conductor of the London Symphony Orchestra, believes the works of the Russian, Igor Stravinsky, have the best chance to live. But even in that instance he is uncertain.

Monteux, whose specialty is the works of modern composers, rates the compositions of two other Russians—Serge Prokofiev and Dimitri Shostakovich—little, if any, chance for lasting popularity. Some of their compositions, he says, may live for a time.

Less Chance

He gives even less chance to such other composers as Berg, Hindemith, and Mahler. Of Mahler, Monteux says:

"He will not live. He's not a creator. He's an imitator."

In London recently, Monteux made this observation on modern music:

"I see how it has been written. I see what is in the interior of the works of all these composers. They have just a little inspiration in one bar of music and then they develop it. They have technique and technique and technique—and that's not interesting."

Loves Brahms

The great conductor loves the music of Johannes Brahms, whom he personally knew 70 years ago. Fifty photographs of Brahms may be seen in Monteux' studio.

Born in Paris in 1875, but now an American citizen, Pierre Monteux formerly conducted the San Francisco Symphony, the Boston Symphony, the New York Metropolitan Opera, and other American musical groups.

In the years prior to World War One, Monteux premiered many new works of Debussy and Ravel, who were his friends. But even where their compositions are concerned, Monteux is skeptical about how long they will remain popular.

He says:

"Probably one or two works of Debussy and Ravel will live. But when I play their works so many times, I see how they worked it. You should not see the work when you hear it."

Workers Back

(AP)—Workers went back to their jobs in the Dominican Republic, with no sign of a renewal of a crippling general strike. But negotiations to end the Dominican political crisis are still in a state of collapse. Some students stayed away from classes today.

Canada, Dec. 11—(AP)—The Canadian Government has announced that a military attaché at the Russian Embassy in Ottawa had been expelled from the country for trying to buy secret documents from a government employee. The embassy said the attaché had gone back to Moscow, but it denied there had been any attempt to get secret information.

Space Agency Solves Moon Shot Problem

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

The National Space Agency has resolved the method by which our nation will send a man to the moon. All indications are that the rendezvous in space technique will be used rather than an attempt at a direct flight from earth.

Space Agency chief James Webb said recently in a Salt Lake City speech that the United States probably will launch its initial manned flight from an earth orbit. Such a launching, he declared, might save two years in the time needed to put a man on the moon.

The problem is the tremendous power needed to launch a vehicle which would weigh so much. Seven or eight million pounds of thrust would be needed to start with for a direct flight from the earth to the moon.

Webb said an earth-orbit firing would not need that such, but he did not completely rule out a direct earth launch.

In an earth-orbit firing, the launching vehicle would be assembled in orbit. This is a job with terrific problems yet to be solved. But a shot to the moon then would not require so much booster power because the vehicle would be out of the strong gravitational pull of the earth.

Another indication toward the probability of an orbit firing was given last week in Houston by the director of Project Mercury, Robert Gilruth. He announced space agency plans to develop a two-man craft capable of making a rendezvous with another vehicle while both are in orbit around the earth.

Gilruth said the goal is to begin two-man flights in the 1963-64 period, starting with several unmanned flights from Cape Canaveral to try out the system.

Basically, the rendezvous operation would work like this:

An Agena stage rocket would be launched into orbit by an Atlas booster. Ground tracking stations would determine the best possible launch time for the two-man space craft. This would be boosted into orbit by a Tital-the-second rocket. Then, with both vehicles in orbit, propulsion rockets in both craft would be used to perform rendezvous and docking maneuvers.

Gilruth, like Webb, did not rule out the prospect of a direct earth launch to the moon.

However, the authoritative magazine, "Air Force and Space Digest", says in its December issue that the U.S. lunar exploration flights will be launched from orbit.

The magazine's technical editor, J. S. Butz Jr., writes "the first major controversy of lunar exploration program has been thoroughly debated and settled with a firm decision. Officials of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration have chosen the rendezvous technique."

Butz goes on to say "the decision is final, and there will be no parallel development—even for a few years—to see if the direct approach might be the better method."

Butz says the decision on the rendezvous technique was made after three months of intensive discussion by an inter-departmental government committee.

London, Dec. 11—(AP)—Britain has announced it will not deliver the 24 half-ton bombs it promised to United Nations in Katanga Province in the Congo until the UN explains its Congo policies more clearly. The announcement said the British Government is "seriously disturbed" by the way the fighting has developed in Katanga—and is concerned over statements of objectives made by UN officials.

President Tshombe has charged in Elisabethville, capital of Katanga, that the UN is trying to cripple, perhaps even to destroy, his province's economic potential. In London, the British Government says it is holding up delivery of bombs to UN forces, because it wants a clarification of the UN's Congo policy.

Katanga May Use Dynamite

New York, Dec. 11—(AP)—In New York, the UN says Katangan forces led by French mercenaries have enough dynamite to blow up, if they should want to, the installations of the huge mining company in Katanga, Union Minière. A UN aide says this last-ditch potential is part of President Tshombe's scorched-earth policy to be put into effect if he feels his forces are being beaten.

President Tshombe has charged in Elisabethville, capital of Katanga, that the UN is trying to cripple, perhaps even to destroy, his province's economic potential.

In London, the British Government says it is holding up delivery of bombs to UN forces, because it wants a clarification of the UN's Congo policy.

To support his contention, Tshombe cited a UN air raid on a copper mine at Kolwezi.

Eichmann Found Guilty On Counts of Mass War Crimes

Israel, Dec. 11—(AP)—A three judge Israeli court has convicted Adolf Eichmann of 15 counts of mass war crimes stemming from his job as Nazi transport boss during World War Two. They included charges that Eichmann herded millions of European Jews to death camps, was responsible for mass deportations and belonged to hostile organizations declared criminal by the International Military Tribunal in 1946. Sentence will be pronounced after the three judges alternate in reading the 300 page judgment. It's expected to take about three days. Eichmann faces the death penalty under Israel's Nazi and Nazi collaborators' law. He can appeal to the state supreme court and, if the high court rejects the appeal, Eichmann can ask clemency from the Israeli President.

Eichmann Knew

Presiding Judge, Moshe Landau, started the reading of the findings based on four months of testimony that began last April eleventh. Eichmann had been located in Argentina and smuggled to Israel. He told the court last July that he would be convicted and that he faced the death penalty.

The court rejected Eichmann's defense plea that Israel had no right to try him for crimes committed elsewhere and under a law passed years after the crimes by a country which did not even exist when the crimes were committed.

The judgment read today said that the court finds the law in the best tradition of international law and cited piracy cases as far back as the middle ages as an example. The court ruled that a person guilty of piracy has placed himself beyond the protection of any state.

The tribunal concluded that as chief of the Gestapo's Bureau for Jewish Affairs, Eichmann was no better than a pirate. Some six million Jews perished during World War Two in Europe.

Legal Reasoning

After the reading of the guilty verdict, the 55-year-old defendant was permitted to sit as the court read out the legal reasoning behind its judgment. The three judges alternated in the reading.

The conviction of Eichmann embraced the entire 15 count indictment under which he was tried.

Under Israeli interpretation, the Nazi party which Eichmann joined early in the Hitler era constitutes a "hostile organization."

Eichmann was ruled to have been a kingpin in what the Hitler regime labeled "the final solution of the Jewish problem."

The tribunal said its legal reasoning was backed up by the United Nations when it took the stand that genocide—the eradication of any race—is a crime against all internal law and thinking. Thus, the court reasoned, Eichmann engaged in genocide.

The court rejected the defense contention that Eichmann, because he was kidnaped from Argentina, illegally was brought to Israel to stand trial.

Fl'rida's Oath Ruled Invalid

Washington Dec. 11—(AP)—The Supreme Court has ruled invalid Florida's loyalty oath as applied to public school teachers. The unanimous decision says the state law is unconstitutionally vague.

Under it, all public employees are required to swear they are not communists and are not members of organizations which teach violent overthrow of the government. The law provides for immediate discharge of any public employee who refuses to take the oath.

Teacher Fired

The high court ruling was on an appeal by David Walter Cramp Junior, an Orange County, Florida, teacher who was fired for refusing to take the oath. He said he was not a Communist or member of any organization believing in violent overthrow of the government. But he refused to take the oath on grounds it violated the Constitution.

Hartford Hospital Fire Begins Many Reforms

New York, Dec. 11—(AP)—New York City's Fire Commissioner Cavanaugh, says he will seek legislation banning smoking in city hospitals except for designated areas. Commissioner Edward Cavanaugh announced his plans today after an investigation of the Hartford Hospital fire which took 15 lives on Friday.

He described himself as shocked at the apparent delay in turning in a alarm at the Hartford fire. The janitor who discovered the fire has told authorities he fought it by himself for at least ten minutes without turning in an alarm.

Both the New York fire commissioner and that city's chief fire marshal said the intense heat and the rapid spread of the fire was greater than anything they had ever encountered before.

Deputy State fire Marshal Carroll Shaw of Connecticut says he will fly to Chicago Wednesday to supervise tests designed to determine how and why the Hartford Hospital fire spread as rapidly as it did. He and a staff member plan to take with them two large crates of acoustical ceiling tile removed from the hospital and a wooden door from one of the hospital rooms.

Tests will be conducted at the Underwriters Laboratories.

The test will determine the degree of hazard of interior finish materials.

Shaw said this would determine the flame spread of the material. If it develops that the flame spread is too high for reasonable safety, Shaw said, then he would ask the hospital to take immediate action to remove all material of this kind still in use.

Foreign Ministers of Big Four Discuss Berlin Crisis At Paris

Paris, Dec. 11—(AP)—The big four Western powers took up proposals at the Paris meeting today aimed at solving the Berlin crisis. One proposal up for study involved putting Berlin under UN protection.

A report to the ministers from experts on the Berlin problem is said to point to the key problem of whether the West should go into negotiations with Russia at this time, or wait for a more favorable occasion.

Western Big Three foreign ministers agreed in Paris that Katanga Province should be brought under Central Congo government control by conciliation instead of conquest. The Big Three diplomats took up the Communist threats in Southeast Asia before being joined by the West German foreign minister for the talks on the Berlin crisis.

Official sources say the foreign policy chiefs on the U.S., Britain and France agreed that the UN should help in trying to achieve unity in the Congo by peaceful means. Thus, they ruled out an independent Katanga, and military action to end Katanga's secession.

But the means for achieving their ends were left open. U.S. Secretary of State Rusk, and foreign ministers Lord Home of Britain and Maurice Couve De Murville of France decided to meet on the matter later this week.

The three ministers joined in expressing hope that South Viet Nam can stabilize its position against persistent attacks by Communist guerillas. Rusk reported on American efforts to support the South Vietnamese.

They reiterated Western support for a neutral regime in Laos, South Viet Nam's communist-threatened neighbor. The ministers want the three feuding Laotian princes to agree on a coalition government soon.

The ministers, joined by West Germany's Gerhard Schroeder, began formal consideration of German policy later in the day. They are expected to devote much of the talks to efforts to persuade France to go along with the Big Three negotiations with Russia on Berlin.

The BC Game

PLAYING

By Dave Schancupp

With Uconn's 78-71 victory over Boston College last Saturday night, the Huskies have come of age. Rarely can one observe such a unified team effort as the one which produced the thrilling win before a capacity crowd at the field house. Every player who saw action contributed something crucial to the victory either on the scoreboard or off the backboard.

Perhaps one of the most important features of the game was the brilliant play of Ed Slomcenski, who burst into his own by snaking in 19 rebounds, scoring 16 points, and providing crucial height to thwart the persistent Boston College press in the late minutes of the game. What is even more important, "Slom" returned to the game at a critical moment in the second half, and played brilliantly in the clutch to help secure the victory.

Scorewise, Lenny Carlson was again high with 24 points. But that figure doesn't tell the entire story. Carlson increased his season output to 57 points on 18 for 27 from the floor, an astounding 66.7%. Lenny's hustle is not to be overlooked. Perhaps he more than anyone else is symbolic of the resurgence in spirit of Uconn's cagers.

Lenny loves to win, and his determined drive is a key factor in any game the Huskies play. This was the same case last year, and, rather than dimming as the years go by, Lenny has retained his spirited style this season, and even increased his enthusiasm. Anyone at the game could easily tell how much the victory meant to him as the final buzzer sounded by observing his wild gestures of happiness.

Czuchry "All Over Court"

Lenny's partner in the backcourt is Andy Czuchry. This boy was all over the court Saturday, and his statistics speak for themselves. He captured 8 rebounds, third high for the game (behind Slomcenski and Griffin) and dunked the 15 pointers. His aggressiveness in ball possession was in evidence all through the game.

And it seems that Walt Griffin is beginning to regain his poise and timing. It's hard to come back after a lay-off of a year and break right into the swing of things, but "Grif" is giving it all he's got, which, as anyone who saw him play two years ago can tell you, is quite a bit. Walt snagged 12 rebounds and scored 11 points before fouling out late in the game.

Although low in scoring of the regulars, Bob Haines cannot be overlooked. This was, admittedly, not one of his better games, but he was quite effective against the press, and his aggressiveness, too, contributed to the victory in no small way. The ever-present threat of his outside shot opened up the middle in several cases for the Carlson-Czuchry drives.

Uconn Outlook . . .

The outlook for Uconn this year is exceptionally bright, and the fine Freshman team portends well for future years, as well. Boston College is one of the toughest teams in New England, with Holy Cross and Providence College (which defeated B.C. by four points last week) as the other high-rankers. By defeating B.C., Uconn gains stature in the New England circuit. With two games with Holy Cross on the schedule, which should be just as close and just as thrilling as the B.C. game, Uconn will get plenty of chance to prove itself. It is regrettable that the Uconn schedule list no meeting with Providence College. Over the seasons, the Uconn record would seem to merit such a meeting, and, undoubtedly, this year's squad could easily give the Friars a run for their money, and could even bring home the bacon.

Maine Hardest Hit

Maine was hardest hit by graduation, with only Skip Chappelle remaining of the five starters last year. Maine's sophomores got very little game experience last year, and will not be able to carry Maine as close to the YankCon crown as they have been for the past two years. On the other hand, Vermont is a definite contender for first division honors, sporting a plentiful supply of returning lettermen, plus sophomores from their unbeaten freshman team of last year.

* Junior Benny Becton, who is the "tallest 6-2 player" ever to wear the Vermont uniform (he has a fantastic leap, and can match jumps with centers six inches his superior) and who averaged 22.1 points per game last year, will lead the catamount attack on the YankCon top three.

New Hampshire will still not be a contender, although as they proved last year, they can definitely be spoilers. They have plenty of experience, but no wealth of talent.

This writer predicts the following YankCon standings:

- | | |
|------------------|-----|
| 1. Connecticut | 9-1 |
| 2. Rhode Island | 7-3 |
| 3. Vermont | 5-5 |
| 4. Massachusetts | 4-6 |
| 5. Maine | 3-7 |
| 6. New Hampshire | 2-8 |

Huskies Face Redmen
In YanCon Tilt Tonight

BY NED PARKER

The Uconn Huskies will put their three game winning skien to the test tonight when they travel to Amherst for their Yankee Conference opener with the Umass Redmen.

In their first YanCon encounter of the season the Uconns will be trying to start to regain the YanCon crown that they lost last year. In that season he Uconns placed third in the final standings with Rhode Island first and Maine second.

Toughest Test

The game with the Redmen tonight could well be the toughest YanCon test that the Huskies will face during the season. All teams are tough to beat on their home court but the University of Mass. is especially hard.

Last year the Huskies handed the Redmen a close 72-70 defeat at Storrs but the Baystate team turned around and thrashed the Huskies 71-54 in Amherst.

The game tonight will be the third outing for the Umass five that sports a 1-1 record. They defeated Boston University in their opener and were beaten by Rutgers down in New Brunswick last weekend.

The Scarlet Knights handed the Redmen a 77-57 defeat.

Inexperienced

With eight of his 12 man squad inexperienced, Coach Matt Zunic has had his problems finding a starting five. However he has a lot of height to work with and the Umass team may well be the tallest team that the Uconns will face.

Zunic has indicated that his probable starting lineup for the game tonight will be Captain Kirk Leslie 6 feet 5 inches and Rodger Twitchell also 6 feet 5 inches at forwards and 6 foot 8 inch Don Black, at center, rounding the forward line.

Also with height in the backcourt, Zunic will go with Dan Laakso, 6 feet 4 inches, and Charlie LaPier, 6 feet 2 inches as guards. Another possibility is Pete Bernard, a 5 foot 8 inch soph. Of the starting lineup only Twitchell and Laakso are sophomores.

Big Bench

In addition to these tall boys Zunic has several big men on his bench. He has veteran Charlie Fohlin, 6 feet 7 inches and sophomore Franz Von Bradsky, 6 feet 8 inches as reserves at center while Elliot Gventer, 6 feet 5 inches and Mike Johnson, also 6 feet 5 inches are reserves at forward. Guard, Dan Laakso, can also be moved to the forward positions if he is needed.

In the backcourt Zunic will have on tap Dick Conlin 6 feet 3 inches, Pete Larkin 5 feet 11 inches, and Dick Riccardi, 5 feet 10 inches. He is sorely missing the services of veteran Mike Mole, dropped for scholastic reasons and sophomore Jim Painten, dropped for disciplinary reasons, in the Umass backcourt.

Mole Missed

Mole has been a playmaker and top scorer for the Redmen for several years and Painten was the third highest scorer on last year's frosh team and had figured to be an important cog in this year's backcourt.

The Umass team shapes up as a fine ball club, perhaps one of the best in the conference, with depth and height at least to match the Uconns but the Redmen are a little short on experience at the lower levels. Never the less the game tonight shapes up as one of the toughest the Huskies will play.

Coach Greer is expected to counter the Umass threat with the same starting five that have brought the Uconns through three straight wins.

Tall Trio

The Huskies forecourt trio will at least match the tall Redmen with soph, Ed Slomcenski 6 feet 10 inches as the post, Walt Griffin 6 feet 6 inches at one forward position and 6 foot 7 inches Bob Haines at the other.

Slomcenski was one of the big reasons for the win over BC last weekend. He began to look like varsity material as he hauled down 19 rebounds and added 16 points to the Uconn cause. If he continues to play like he did against the Eagles Slomcenski will have a fine season.

Griffin, Haines

Griffin and Haines are well known to all Uconn basketball fans. Haines was the center on last year's five and has been moved out to the corner where he can make use of his fine outside shot.

Haines got only 6 points against BC but he hustled all the way. Griffin, still is the team top rebounder with an average of close to 13 per game. He also is scoring over 10 points per game.

Griffin hasn't yet come up to the potential that he showed two years ago when he paced the post for the Uconn, but he could explode any game now.

Helping out these three with the forecourt chores will be Gerry Manning, 6'6", who is the sixth man on the team. Manning is a powerful rebounder and has a fine touch from the outside.

He will continue to see action as the top sub in the forecourt for the Huskies, Dave King at 6'4" is the next in line for duty. He also has a fine shot and good moves.

Uconn Backcourt

In the Uconn backcourt will be Andy Czuchry and Len Carlson. Carlson exploded against BC and scored 24 points to match the 24 he registered against Yale. Czuchry continued with his defensive and playmaking chores against Boston College Saturday night in addition to pouring 15 points through the hoop.

The top subs in the backcourt for the Uconns are Dale Comey and Dom Perno.

The Huskies have won three straight but they will not be able to let off for any of the remaining games. Top performances will be needed by all of the Huskies if they are going to beat the tough Umass team on their own court.

Umass will be "up" for this game, they have their sights set on the YanCon title this season and the Huskies loom as one of few barriers between them and their goal.

The game will be played in Amherst at 8:15 tonight and will be carried over WHUS on the campus and WTIC throughout the area. The varsity game will be preceded by a contest between the two freshman teams.

Last Chance!

Tickets are still available for the Umass game tonight. They are on sale at the ticket office in the Field House. The cost for these tickets is $1.00.

Undefeated Frosh Cagers Play Umass Frosh Tonight

BY CHRIS LEE

The Pup Basketball team face the Umass frosh at Curry Hicks Gage tonight. The game should prove to be an interesting one as the Pups are undefeated in two games thus far this season and this contest will be their first YanCon battle.

End Streak

However the Redmen will be out to end the U.C. streak at two games. The papoose have a definite height advantage over the Frosh with 14 of 17 men over six feet.

It has been reported that the Umass frosh have out-rebounded every one of their opponents by considerable margins in their games thus far. However the Frosh are expected to make themselves known in this department with big Toby Kimball and a former Massachusetts all-state forward Chris Whitcomb. Besides these two the Huskies have seven other players that are over six feet.

The Huskies seem pretty well set in the backcourt with three very fast guards in the persons of: James Zullo, Tom Capiga and Rich Hyra.

Forwards

In the forecourt at one of the forward positions for the Uconns will be 6-3 Dick Whitney. Whitney doesn't get as many points or rebounds as the other two big men but he does come up with the ball and the points at key times for the Pups.

Whitney is a real hussler and seems as if he has ice-water in his veins when the going gets rough.

Big Club

The Umass club is composed of five out of state ballplayers and 12 homegrown Massachusetts boys. The out-of-state group consist of guards John Yates (6-1) and Clarence Hill (6-1). The forwards are Stephen Bonds (6-3) and Karl Kemna (6-2). The only Connecticut man on the squad is (6-7) James Garro from Harwinton.

Mass Members

The homegrown members are: Eldon Goodhue (6-3), Charles O'Rourke Jr. (6-6), John Reynolds (6-4), James Rotos (6-4), Frank Pluta (6-3), Kenneth Lindberg (6-2), John Hoos (6-5), Charles Kingstons (5-11), Gerald Knight (6-3), Richard Stewart (6-2), James Neary (5-11) and the little man of the squad Steve Winslow (5-10).

Holcombe Hall Volleyballers Win Over Rhody

HOLCOMBE HALL—Pg 7 col 5 Holcombe Hall's volleyball team representing Uconn defeated the University of Rhode Island team in a best two out of three series on December 4 in Kingston, Rhode Island.

The Connecticut women dropped the first game 10-8, but quickly regained their form to the last two games 14-12 and 15-5.

Since Uconn does not have a varsity volleyball team for its girls, Holcombe Hall's intramural champions were selected to represent the University.

Swimmer's Splash WPI 57-38

Reversing their loss of last week to NYU, the strong Uconn varsity swim team dunked the visiting Worcester Tech swimmers 57-38 in a no-contest meet, last Thursday night at Brundage Pool.

Uconns Relax

The Uconns, led by captains Bob Benson and Ted Boynton, took first place in the first six events, and then relaxed for the rest of the meet to give WPI a chance to close the gap.

The Connecticut standouts for the evening were, as usual: Bob Benson, the speedy Brooklyn freestyle distance man; Ted Boynton, former freestyler remade into a butterflyer who came very close to setting a new school record for the 100 yard 'fly' and George Taterosian, who is making a strong comeback in the freestyle sprinting events.

Other Stars

Also, Wayne Childs, speedily making a name in the swimming world; and Dave Sykes, a versatile swimmer who swims the butterfly, breaststroke, freestyle and others. Thursday, Sykes won the 200 yard breaststroke event.

In the 100 yard butterfly, Captain Ted Boynton, of Uconn, turned in a time of 1:00.6, only four-tenths of a second away from the Uconn record of 1:00.2, set by Dick Beauvais nearly a decade ago. Because this is Ted's first real year of swimming the butterfly, he has a good chance to break this record.

Next Meet

Next Saturday, the Aquahuskies will host the strong Rutgers team. Rutgers will be one of Connecticut's biggest rivals this season, and, as a team that turns out many national champions, there is a good chance that they will beat Connecticut.

Pros Compete Vigorously For Best Collegiate Players

(AP)—A pro football war between the National and American Leagues would be detrimental to both leagues and sports in general. Yet, such a battle seems to be on the horizon.

For the third straight year, the two leagues are competing for the services of college football players. There were some isolated skirmishes in the first two seasons, but rumblings of more serious trouble have been heard this fall.

Secret Draft

The American Football League created the first disturbance by holding a secret draft before the date agreed upon, and before the end of the college football season. This violated an agreement between the league's commissioner, Joe Foss, and the College Football Coaches' Association.

NFL Similar

The National League has a similar agreement. The purpose of waiting until the season ends is to assure that the players retain their amateur status, and, from the coaches' standpoint, to make sure the players have nothing to divert them from thinking about their closing college games.
