NCAC Makes Plans For Cinderella Ball

Ted Herbert's orchestra has been contracted to perform at the Cinderella ball Nov. 11 in the HUB, North Campus Area council President James McGuire told the group at its meeting Tuesday night in Baldwin hall ping pong room.

The group will feature a male vocalist and a female trio, as well as an extra string section which will provide music in the HUB Recreation lounge.

Contestants Judged at HUB

Contestants for the Cinderella title will be judged Nov. 1 at a coffee in the HUB Reception lounge, according to Ronald Pivnick, Hurley hall, Cinderella chairman. Judges, who will select six finalists, are: Pivnick; Alexander Lutsky, Windham hall; McGuire Fairfield hall; Robert Gillies, Middle sex hall; Francis Cryswick, Fairfield hall; Ronald Grele, McConaughy hall; Francis Cryswick, Fairfield hall; Ronald Grele, McConaughy hall; Aaron Ment, managing editor of the Daily Campus; and Paul Hoff, sports photography editor of the Photopool.

Representatives from living units who will compete in the contest will be announced later in the week, and Cinderella will be chosen from the six finalists by popular vote of those attending the ball.

Student-University Relations

During the meeting Matthew Shafner, McConaughy hall representative, asked that a letter be forwarded to the Student-University Relations committee asking that they clarify the criteria used in selecting candidates for Who's Who in American Universities and Colleges. Shafner explained that he had been asked by several persons and that it would be to the advantage of the council to know. His motion for the letter was passed (Cont'd. p. 4, Col. 2)

Adams Cops ISO Primary

Joseph Adams, Hartford, received the ISO nomination for the Junior class presidency at the party primary Tuesday. Adams, an accounting major, has been active in his dorm board, the AFA, and the Newman club.

Others nominated in the Junior class were: Patricia Tysza, 7-B, vice-president; Patricia Dube, French house, secretary and Irwin Harrison, a resident of Alpha Epsilon Pi, treasurer.

Executive committee nominees were: George Coates, Windham, Audrey Delaney, Sprague; Sandy Hilton, Sprague; and Alan Reiveman, Alpha Epsilon Pi.

Heading the ISO sophomore ticket will be Al Zarate. A resident of Alpha Epsilon Pi, Zarate has been secretary of NCAC and is assistant treasurer of his dorm and ISO financial chairman.

Running with Zarate will be Robert Mosely, McConaughy, vice-president; Gail Ellis, Sprague, secretary; and Ruth Raymond, Sprague, treasurer.

Stephen Bowles, a resident of Theta Xi, was selected to head the freshman candidates. Others nominated were Anthony Reveaux, vice-president, Hurly, vice-president; Patricia Nester, 7-B, secretary; and Joe Foklon, treasurer.

Paul McMahon, a resident of Alpha Epsilon Pi, was nominated for treasurer of the senior class. He was the only senior nominated at the primary.

The remaining nominations will be made by the executive committee of the ISO.

Mr. Donald M. Snell will address the American Finance Association tonight at the Student Union. Mr. Snell is a member of the New York Stock Exchange.

Snell To Lecture On Stock Market At 3rd AFA Talk

The New York Stock Exchange, America's centralized market of trade and business, will be the subject of a talk by Mr. Donald M. Snell. Speaking before the third meeting of the American Finance Association investment lecture series Mr. Snell will try to clarify some of the myths and misconceptions surrounding the stock exchange in a speech "The Role of the Stock Exchange and the Broker."

Stock Exchange Member

Mr. Snell owns a seat on the New York Stock Exchange and has served as an investment trust officer of the Central Hanover Bank and Trust Company of New York City. Besides clarifying the market's role Mr. Snell will discuss some of the history of the exchange, the exchange as it is today, and operations of the "Big Board." He also will explain the handling of a typical stock transaction besides revealing the services performed and commissions charged by a broker.

The New York Stock Exchange technicolor film, "What Makes Us Tick?", will be shown during the evening. Following the lectures Mr. Snell will conduct a question and answer period.

Accounting Group Meets In 1st Organizational Go

The Accounting Society of the University of Connecticut will hold its first meeting of the year tonight at 7:30 in HUB 101.

Formed last semester, the society is designed to benefit accounting students on campus who formerly felt the lack of any such activity, according to Walter Koski, Tau Kappa Epsilon.

Members of the society expressed their desire to have junior accounting majors join, as well as undergraduates interested in accounting as a profession.

Interested students are asked to attend Thursday's meeting. Further information may be obtained by contacting Walter Koski, Tau Kappa Epsilon or Paul Lukens, Sigma Chi Alpha.

Young Dems Here Speaker

Dr. William Harbaugh, instructor in the history department, told the young Democrats club in his talk to the organization on Monday evening that "The American people, Republican and Democrat have accepted both the body of the New Deal reforms and the economic philosophy which underlies the New Deal's attack upon the depression."

He went on to say, in his talk entitled "The Need for a Resurgence of Liberalism in the Democratic Party", that large elements of the American people on the one hand uncritically dammed the New Deal in its general character, and on the other hand extolled the New Deal in its particular character. Harbaugh pointed out the good done by such New Deal projects as the FHA and the Social Security act of 1935 and suggested that "It is the time for the current generation of Democrats to analyze the particulars." They will find out that neither they, nor the American people want a repudiation of the New Deal.

Equality of Opportunity

"In the purest form the Democratic party stands for equality of opportunity," said Mr. Harbaugh. He stated that it is not enough to defend the record; we must think of the future. "Specifically," said the speaker, "the democratic party on the national level must reaffirm the Bill of Rights which Jefferson and his followers forced on the Federalists, the ancestors of the contemporary republicans."

He continued by saying that the Democratic party must, moreover come forth on the national level with a solution to the school problem. Nowhere has the naivety as the well-meaning futility of the present administration, been more clearly set forth than in the statement that the new Republican party stands for liberalism on human rights and conservatism on property rights. Is it possible to resolve the school crisis in a liberal (Cont'd. p. 4, Col. 1)

Mock Legislature At HUB 207 Tonight

Practical experience in the field of bill research and bill drafting will be stressed in this year's Mock Legislature program according to chairman Jim Lyons.

The Mock, an organization aimed at stimulating a further interest in government and giving its members a more thorough understanding of the legislative process of the state, will begin its eighth year in the Connecticut Student Legislature, by holding a meeting in HUB 207 tonight at 7:30.

Further details on the trips to other colleges and the annual 3-day session in Hartford, as well as information on the Mock in general, will be given at tonight's meeting. Anyone unable to attend should contact Lyons at Beta Epsilon Rho.

Home gardening will be the theme for the 12th annual Student Horticulture show which will be held Saturday and Sunday in the Ratcliffe Hicks arena.

The 1955 show, expected to be the biggest and best since the first one in 1937, will feature several exhibits from students in the University's Plant Science department. The departments of nursery management, floral culture, vegetable production, landscape design, agronomy and fruit production will be represented.

Among the elaborate displays to be presented will be a greenhouse, a colonial garden of yesteryear, a garden of the day after tomorrow and a tuckaway garden.

The greenhouse will be typical of the ones which are found in the backyards of hobbyists across the country and will be filled with plants of particular interest to homeowners.

A weathered, wooden pump and an area paved with old hand-made bricks from the town of Mansfield, along with herbs and old Bennington jugs, will adorn the garden of yesteryear.

The garden of the day after tomorrow however, will be surrounded by a modern panel fence painted starlight gold and will contain a pink ceramic tiled terrace and pink geraniums. Examples of vegetable gardens suitable to plots of various shapes and sizes will be shown in the tuckaway garden.

The show which is admission free, will be open from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. on Saturday and from noon until 8 p.m. on Sunday.

Committee chairmen for the event are: Walter Friend, and Paul Holdridge, general co-chairmen; James Porter, floriculture; Roland Roberts, vegetable production; David Leonard, fruit production; Paul Young Young, nursery management; Robert Dennison, landscape; and Steven Gode agronomy.

WHUS To Give Talk For Heelers

WHUS, The Husky network, will hold its second healing meeting tomorrow night in HUB 102. Persons who missed the first meeting because of fraternity or sorority rushing scheduled on that night are extended a special invitation to attend.

The topic for tomorrow night's meeting will be "Radio Terminology". Also included in the program will be brief talks by the different department heads on the functions of their departments.

WHUS offers its members a chance to learn about the practical aspects of radio broadcasting as well as a general picture of the field of radio.

The main requirements for membership are desire and willingness to learn as well as an interest in radio.

WHUS will resume its broadcasting activities immediately on acceptance of its application to the Federal Communications commission for an educational F. M. License.

A four-foot gold trophy, unveiled last Wednesday night at a dinner for sorority presidents, will be awarded to the most outstanding sorority of the year next spring by the brothers of Phi Sigma Kappa.

This award, something unique on the Uconn campus, will be presented annually to the sorority house most outstanding in scholarship, service to the University, social grace and student activities, announced Gordon Toth, Phi Sigma Kappa president.

The winning house will keep the trophy for a year, and in addition, will be awarded a permanent wall plaque. The first sorority to win the award three years, not necessarily in succession, gains permanent possession of the trophy.

An objective judging system will be employed for three bases for the award; however, subjectivity will be used for the qualification of social grace. Judges are Dr. Henry Dorsey, Phi Sigma Kappa faculty advisor; Miss Elaine Burgess, activities coordinator; Gordon S. Reid, acting assistant director of student personnel; and the brothers of Phi Sigma Kappa.

Nature Again Robs Students Income

Disaster struck Connecticut again over the weekend in the form of torrential rains and raging floods. Many communities hard hit in the August holocaust again suffered the brunt of the three day storm. Winsted, Ansonia, Naugatuck, Derby, and Seymour were torn by the swollen waters. Still other cities such as Danbury, Norwalk, and Stamford suffered damages which totaled in the millions of dollars and far exceeded the losses incurred during the August floods.

For many students the floods have undoubtedly destroyed places of weekend employment (as business districts were literally wiped out in community after community). The parents of countless other undergraduates have seen their weekly income washed away in the form of wrecked stores and factories. Still other Uconn students have lost both homes and property in the flood.

How are these persons to finance their education under such circumstances? Weekly incomes or family allotments have been cruelly taken away from them by the forces of nature.

Following the August disaster President Albert Nels Jorgensen immediately made scholarships available to University students who incurred losses in the flood. Many students were able to return only through use of these funds. We sincerely hope that the University affords the same opportunity to those students affected by our latest disaster. For, as President Jorgensen stated in August, "We strongly believe that higher education must continue even though disaster and strife enter the lives of our students."

Surveys, Surveys And More Surveys

The first in a series of surveys to determine the attitude of Uconn students towards the Union were distributed yesterday.

This survey is the first of the multitude of polls that will permeate the Connecticut scene for the next sixth months.

Surveys will be taken on subjects ranging from "Do you Swear?" to "Who will you vote for in 1956?" And they will be taken by almost every organization on Campus.

However the huge number of these polls should not lead the student to believe that answering the questions are just a waste of time and that no thought need be given to the questions.

For in order to better any existing condition the opinions and the ideas of the student body must be known and these questionnaires are one of the best ways to uncover student opinion.

The Campus hopes that everyone spends a little time answering the questions and that they realize the importance of these surveys.

College Professors Ban Comic Classics

College professors of literature are taking a rather dim view of broadening your classical literature via the comic book medium. In a new edition of the Going-to-College Handbook recently published in Richmond, Virginia, professors are condemning the use of such a shortcut to reading great books.

University of Texas' Richard C. Cole, when queried on the subject retorted that he is "convinced that a work of literature eludes presentation in any other way." He grants that some good movies have been based on important novels but he still thinks much is lost.

"Students who read classic comics as an easy

Let's Not Make The University The Laughing Stock Of The Public

To the Editor:

The University of Connecticut has one of the most beautiful campuses in New England; its academic standards are of the highest caliber; its physical plant is second to none. With all these qualifications, the average Connecticut citizen still considers Uconn a "cow-college". The school certainly does not deserve the low opinion it has throughout the state.

To date there have been three important news stories from the Storrs vicinity. The establishment of Phi Beta Kappa, the completion of the auditorium, and the infamous ban on swearing.

The local (Bridgeport) newspapers made absolutely no mention of the first two items. The Bridgeport Telegram, however, gave the last article a front page spread with a two column headline stating, "Cussin' Banned for Uconn Men; Violators to Face Suspension."

And the hierarchy of the administration stands in awed amazement of the University's poor reputation in the state.

I am not capable of making suggestions that will change the public's opinion about Uconn. But I feel that I can give two concrete bits of constructive criticism which may help the situation.

1.) Give the Public Relations bureau a larger budget so that such events as the Phi Beta Kappa chapter organization and the opening of the one and one-half million dollar auditorium will receive proper recognition in all the leading papers of the state, not just the Hartford Courant.

2.) Keep internal problems of the University within the confines of the school. Or to be brutally frank, instruct officials of the administration to use a little tact when combating unpleasant situations. I feel quite sure that if Mr. Reid had said that Uconn men were expected to conduct themselves as gentlemen, no newspaper in the state would find the statement news worthy. But by coming out and blandly stating that "Any student under twenty-one years of age who is reported to the office of men's affairs for the use of profane or vulgar language will be suspended for an indefinite period of time", Mr. Reid provided every paper in the state with excellent copy.

The University of Connecticut is one of the finest colleges in the country. Why make it a laughing stock?

Phi Mu Is Not Going Off Campus

To the Editor:

Will you please print this letter in your editorial column of the "Campus"?

It has been rumored about campus that Phi Mu sorority is about to go off campus. Like most rumors this is entirely false. Nationally, Phi Mu has a glorious past, a brilliant present, and looks forward to the future with utmost confidence—a future based on its heritage and ideals, its strength and organization, numbers and resources, developed through over a century of continuous development. Beta Xi chapter is carrying on the aims and ideals of Phi Mu.

We believe each Greek Letter group has a place on campus because of the many personalities at the school. Fair play and the proper spirit does not start rumors against any one group and thus hinder their natural increase in membership.

Very truly yours,

Alumnae Advisor, Beta Xi Chapter of Phi Mu

access to an assignment are doomed to failure on an exam," claimed Richard B. Vowles from the University of Florida.

Picture-gazing says Davidson's Henry T. Lilly does not help. The profound themes cannot be dealt with in comic book fashion; the reader cannot gain even a small concept of the poetry, the imagination, or nobility of phrase of the original and he concludes that there is no "royal road" to learning apart from dealing with the original.

Thirty professors of literature from all over the country have given the editors of the Going-to-College Handbook lists of books which they think students entering college would do well to have read. A separate pool of students indicates books they advise high school students to read while still in secondary school. The consensus of opinions of the professors point to the following first twelve:

The Bible, three Shakespeare plays, Huckleberry Finn, David Copperfield, Gulliver's Travels, The Odyssey, The Iliad, Ivanhoe, the King Arthur legend, Alice in Wonderland, the Scarlet Letter, Franklin's Autobiography.

The Going-to-College Handbook is produced by Outlook Publishers, 1 North 6th Street, Richmond 19, Virginia, at 50c per copy.

As illustrated above, the past few weeks has seen the girls on the move in quest of male escorts for Friday's Coed Formal. Below is an account of such a quest.

Floundering Female Finds "Fone" Failure

by Steve Jones

There was a nervous tapping sound coming from the telephone booth. It sounded like Gene Krupa on a bad night. Abruptly the tapping stopped. There was a short curse, then the soft tinkle of a pencil hitting the floor. The occupant of the booth grunted as if stooping to pick up the pencil. Suddenly a rasping voice roared out over the receiver.

The caller, apparently a female, attempted to answer but her voice trembled and she stopped. She cleared her throat, then tried again.

"Is this Sigma Alpha Phalpa? . . . It isn't? . . . Well, I thought they were the same thing and that that was only a sort of nickname . . ." The caller's voice trailed off. She seemed to be straining to pick up the pencil. "Yes, I'm still here . . . No, I just dropped something . . . Oh, never mind what. Honestly! I'd like to speak to John Mckupmflk, please . . . Mcuprmpk! . . . M-c-C-o-r-m-i-c-k . . . Listen, I'm sure he lives there."

No One Here By That Name

The voice at the other end rasped louder.

"But there's just gotta be . . . He said . . . I mean . . . I'm not too sure what room . . . How do I know what room? I've never been in his room. What do you think . . . Well, he just said too . . ."

There was a silence. It appeared that the caller's party was being paged. More grunting came from the booth, accompanied by the sound of plastic buttons squirming against the wall. This was followed by an extra large moan, a soft curse, the noise of the receiver falling and banging into the wall, and finally, a louder curse. A friendly voice came unexpectedly from the receiver. The pencil, which had evidently been recaptured at last, bounced back onto the floor. More grunts and frantic sounds of struggle greeted the repeated salutations of the friendly voice.

The One Tonight

After a frustrating interlude, came a sharp, scraping sound, punctuated by the boyant pop of a burst button. "Hello, Hello, John?" The girl sounded out of breath. "How are you? . . . That's good . . . Just fine, thanks . . . Linda . . . Linda Webber . . . Yes, with two b's . . . Well, I didn't recognize your voice either . . . No, that was because I just dropped my . . . No, my . . . It wasn't anything. Really John, for heaven's sake! There was a slight pause. Then the voice at the other end croaked a sharp, short sentence.

The girl coughed. "Oh, yes, as a matter of fact there was . . . Oh, just a dance . . . The dance . . . Yes, there are a lot of them going on now . . . Well, you know the one . . . The one this week . . . Friday . . . The cogathmp . . ."

The voice faded again and a brunette with big, blue eyes stopped outside the booth and shrieked, "Anyone want to take desk duty for me tonight?"

Shot Down

The girl in the booth cleared her throat again and stammered, "What did you say? I didn't hear you. Can you make it? . . . The COED FORMAL! . . . Yes, that was Diana. She wants someone to take her desk duty. What's that got to do with it? . . . No, I'm not doing anything tonight . . . What? Say, you've got some nerve . . . I will not take her duty tonight . . . no, never mind about the formal! . . . I wouldn't want to be seen with you anyway . . . Yes, good night!"

Next

Outside the booth an attractive girl with large brown eyebrows paced back and forth with a dime in her hand. The caller careened out of the booth, gave the other girl a blank acknowledgement, then stormed down the hall.

With her money clutched firmly in her moist hand, the new girl stepped into the booth. There was the clank of the receiver being lifted off the hook, followed by the ringing of the coin in the slot. Suddenly the girl stuck her head out and called down the hall. "Hey Linn, you forgot your pencil!" There was no answer. The uncertain clicking of the dial penetrated the heavy atmosphere.

There was a nervous tapping sound.

Frosh Grid Mentor Molds Second Winner

by Bill England, Ass't. SPORTS EDITOR

Grads Help Varsity

Although Coach Nick Rodis is reluctant to admit it, he may have turned out another Frosh football powerhouse. The former Harvard line great, in his second season as yearling grid mentor and assistant varsity basketball coach, has come up with another steamrolling outfit which should give this year's strong opponents—New Hampshire, Rhode Island, Boston University and Springfield—plenty of trouble. The Uconn pups pointed up this fact two weeks ago when the yearlings crushed the University of Massachusetts first-year men, 39-0.

Last year Nick's charges, led by the brilliant Lenny King, speedy Gerry Dooling, versatile Harry Drivas and line-smasher-deluxe Paul Whitley, the frosh whipped through four straight, with a loss in the final game the only mark on an otherwise terrific season. These four have since graduated to the varsity where they have continued their fine play for Coach Bob Ingalls. King and Dooling have played excellent ball all year, while Drivas has come into his own in the last few games and Whitley showed signs of last year's greatness against Maine Saturday.

Touch, Hustling Bunch.

Commenting on the 1955 edition's opener, Rodis labeled the yearlings' performance as "good." He added, "It's hard to say after just one game if this year's club is as good as last season's—there is plenty of room for improvement—but I will say we've got a tough, hustling bunch." Hustle was more than evident in the Uconn-Umass game; of the 30 or more players who saw action, not one let up for a minute during the game. Like last year, even the subs were up off the bench to cheer the starters on.

Nick singled out several of the players who looked impressive in the opener. "Moe Coury looks good at the fullback slot, while halves Larry Day and Bill Minnerly showed up well. Paul Poirier, who separated his shoulder last year, did everything well, but he still has to work on his passing." Asked about the line, Nick commented that "some of these boys should add depth to the varsity next year. I was particularly happy with the work of end Bill Stevens, tackle Jim Rich and center Paul Scagnelli. One game doesn't build a football team though, so I'll have to wait until after the New Hampshire game the 28th and the Rhody game Nov. 4 before I actually know how good this club is."

Stieglitz And Uconn Runners To Face BU; Terry Here Today

by Mark Hawthorne

University of Connecticut students will have the chance to see three close battles at 3:30 this afternoon at the Hawley armory field in the cross country clash between Boston University and Uconn.

The two schools' freshman and varsity squads will compete, the varsity race featuring a duel for first honors between Uconn's ace, Lew Stieglitz, and one of the best distance runners in the East, George Terry of BU.

The Husky pacers will be shooting for their sixth straight win this year, and will be attempting to extend to 11 their two year string of duel meet wins without a defeat.

replacing the 1954 little All-American Bob Miller, and second to him in the passing department last season.

A pair of top ground gainers will be flanking Hooper in the backfield, in Andy Wagner and Jimmy Zaiser, left and right halves

Students interested in watching the meet will get a good view of its important parts on the Hawley armory field, as the starting and finish lines are there.

From the start at Hawley armory the 4.4 mile varsity course circles the pond opposite South Campus, Swan Lake, then past Beach to the library, through Hawley field and up around the orchards in back of Memorial stadium. The last leg of the circuit is a repeat of the first loop (around the pond, Beach and the library), with the finish at the Hawley field track.

Terry Holds Edge

Terry has consistently beaten Stieglitz in the past, and has won almost every dual meet he has entered during the past 3 years. Last year he won the New England ICAAA meet in Boston and was first in the National Intercollegiate American Athletic Association (IC 4A) meet in New York City. He finished 62 seconds in front of Stieglitz at the BU-Uconn meet held in Boston last fall.

Stieglitz has improved since last season however (so far this year he has won every Uconn meet by a large margin, and will be running on his home course, although locale doesn't seem to bother Terry.

There is one thing that Stieglitz and the rest of the Uconn team could have this afternoon that is just as valuable as a 500 yard lead though, — some "home-town support". You can give them this support today by releasing a little of that school spirit that the University "intelligensia" insist you don't have, by shouting some encouragement when you see a blue and white jerseyed harrier churn past.

Scoring Sysem

The scoring system for cross country meets is quite simple. The position numbers of the first five finishers for each team are added up to give that team's score. The complication occurs when one team has more than seven runners. When this happens the extra men's final position does not officially count, the positions of the finishers below those being moved up.

respectively. They rated one two in total rushing yardage last season for the Blue Hens.

Bruising Johnny Oberg will be the power house of the backfield operating from the fullback spot. Oberg was fourth top rusher for the Delaware eleven and has been ruining the opposition of late.

Veteran Linemen

Veterans Nick Mergo, 220 pounds, and Ed Malinowski are expected to start in the tackle berths while Jerry Weis and Jim Shelton, a pair of New Jerseyites, operate from guard positions.

Lenny Williams, a Wilmington senior, will receive the starting assignment at center anchoring a fast aggressive line.

The Blue Hens have an excellent opportunity to better their last season record, moving in high gear at present. A win over the Uconns would pave the way for their assault against a host of Pennsylvania clubs, giving them the added prestige to win.

Uconns Face Top Power In "Blue Hens"

by Jim Brannigan

A top rated small college eleven will face the Connecticut gridders this Saturday in the person of the "Blue Hens", of the University of Delaware, who boast a complete veteran squad from their 1954 club which compiled an impressive 8-2-0 mark for the campaign, including a rousing 19-7 victory over Kent State in the Refrigerator Bowl.

Thus far in their young campaign, the Hens have only suffered one defeat, an 18-13 upset by Lehigh, winning the other three contests. The closest brush for the Delaware combine was against another Husky opponent UNH, last Saturday, edging the Wildcats by a 20-18 mark, capitalizing on the conversion weakness of the northern outfit.

Their most impressive triumph yet posted was a 13-7 rout of Lafayette, a club which turned around last week and knocked off the highly favored green of Dartmouth by a 26-0 margin. The other win for the Hens against the Bainbridge Naval Station gridders, an aggregation with a generous sprinkling of many recently great collegiate stars.

Miller Gone

Leading the Delaware attack and bolstering the right end of the forward wall is captain Vince Grande, a 190 pound senior from Watertown, N.Y. The backfield wizardry will be directed by Bob Hooper in the quarterback slot, manner...in a way that will further the concept of equality of opportunity—without being liberal with the people's money?

Educational Problem

In the state situation, the speaker stressed the importance of the administration coming to grips with the education problem in all its ramifications. The only real solution to the problem is a combination of state and federal aid to avoid encouraging the growth of superior schools in wealthy towns with more tax resources, and inferior ones in poor towns. Sources of school funds might be derived from an increased sales tax or a state income tax.

"If the Democrats of this state want to prove their true liberal tendencies," concluded Harbaugh, "they will nominate Chester Bowles as their candidate for U.S. Senator." Bowles is expected to oppose incumbent Congressman Dodd in the forthcoming Democratic primary.

Richard Phalin, New Haven hall, suggested that officials of the North Campus Dining hall be contacted concerning the possibility of improvements in the quality of meals served. NCAC Secretary Pivnick was instructed to forward a letter to the appropriate officials.

A third letter, concerning the construction of a stairway between North Campus and Iota Nu Delta, was suggested by Robert Gillies, who pointed out that one is needed to connect North Campus with the existing stairway to the "F" parking lot. The council moved to send letters on the problem to Col. Wallace A. Moyle, director of plant maintenance; Leonard C. Riccio, University comptroller, and Dr. Arwood S. Northby, director of student personnel.
