"X House" Takes Fifth CIT Championship

Defending Champs Belt AZO 65-45; Losers' Lou Randall Voted MVP

By JOE CAVANAUGH

The men from "X House" flexed their muscles and emerged champions of the Campus invitational Tournament last night as they defeated a smaller team from Alpha Zeta Omega by a 65-45 score.

Harvey Wenz and Bobby Ashmore led the way for the team from Eta Lambda Sigma with 22 and 16 points respectively. Lou Randall, the talented freshman from Norwich, scored 17 points for the losers and was named the tournament's Most Valuable Player. Randall did all that was possible to keep his team in the game as he not only scored consistently, but he also played an excellent floor game.

But Randall's efforts were not enough. Wenz and fellow football player Buddy Amendola, combined efforts to control both backboards throughout the game. If Amendola wasn't grabbing the ball off the boards and passing down court to Wenz, it was to Ashmore. Bobby played a fine game, as he repeatedly set up men for baskets when he wasn't throwing in a hoop himself.

Superior Talent

The "X House's" superior talent and all around play was evident in the first half when they quickly moved ahead by seven points. The only member of the Alphas who scored well in this stanza was Randall. When the half ended, "X House" had doubled the score of Alpha, 30-15.

When the second half began, Wenz and Ashmore hit for five straight baskets, and the game was as good as over.

This year marks the fifth out of eight years that a team from Eta Lambda Sigma has emerged victorious as the Champions of the CIT.

All Star Team

After the game, trophies were presented to the winners by William Ratchford and Wells Twombly on behalf of The Campus. Besides MVP P. Randall, Ashmore and Wenz of "X House," Fran Casagrande of Carpin Cass, and Fred Mackowsky were named to the all star team. Ashmore and Wenz are repeaters from last years' all star team.

Few Names Cause Delay In Selection

A lack of applicants has forced the North Campus Area Council to postpone the selection of North Campus Judiciary Board members until next Tuesday evening.

The nominations, originally scheduled to be made last Tuesday night, were not when Aaron Ment, NCAC president, told the group that only six of the North Campus dormitories had submitted nominations.

Ment added that some of the dormitories had submitted more names than they were entitled to under an amendment to the Judiciary Board constitution. The new amendment limits to two the nominees from each dorm.

"This is the first time," Ment commented, "that this has ever happened. In past years there has always been plenty of applicants and the weeding out process took the council two or three hours."

notes lack of applicants

"There have been several misunderstandings in the selection procedure and that coupled with a week lost during the vacation may explain the lack of applicants," Ment added.

However, he continued, the names must be given to the Division of Student Personnel next week at the latest. Therefore, the NCAC must select the names this Tuesday, even if no other applications are filed by then.

A LONG AWAITED RECOGNITION: Dr. William P. Hastings (left), president of the United Chapters of Phi Beta Kappa, presents Dr. George S. Torrey with the charter for the University's chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, installed here Wednesday evening at ceremonies in the Community House. Dr. Torrey, head of the Botany Department, is the president of the local chapter of the academic honorary society.

After installation, the University chapter recognized eighteen students as "members in course" of the organization, which selects members primarily on basis of scholarship. The evening also featured a banquet and a speech by Dr. Hastings on the affects of the attempts to write in a vernacular version of the Bible and the literary works of Shakespeare.

The affair was attended by close to one hundred persons, including faculty and regional members and University dignitaries.

Club Re-organizes

Young Republicans Affiliate With Other College Groups

In conjunction with national progress the local Young Republican organization has become affiliated with other Connecticut college republican groups in a state organization. Interest in college Young Republican Clubs has spread to over 300 colleges and universities in all forty-eight states according to Marlin K. McDaniel chairman of the College Service Committee of the Young Republican National Federation. McDaniel stated that "all evidence points to a tremendous increase in the enthusiasm of the college student for the Republican party and its candidates."

The national organization places particular emphasis on providing services for those clubs which are being formed in schools located in the so-called "marginal district," where the extra votes produced by a college organization could determine which party will control the next Congress.

Robert Genoa, Theta Chi, former president, reorganized the Uconn branch of the college YR clubs. Recently elected officers include Joseph Fontana, Chi Phi, president; Gene Fetteroll, Delta Chi, vice-president; Ronald Bristol, Chi Phi, treasurer; Carl Liba, Theta Chi, corresponding secretary, and Nancy Carroll, Alpha Delta Pi, recording secretary.

The national committee has made available speakers of national prominence for appearances before college audiences. In this connection a luncheon is being planned for the latter part of April at the Heublein Hotel in Hartford. Keynote speeches will be delivered by Clarence Baldwin and other state Republican officials. The main speaker has not definitely been secured but the state group hopes to hear either U.S. Vice President Richard Nixon, Attorney General Herbert Brownell or Ezra Taft Benson, secretary of agriculture. The aim is to acquaint the interested students with how their group can function to the utmost on the state level.

Plans for mock conventions and mock elections will also be formulated to give the campus at large a realistic opportunity to learn about the campaign issues and mechanics of such activities.

The national hook-up is sponsoring an essay contest for young people 17-25. They are competing for a free trip to the San Francisco Convention next August by submitting an essay of 300 words or less on the subject "Why I Am A Republican." $25 Savings Bond will be awarded to the winner in Connecticut. Entry blanks may be secured

U.N. Truce Chief Urgently Requests Gaza Cease Fire

Tel Aviv, April 5, (AP)—The chief U.N. truce administrator for Palestine, Canadian Major General E. L. M. Burns, has sent urgent messages to Israel and Egypt asking an immediate cease fire on their common frontier in the Gaza coastal strip of Palestine. Major General Burns sent his messages from Tel Aviv after a new outbreak today in the Gaza area. An Israeli Spokesman charges the Egyptians began it with attacks on Israeli patrols this morning, and later not only fired on patrols, but shelled three Israeli settlements. He said the patrols under attack suffered no casualties but the result of the shellings of Israeli settlements was not known.

Before today's fighting, Foreign Minister Sharett had dispatched a letter to Burns demanding an end to what he called provocations by the Egyptians. He referred to incidents Monday and Wednesday in which Israel says soldiers were killed. The Egyptian version of today's incidents charges that 33 Egyptian civilians were killed, and 92 civilians and soldiers wounded by Israeli attacks in the Gaza area. Egypt made its claims in a report to the U.N. Security Council in New York and said the figures were preliminary.

Truce Administrator Burns sent his appeals for a cease fire from Tel Aviv, as U.N. secretary General Hammarskjold prepared to leave New York on a peace mission to the Middle East.

Politicians Banned As Univ. Speakers

It was recently brought to our attention that a very unfortunate situation now exists at the University of Washington, a state university similar to the University of Connecticut. Washington's Board of Regents has imposed a ban on political speakers who wish to appear on campus. After much opposition to the ruling, it was amended to permit students "to hold nonpartisan meetings on the campus at which all of the candidates for any one office shall be invited and permitted to speak under equal conditions."

Of course, it is obvious that it's almost impossible to assemble every candidate for one particular office in one place at one time. Also obvious, is the physical and psychological limitations thrust on political speakers who are forced to speak under such inconvenient conditions. These two factors alone are enough to deter any major candidates of opposing parties from speaking on the campus of the University.

For these reasons, the University of Washington DAILY has been carrying on a campaign to induce The Board of Regents to relax the ban. Two years ago, a proposal to re-evaluate the ban was voted down by what the DAILY calls, a "conservative" Board. However, the student body persevered and is now advocating a new policy for political speakers which, with certain anti-subversive restrictions, would allow any political factions to express their views on the chaste Washington.

We of THE CAMPUS thoroughly agree that the political speakers ban should be lifted. It is unfortunate, however, that the DAILY should take such an equivocal attitude toward the problem. Without realizing it, the DAILY has reaffirmed the attitude taken two years ago by its Board of Regents. The Board has implied two things by its actions. The first involves a vague aura of cowardice to deal with a controversial topic. "Conservative" is a misnomer for actions of this kind. A more accurate word would be static or, perhaps, even ignorant.

The second implication of the refusal to reevaluate is that University of Washington students are of an inferior calibre to those of other state universities. They lack the ability to recognize right from wrong, histrionics from sincerity, and vagaries from substantial facts. The Board of Regents implies that Washington students must be burped after every meal and tucked into their dormitory cradles at night, and protected from anything "BAD."

The Washington DAILY unconsciously endorses this implication by advocating an anti-subversive restriction in its own campaign for relaxation of the ban. Surely, the DAILY can not realize that it is passively admitting the inability of Washington students to recognize subversion. We doubt that students there would even consider the possibility of inviting a speaker with political tendencies toward subversion. Therefore, anti-subversive clauses seem to be an unnecessary addition for intelligent students.

If the Board of Regents of the University of Washington refuses to relax the political speakers' ban, there are only two possible conclusions able to be drawn.

The first is that the Board is afraid to mingle in a controversial situation. Universities are supposedly the seats of progress in the modern world. This will certainly not be the case at the University of Washington. Theirs will be one of the few reactionary administrations left in the State University System.

The second conclusion is that Washington students have little or no discrimination in political matters. We prefer to conclude the former.

Non-existent Founder's Day Now April 6, 1881

Midst all the turmoil and doubt surrounding Uconn's Diamond Jubilee Year, Mr. Clark L. Bailey, assistant to President Jorgensen, has announced that today, April sixth, is "Founder's Day." "Founder's Day" has a rather strange past in that it actually never existed. However, in order to have a specific day which could be looked back upon as being the school's birthday the State Legislature via Chapter 138, Public Acts of 1881, created April sixth (1881) as the day. Confusion ensued over the years as to the exact day. Some thought it was the fourteenth, others the twenty first, others weren't sure at all. Finally on April third of this year the official word was received by way of a Miss Smith in the State Library. Caught unprepared by the unexpected approach of the day, little was done to mark its celebration.

Graduate School Growth Is Cited

By MARY JANE HILL, Heeler

Growing from a program consisting of one master's degree for agriculture in 1920 to 242 master's degrees in 1955 the University of Connecticut's graduate school has evolved steadily until today it has an enrollment of over 1,540.

The early days of the graduate school were presided over by a graduate committee. During the changeover from Connecticut College to the University of Connecticut, granted by Governor Baldwin in 1939, the grad school was rearranged and in September 1940, Mr. Nathen L. Whetten, Ph. D., former professor of rural sociology was appointed the first dean of the grad school.

A separate school in itself, the grad school uses the facilities of all the various schools in the University. Courses in education, engineering, social work, psychology, English, chemistry, physics and other subjects attract students from almost every state and many foreign countries such as India, Pakistan, Formosa, Ceylon and the Philippines. The difference in educational standards among the foreign countries and the U.S. makes the acceptance of foreign students restricted. The work of the International Education Office and other government bureaus has made the job of enrolling foreign students easier.

Pros Attend Night School

The operation of night classes is also under the direction of the grad school. Professional workers who must be constantly learning the newest methods and discoveries attend classes held on Friday nights and Saturdays. The Continuing Education Center is operated for the convenience of these people. Engineers from many large companies such as the Electric Boat Co. and Pratt and Whitney are sent by their employers to take many of the advanced courses offered by the grad school.

At the present time the 1,603 master's degrees and 93 doctorate degrees that have been granted have brought to the University of Connecticut's grad school many honors for its fine work.

The continuing extension of the grad school is slowly filling the larger and larger demand for increased enrollment.

The CAMPUS, however, in order not to let this momentous day go unnoticed by those outside the acquaintance of Miss Smith, offers the following picture of the Storrs community as it was on that would be famous day back in 1881 when Uconn was born. What kind of a day was it? . . . A day like all days filled with those events which alter and illuminate our times, except that Chapter 138, Public Acts of 1881, was there.

As one approached the Storrs Agricultural School seventy-five years ago, he saw a campus which was comprised of rolling hills, a few barns and simple structures. This quasi farm of 170 acres, clotted with several buildings, was given to the State of Connecticut by Augustus Storrs to "increase the proficiency in the business of agriculture." In addition, Mr. Charles Storrs added the sum of $5,000 for equipping the institution and $1,000 for drainage. The School's first bulletin described the location as being "one of the most beautiful portions of the state, where students may pursue their studies free from the temptations and distractions of village and city life."

Silverware And Morals

The bill that created the Storrs Agricultural School also appropriated $5,000 annually for the support of the school. This amount was insufficient and at one time a faculty member was forced to donate $10 for repairs on the biological laboratory. Rogers and Brothers donated three dozen silver knives and forks and one dozen silver spoons to the kitchen. The first library was started when Augustus Storrs donated $13.25 for books.

The formal public opening of the school was set for October 7, 1881. The buildings were ready except for the laboratories. The applicants were to be at least fifteen years of age, were required to furnish a certificate of good moral character from a clergyman. In addition, they had to be able "to read and write ordinary English correctly and intelligently, had to be familiar with simple arithmetic, and have a fair knowledge of geography and American history."

The students' day consisted of the rising bell at 6:30, prayers immediately after breakfast, lectures and recitations in the morning, work in the afternoon, and study hours from 7:00 to 9:00 p.m. A daily record was kept of the behavior and proficiency of each student. If the daily average of any one student consistently fell below fifty out of the possible 100, he was subject to dismissal at the discretion of the principal.

No Drones . . . No Saloons

The students were required to attend religious services at least once each Sunday unless previously excused. All students had to obtain permission before leaving the farm.

The students' parents were assured by the president that: "There are no saloons in Mansfield, no place could be more healthful, and no school more free from the petty barbarisms so common among students." After church service the Sunday-school convenes, and there are two classes, one for the senior class and the other for juniors.

This is a very busy little community from early morning till late at night, and we aim to have no drones here. The general plan has been to give them (the students) all the liberty possible, and yet have them accomplish good, honest work."

Angel Flight Announces Tea To Be Held Sunday

Angel Flight, honorary military society for women, will hold a tea this Sunday in the Reception Lounge of the HUB, according to Dianne Dunn, operations officer of Angel Flight. The tea, which will be from 3 to 5 p.m. is being held to better acquaint the officers of the Air Force at Connecticut with the members of Angel Flight.

The Uconn chapter of Angel Flight, which was organized to promote interest in the Air Force and further the reputation of the University, is the only chapter of the organization in the east.

The group, which is sponsored by the Arnold Air Society, will work with the Society and the Sabre Air Command in the future on such projects as recruiting donors for the Bloodmobile drives, marching in the Armed Forces Day parade in Hartford, and working on the Uconn Military Day on Mar. 15.

"We are all looking forward to meeting the officers and their wives at the tea Sunday," said Miss Dunn.

Labor Columnist Has Acid Thrown On Face In NYC

NEW YORK, April 5, (AP)—Action on the case of labor columnist Victor Riesel was discussed today by the U.S. attorney and the F.B.I. in New York City. Riesel, a crusader against labor racketeering, had acid thrown into his face early today while walking on Broadway.

Federal prosecutor Paul Williams said that he planned to meet later with Manhattan District Attorney Frank Hogan to outline urgent planning on tracking down the acid thrower. Mr. Riesel was taken to a hospital early this morning after the incident outside a Broadway restaurant. He had just concluded a broadcast on labor racketeering over New York City station WMCA. Doctors said that his eyesight may be impaired.

Williams Speaks Out

Attorney Williams termed the incident as an "out and out effort to intimidate witnesses in a Federal grand jury investigation of malpractices in labor rackets." These rackets were mainly in the Garment and Trucking industries in New York. Riesel had contributed valuable information leading to the investigation. A labor columnist for the past ten years, Mr. Riesel appears in 1,953 newspapers. The Federal prosecutor said that Mr. Riesel had been working very closely with his office and added, "We hold him in the highest regard as a man of honor and principle."

"Serious" Affair

Mr. Williams also said that the acid throwing at Mr. Riesel was just as "serious, possibly more serious" than the shooting and wounding of Abe Saperstein several weeks ago in Newark, New Jersey. Mr. Saperstein, an insurance broker, had been involved in an investigation into alleged kickbacks to union officials in connection with insurance for Union welfare funds.

Trinity Reverend Is Canterbury Club Speaker Monday

"The Relationship of Psychiatry and Religion" will be the subject of a talk by the Rev. Allen F. Bray, acting chaplain at Trinity College, at a meeting of the Canterbury Club Monday evening at 7:30 in the undercroft of St. Mark's Chapel.

The Reverend Bray completed his undergraduate work at Trinity and graduated from the Virginia Theological Seminary in Alexandria, Va., in 1952. In addition, he studied at the Washington School of Psychiatry.

In Md. Post

Before joining the Trinity staff, the Reverend Bray served as rector of St. John's Church in Accokeek, Md. Currently he is active as a leader in the Parish Life Conference of the Protestant Episcopal Church, working both in Maryland and Connecticut.

All interested persons are invited to attend the talk, which will be followed by a discussion period.

Yankcon Products Start
To Make Good In Pro Ranks

by Wells A. Twombly, SPORTS EDITOR

Two Rams Make It . . .

It may not be evident at first glance, but Yankee Conference players are starting to make good in professional circles. The tight little brotherhood of New England state universities, of which Connecticut is a member, is slowly coming of age as a Prohunting ground. For years the league could claim only Walt Dropo as a sort of a product. The big "Moose" came in on the ground level with Connecticut, when the Conference was being formed. Up until the past few seasons, Dropo was the biggest name the Yankcon could boast of. The loop was not considered a Lushfield for professional scouts. Ernie Calverley, the basketball playing great from Rhode Island, made a splash for a while but ended his days in minor league play against Johnny Bach now (Fordham basketball coach) of the Hurricanes, now defunct.

The situation has reversed in the past few months as a couple of Rhody grads have made a few headlines in the national sports pages. It may be an omen of future prowess. Pat Abbruzzi, the Rams' bone crushing halfback, was drafted by the Baltimore Colts of the National Football League. Spurning the offer, he went to work for the Montreal ballclub in the Canadian league. The big tank-like groundgainer became the league's biggest star within a few weeks time. The former battering Ram piled up an incredible amount of touchdowns and ended up the season leading the league in ground-gaining.

While Abbruzzi was zipping up and down Canadian football fields, his fellow alumnus Angelo Dagrass stepped out Rhody's baseball uniform and right into a Baltimore Oriole contract. After an impressive spring training session with the Paul Richard's club, the Rhody ace was sent to Vancouver in the highly rated Pacific Coast League. There's a good possibility that the eccentric former Ram, who once tossed a testimonial dinner for himself, may face a pair of former Yankee Conference mates out on the coast. Don Swanson of Umass and Dave Stenhouse of Rhody are both pitchers in the Chicago Cubs' chain and might end up at the Bruin's farm club at Los Angeles.

Red Sox And Huskies In Same Boat, Snow Slows Both Fields For Opener

BOSTON, MASS. April 5, (AP)

—The crew that has the assignment of getting Boston's Fenway Park in condition for the opening of the baseball season has had an extra task to perform this year.

In addition to the usual work of replacing turf, reseeding, fertilizing and painting, the crew has worked 12 of the last 13 days removing snow piled on the park by the two recent snowstorms that swept the East. Park superintendent Hedley Osmond says, "We couldn't afford to wait for nature. There was all of five feet of snow-burying the right field boxes after the second storm."

Osmond adds that the grounds will probably be in shape for the Red Sox' opener on April 17th, but in his words, "the place isn't going to look anywhere as nice as it usually does for opening day."

Uconn Baseball Team Invades Rutgers Tomorrow For Opener

By BOB SOKEL

After a most welcome southern trip that saw them playing outside for the first time this spring, the University of Connecticut baseball team opens the regular season tomorrow afternoon at Rutgers.

The squad has been severely handicapped because of the lack of outside drill and has been slowly rounding into playing condition. Coach J. O. Christian does not recall ever having gone south in the past without any outside practice prior to the mid-semester trip.

The Huskies poor 1-4 southern record is explained by the fact that the opposing service teams had been holding outdoor workouts almost since the beginning of spring training and were in Superior Shape. Despite this great disadvantage, coach Christian was pleased with the showing displayed by his boys and feels that with more outside practice the team should be ready for a good season. However, the Uconn mentor was disappointed in the pitcher's wildness and the hitter's inability to hit with men on base.

Starting Lineup

A starting lineup has not been decided upon at the present time although the outfield is pretty well set with Bill Stevens, Lenny King and Gerry Dooling. The infield will be picked from Jim Di-Giorno, Don McInnis, Ron Calabrese, Bob Dube, Dick Musco and possibly Dooling. If the latter should open at first base, veteran Bill Boehle will be his replacement in the outfield. The opening day battery will consist of Ed Zajac behind the plate and either Bill Risley, Don Kilbreth or Bob Wedin on the mound. A team captain will be named this weekend.

Chapman Will Make Debut As Varsity Tennis Coach

With the Spring tennis season scheduled to commence April 11 when the varsity takes on Wesleyan on the Storrs courts, John Chapman new coach of the Connecticut Huskies, has not yet had the opportunity to get a good look at this year's squad. The tennis courts are still piled with snow, but Chapman hopes that warm weather will make the courts ready for play next week. Meanwhile, practice for the varsity and freshman tennis teams has been limited to work outs in the field house.

This year, Chapman relieves John Squires as coach of the varsity, and freshman tennis teams. A Former Quarterback at Dartmouth, Chapman coached tennis at the University of Rhode Island for five years. At present, he is also backfield coach of the football team.

Captains for the varsity and freshman squads have not been chosen as yet. Chapman, moreover, has appointed Sid Fagan and Les Dober as managers of the varsity and freshman teams, respectively.

Varsity schedule: April 11, Wesleyan at Storrs; April 14, U.S. Coast Guard at New London; April 21, Maine at Storrs; April 23, Massachusetts at Storrs; April 25, New Hampshire at Durham; April 27, Springfield at Springfield; April 28, Boston University at Storrs; May 2, Tufts at Storrs; May 4-5, Yankee Conference at Storrs; May 11-12-13, New England at Cambridge; May 16, Brown at Providence; May 22, Rhode Island at Kingston.

Freshman schedule: April 16, Wesleyan at Middletown; May 7, Nichols Junior College at Dudley; May 10, LaSalle Academy at Storrs; May 16, Brown at Providence.

The Senate Revives
Something Local

By AARON MENT

Although the newly elected Student Senate has only been meeting for a few weeks and has not really set the pattern that it will follow for next year, there have been several encouraging signs that might forecast a brighter future for the Senate.

The most important work of any legislative group is done within the committees, and this year's group seems to be overcoming the weaknesses shown in this area by previous Senates.

At Wednesday evening's meeting, President John Flahive concluded a major share of the committee announcements and served warning to the committee chairmen and to the committee members. Flahive told the senators that he expected each committee to report, in the near future, on their activities for the coming year.

A second sign of the newly found strength of the Senate is the awareness, by the Senators, of the job that they must do, if the Senate is to survive. Most of them realize that they have a rebuilding job that would tax any group within the University.

EARLIER THIS WEEK Dr. A. N. Jorgensen announced the selection of next year's Union Board of Governors. Although many students are not familiar with the workings of the Board, it plays an important role in determining the policy of the Union—and consequently is important to every student on campus.

Yours truly was privileged to be the Student Senate representative on the interviewing committee for Board selections and all indications point towards a continuation of the advance made by the Union.

BEFORE VACATION the annual presentation of Skitsofunia was held, and even before the curtain rose on the first of the skits, The Daily Campus had received letters of protest concerning the event.

Most of the letters said that they felt that the judging was unfair or that the criteria for judging was changed without the houses knowing about it.

Yours truly does not know if the criteria was changed or not, but it seems that all of the trouble can be avoided in the future if a special effort is made to announce the criteria in plenty of time and also to make sure that it receives enough publicity.

*****

HERE AND THERE: It might not be noticed by many, but this year's Board of Governors is different from its predecessors. The male-female split is seven-five rather than the usual six-six . . . A motion to put the Black Triumvirate under the Sophomore class (as recommended by this column) was passed at the Senate meeting . . . Rostov will remain standing even though many of the South Campus buildings will be torn down to make room for the new University High School. Tearing down Rostov is impossible until the new classroom buildings are completed . . . Next week will see important ISO elections. They will determine ISO policy for at least one year.

A DEFINITION: An optimist is a person who believes that he can change the world.

An idealist is a person who believes that he can change the world—for the better.

*****

QUESTION OF THE WEEK: Why has the All-University committee for the Diamond Jubilee celebration told the student committee that they will be unable to hold an All-University dance during the big student weekend next fall?

It seems that the All-University committee should be happy to cooperate with the students, after all the work done by the students in the last few years.

THIS AND THAT: Speech trip to New York and Junior Weekend conflict. Both same weekend . . . TEP's skit in Skitsofunia was the best this reporter has seen in many years . . . In case any one might be interested today might be Founder's Day. It used to be April 21, but it has been changed at latest report. Oh well that's nothing new.

To Inspect ROTC Units

Major Harold C. Demoody, assistant professor of air science and director of AF-ROTC training, is one of three Air Force officers who will inspect campus cadet corps, classrooms and training programs of ten Pennsylvania and New York universities during this month and next.

Major Demoody will specifically examine the academic and training functions of the AF-ROTC program at the signed institutions.

Display On Israel

A display in recognition of the eighth anniversary of Israel's independence which will be celebrated on April 16, has been placed in the showcase of the Student Union lobby by the Student Zionist Organization and will be there until tomorrow.

The articles, collected by the members of the local organization, consist of literature and art representative of the people of Israel.

Ribicoff Calls Flood Report
Sound Approach To Problem

by Associated Press

Governor Ribicoff has praised a flood control report he received yesterday from the Naugatuck Valley River Control Commission. Ribicoff called the report a sound approach to the problem, and said he agrees generally with its suggestions. He is asking highway commissioner Newman Argaves and water commission director William Wise to meet with the Naugatuck group to discuss mutual problems.

The Governor recalled that he has urged Congress to provide for early completion of the Thomaston Dam, and for making temporary flood controls improvements permanent. He said survey work is underway to establish channel lines on the Naugatuck River. He also said that the state highway department has been instructed to work closely with other state agencies, and the Federal Government is planning highway and bridge reconstruction to lessen flood dangers.

The report asked that state flood control funds be increased from one million to ten million dollars. Ribicoff's comment on this request was, "there is no question that the state will be faced with more flood control costs . . . as time passes."

Former soviet premier Malenkov was asked what he thought of British women. He smiled and said, "it is very difficult to love a women through an interpreter."

Young Rep.

from Genoa at Theta Chi.

Robert Petersen, Chi Phi, represented the local group at a dinner at the Heublein Hotel of state Young Gop's, Wednesday. Plans of the state group for the immediate future center on participation at the New England Convention of College Young Republicans at Harvard University April 14-16.

Last Wednesday night Norman Kittel, a law student at Hartford Law School, addressed the Uconn GOP's. Kittel, who also studied at Middlebury College, has been active in government in Tolland County and is currently co-chairman of a study group to improve the existing governmental system in his home town. He also is a member of the state Young Republican Executive Council.

Chess Tourney Starts Mon.
Undergrad Players Welcome

A campus-wide tournament for chess enthusiasts will begin Monday for any undergraduate players on the campus. The first round of the tournament will be played at the individual player's convenience with the semi-finals and finals being held in HUB 209.

Five rounds are expected before the semi-finals and the finals will be held the week of May 10. Trophies will be awarded to the top three players by the club in cooperation with the Student Union Recreation Council.

Allyn Brodeur, an eighth semester accounting student from Project E-1A and president of the club, announced that the organization is negotiating with Brandeis University for a five man match to take place on a Saturday during the month.

At the March 15 meeting, Samuel Reshevsky, United States champion chess player, played 34 players simultaneously from Uconn, Springfield, New Haven and Hartford in the HUB Ballroom. Mr. Reshevsky defeated all the players, with Dr. Elliot Wouk of the Mathematics department being the last player to be defeated, his loss being due to a time limit rules. The champion began playing chess as a child, entering a Master's Tournament at the age of ten to defeat players older than himself. Ranking second only to world champion Michael Botvinnick of Russia, Reshevsky defeated Botvinnick during an international match in 1955.
