Annual Floral Show

Fall Horticulture Displays Feature Student Projects

By GEORGE LINDEBERG

Despite the excitement of a "big" campus weekend with its dances, football power clash, parties, displays and general holiday mood, there is a part of our campus where one can find more color, movement and excitement than one has reason to expect. "Where?" you ask. What can compete with the Uconn-Maine game? How can there be more color than the Homecoming displays? "Who are you trying to kid?" someone says.

The answers to all these questions and any others can be found by visiting the Ratcliffe Hicks Arena this weekend sometime between the hours of 10 a.m. and 8 p.m. on Saturday and noon to 9 p.m. on Sunday when the annual fall Horticulture Show will be in progress.

Background

For the many who have no idea of what a Horticulture Show is an explanation is in order. Way back in 1937 the Horticulture Club in the College of Agriculture decided to put on a special exhibit of student proficiency in their particular field of study. It was also an opportunity for students and faculty to plan together the type of displays which would best reflect the department and college. The result of their idea was the first horticulture show on the campus planned by and built by students for the enjoyment of students and residents of surrounding towns.

Fruits, Produce

Coming as it does at the harvest season of the year one can expect to find on display the fruits and produce of the orchards and fields. These things as well as house plants from the greenhouses will be offered for sale at the Horticulture Store in the arena. The proceeds of the sale go toward the expenses for next year's show.

If you hate anything to do with gardening then don't go to the Horticulture Show. But if there's the least bit of interest in landscaping, choosing good plants for planting around your present or future home, hybrid corn, plastic greenhouses, or the origin of different fruits, then the show is a must this weekend.

Mock Ballots Will Be Cast For President

All students, upon presentation of their student identification cards, may vote today in the "mock" Presidential election, sponsored by the Young Republicans, from noon until 9 p.m. in the HUB lobby.

Since the club was unable to obtain real voting machines, ballot boxes will be used. Club officers will be present to supervise the balloting procedure.

Joseph Fontana, Chi Phi, president of the club, urges "every student to cast his or her vote to make the results significant."

Any club member wishing to gain final information on the poll is asked by Gene Fetteroll, poll chairman, to contact him at Delta Chi. In addition, there will be a Young Republican meeting tonight at 8 in HUB 201.

Jazz Tickets Still On Sale

Tickets are still on sale at the HUB control desk for the first concert in the third annual "Curriculum in Jazz" series sponsored by the HUB social committee.

This concert, featuring Jimmy McPartland and his Dixieland All-Stars, will be held Sunday at 2 p.m. in the HUB Ballroom. Admission is $1.50.

Other jazz groups to appear in the series are Gerry Mulligan, the Australian Jazz Quintet, and the Modern Jazz Quartet.

Rock Reports Changes In Regulations Governing Social Affairs On Campus

Changes in the social rules and regulations were announced yesterday by Robert Rock, coordinator of social activities, following recommendations made to the administration by a committee set up to study the rules issued earlier in the semester.

The changes include:

1. A social activity, which requires registration and which closes at 8 p.m. or earlier, Monday through Thursday in a university residence hall, requires no other chaperone than the educational resident counselor. Such registration shall be accomplished at least one week prior to the date of the activity. Such activities include exchange dinners, coffee and buffets.

Drama Tickets On Sale Now In Auditorium

The department of speech and drama announced in an advertisement in the Daily Campus this week that with the opening of the new Little Theatre in the University Auditorium, a policy of season tickets will be instituted.

Season tickets are now on sale in the lobby of the Auditorium. The price of the ticket for the five major departmental productions this year is $4 which represents a savings of $1 over the single admission of $1 for each production.

The new Little Theatre will enable the department to offer productions that were impossible under the existing conditions on the Hawley Armory stage.

The season, as announced, will include, "Death of a Salesman," November 13-17; "Thieves' Carnival," December 4-8; "Androcles and the Lion," March 19-23; "The Rainmaker," April 2-9; "The Skin of Our Teeth," April 30-May 4.

Season ticket holders will be given first choice of seats for each production during a specified time before each play.

2. Up to three social activities requiring registration may be held per semester on Monday through Thursday evenings in a university residence hall until 10:30 p.m.

Such activities require a minimum of two chaperones and shall be registered at least one week in advance. This includes exchange dinners, coffees and buffets.

The announcement was made at a meeting of all social chairmen of campus social group held Tuesday in the Student Union.

Commenting on the changes, Rock said they were only temporary because they may not prove to be workable. He noted that all regulations on social functions and their changes have been drawn up by the social policy committee, containing a majority of students over faculty and administration combined.

The meeting was held primarily for the purpose of aiding those groups present in organizing and carrying out the various social activities they sponsor.

Rock gave tips on organization and successful planning of an activity in relation to organization and publicity. He also explained how to fill out the various forms used in registering an activity and their benefits to the university and the group and its officers.

Daily Campus activities forms were also passed out to aid the members in organizing publicity.

Rushing Ends; Men Receive Bids Tonight

Upperclassmen tapping for fraternity bids will be held tonight in HUB 103 at 8:30 o'clock, according to Kenneth Reiss, Theta Chi, Inter-Fraternity Council rush chairman.

Lists of men receiving bids will be posted this afternoon at Hartford Hall, HUB lobby, New Haven Hall, and in West Campus at Phi Delta Chi.

Representatives

Two representatives from each participating fraternity are scheduled to be present at the ceremony.

"Tapping is a ceremony designed to facilitate the procedure of extending bids for membership into fraternities in large quantities," Reiss stated.

The men being tapped tonight will be received in HUB 103 where the tapping procedure will be fully explained. They will then be grouped and directed to the room where they will be given their bids.

After selecting and signing the bid of their choice, or refusing all of the bids, they will be directed to an area where they will be met by the representatives of the fraternity they have chosen.

Nine Girls Escape

HARTFORD—Nine girls were allowed to escape from a women's correctional institution in Hartford yesterday so they wouldn't smash a door.

The girls, ranging in age from 15 to 17, were led by one wielding a butcher knife who smashed the glass of two doors. As they approached the third and final door an attendant opened it, saying, "Get out and don't break that one."

Five of the girls were picked up within two hours but the rest were still at liberty more than 12 hours later.

Knowland Raps Adlai

CEDAR RAPIDS, Iowa—Sen. William Knowland of California has blasted Adlai Stevenson for calling for consideration of an end to testing hydrogen bombs.

The Republican Senate leader, campaigning for President Eisenhower, spoke at a $25 a plate fundraising dinner last night in Cedar Rapids. He said Stevenson is "too naive to be President" if he believes the Russians can be trusted.

School Costs Rise

MIDDLETOWN—The cost of learning is going up. The tuition at Wesleyan will be raised $150 next September, bringing the new tuition to $800. The university said increased operating expenses are responsible for the boost.

Adenauer Plans Election

BONN, Germany—West German Chancellor Adenauer has moved to strengthen his cabinet for the 1957 election. Adenauer reduced the cabinet from 20 to 16 members—firing his controversial defense minister, Theodor Blank, along with three other ministers.

At the same time, he renewed his pledge that West Germany will stick with the free West.

Phillip Faces Crisis

LONDON—The awful truth is out—the Duke of Edinburgh is getting bald and, says his barber, the duke is facing the facts bravely. Barber Charles Topper gave the royal head its usual 45-cent trim before the duke left on a world tour yesterday—and he noted the hair was thinning rapidly. But, says the barber, in a non-Shakespearean verse: the duke feels it's fate—a shiny bald pate—and there's nothing to do but wait.

Security Situation: Needs Clarification

Reaction to the editorial which appeared in the Daily Campus last week has prompted the editors to map out a program of critical editorials dealing with the current student-Security Department situation.

Last week's editorial dealing with this topic served as a bomb to awaken those who should, but do not seem to be, aware of the serious nature of the problem. The bomb served its purpose and the situation is now in the limelight where we hope it will continue for the next few weeks.

During this time, the Daily Campus hopes to be able to make a good, critical evaluation of the university's Security Department and the functions it serves. Through a series of editorials, each dealing with one or two particular phases of the Security Department, we hope to bring to light some possible solutions and, if necessary, corrections in order to resolve the problem in a way that is satisfactory to all.

The first of these editorials will appear later this week, and will present the essential nature of the student argument with Security. Thereafter for the next week, we will publish a series dealing with requirements, working conditions, salary scales, orientations, and training programs within the Security Department. We also hope to include some information dealing with the little known functions of Security and perhaps compare these with the machinery of a regular police organization.

The final editorial of this series will be one in which the Daily Campus suggests an agreeable end to a problem which none of us likes. We will attempt to give an objective and unbiased account of our findings and to draw our conclusions from them.

To succeed in an undertaking of this kind, we will need the cooperation of many agencies within the university and the cooperation of students whom we ask not to hesitate in writing to the Daily Campus to express their own views. Naturally, this invitation extends to any person interested in the problem whether associated with the university or not.

The Security Department itself is asked for cooperation in this matter. We know that they like this little more than we. Hence, we assume that they will realize that we are eager not to destroy, but to improve an organization which, at the moment, is the butt of much antagonism and the source of much ill will.

The Daily Campus fully believes that its function as a student newspaper is one which involves more than just reporting news and activities. We believe also that we have an obligation to students and administration alike to improve, as best we can, the social and academic conditions to which we are subject. It is with this spirit and with this aim in mind that we undertake to improve the current situation. We will need help and cooperation. Let us have them.

Panty Raids Passe'...

Rumblings are current that the first organized panty-raid of the semester has been scheduled for tonight, and before zero-hour approaches, it might be wise to acquaint the apparently uneducated war-chiefs with a few of the circumstances and ramifications that always accompany activity of this sort.

After years of observation on the matter, it is safe to say that panty-raids, as a matter of expedience, are on the way out. A series of protective measures have been taken by the administration and Security, who have also benefitted from experience and observation, that make undie-snatching almost impossible, and at the least, downright unwholesome. These tips we gladly pass on to all those who plan to rally to the "Let's go South" cry, not so much in an attempt to discourage undergraduate "spirit" as to prolong their stay in the university in peaceful pursuits.

First, and most important, fellas, the gals just won't cooperate. The WSGC has made strict regulations governing female conduct at such affairs, and the Division of Student Personnel has backed up these rules with threats of expulsion for any coed caught encouraging a panty-raid by exposing herself at a window, exhibiting unmentionables or egging on the aggressors in any way. And Security has found a way of enforcing the rules. Pictures are taken of the front of the South Campus dorms, and each girl is responsible for her own room and the activity that ensues from her room window. Shades are to be pulled, lights extinguished, and no faces are to be seen pressed against the glass.

Even if some of the stouter female hearts are willing to brave the consequences of participating, it has become difficult with the new screens that adorn the windows of the women's units. It is a bit difficult to strain unmentionables through aluminum makes, and the five dollar fine that goes along with disturbing the serenity of the screens does not encourage unfastening them.

Last but not least, a few boys will bear the administrative wrath for organizing the march, and last year it resulted in the expulsion of a number of male students. The risk really isn't worth the reward—if pink panties have become the last word in decorating a North Campus room, they can be purchased at Judith Harmon's for a nominal fee in comparison to the forfeit of fees that will be incurred if they are taken by force and the culprit is caught and expelled.

The last thing the University of Connecticut needs at the moment is a panty-raid, and the last thing any student needs is to be caught participating in one. Right now the students are waging another war with the administration and Security for understanding and better relations, and such an activity on the part of a few rash undergraduates can only serve to undermine the progress that has been made along those grounds. The students do not need the type of publicity that would follow a raid, and such a raid would only reinforce charges that have been lodged against the student body as a whole regarding their collective lack of maturity and good judgment.

So before the stampede starts, it might be wise to give the whole matter a good, thorough second thought, and wiser yet sit this one out.

Every institution of higher learning must make a choice: either to provide an opportunity for a few to learn a great deal, or to offer a small amount of learning to a great many.

A liberal arts college makes the former choice; a university makes the latter. By this I do not mean to imply that university students do not have an opportunity to gain sufficient knowledge. Rather, they specialize in a technical field, and therefore forego the full advantages of a liberal arts education.

Richer Living

But what are these so-called advantages? A liberal arts education gives one the opportunity to enjoy life in a way that specialized learning can not do. It acquaints students with diverse facts, literary achievements and references from which they may draw throughout life.

For instance: ten years hence how many of you will need to know the formula for smelting iron? How many of you will ever need to draw on your knowledge of the bacteria count of a tomato culture? And how many of you will ever be called upon to apply your knowledge of the Malthusian theory?

On the other hand, you will find that the more bits of knowledge you have accumulated in the liberal arts field, specifically speaking: the name of one of the Post-impressionists; the format of the fugue or the name of one of Dickens' characters, all referred to in countless discussions and readings, will increase your appreciation of life.

Since the majority of Uconn students do specialize in a specific technical field, such as physical therapy, pharmacy or engineering, to mention only a few, the university is faced with a problem. They must find a way to offer culture as a supplement to technical studies in order to provide their charges with a well-rounded education.

All-Encompassing Program

The University of Connecticut has solved this problem in a sufficient if not inspired way. They have arranged one of the most all-encompassing cultural programs in the country for their students this year.

The University Auditorium, under the direction of Willard Sistare, has engaged musicians, actors and speakers intended to orientate the student body to the mysteries of liberal arts appreciation.

Leading off with the second appearance of the Canadian Players of Stratford, Canada, in Peer Gynt by next Monday evening, the auditorium program for the year will include two other special 75th anniversary events. On January 14 the Ballet Basque de Biarritz, noted French ballet group who are making their first United States tour, will perform. They will be followed by the noted Jaroff Don Cossack chorus on April 24.

The Concert Series, initiated last year with the opening of the new auditorium, piled up a total attendance of approximately 14,820 persons last season, concrete proof that the students at least in part recognize the need for cultural programs.

This year the Concert Series again offers a varied and outstanding group of performers. Less than 200 tickets are still available on either a seasonal basis or for single performances.

Chamber Music

In addition to the concert series the auditorium will offer four chamber music concerts, to be presented on Nov. 4, Jan. 8, Mar. 7 and Mar. 26. The Solisti de Zagreb, a fourteen member chamber music string ensemble will open the season in the auditorium itself. They will be followed by the New York Woodwind Ensemble, a group of five players from the New York Philharmonic Orchestra; Zabeleta, a harpist, and the Kroll String Quartet, all performing in the little theater.

In conjunction with the annual Armed Forces Day Mr. Sistare has engaged the United States Air Force Band, including the famous Singing Sergeants, to perform during the evening preceding the military exercises.

The Fine Arts Festival, presented by the Student Union, and the concerts which the musical groups of the Music Department will present during the year will provide a "filling in" for the parts of the "get cultured" campaign which the Auditorium staff has initiated.

Collection Of Plays

The Speech and Drama Department will also supplement this drive with the presentation of a number of plays, beginning with Miller's "Death of a Salesman," which will open the Little Theater on Nov. 13.

The opportunities by which the students can enrich their educations, and therefore their lives, are being extended to them. Many of the events are free. The others are offered at reasonable prices.

There is no excuse for the often-heard statement: "But you can't expect to get that sort of thing from a technical education at a state university." For this university has left the way open for its students.

You, the members of the student body, must realize this and reap the rewards.

To the Editor:

I commend highly the article on Security in Thursday's Campus. There is indeed a need for a competent police force on this campus. I am sure Uconn students would be willing and happy to cooperate with the present Security force if they showed a bit of compassion and fair play.

Inundation In Progress A Year Ago And Results One Year Later

Old Mill In Coventry — During

One year ago today, Photo-pool editors Dave Jacobson and Fred Kaufman took two pictures of flood threatened areas. The two sites caught by their cameras were the Mansfield Hollow Dam and the Old Mill in Coventry.

At that time torrents of water were pouring over the dam by the Old Mill. Later, as the waters rose still higher, they swept the mill down stream. The second picture shows the mill ruins.

The second set of pictures are of the water marker set on the Mansfield Dam. At the time of the flood the water had risen to the 27 foot mark. It is now below the 4 foot marker.

Angel Flight, Womens' Military Organization Commemorates First Birthday On Campus

By RUTH WRUBEL

The University of Connecticut may be celebrating its 75th birthday, but Angel Flight is commemorating its first in more than one respect. It is the first women's organization to be dressed in military uniform and also the first women's drill team on campus.

Of course, the girls get teased about being "angels," but they are proud of their squad, their uniforms and their aims. It is truly with the spirit of service to be the university, to the community and to themselves that these girls have formed this club.

Angel Flight, organized on this campus in September 1955, is a women's civilian auxiliary Air Force Flight Squad. It has a membership of sixteen girls and a flight leader, which is the actual Air Force regulation-size unit. Arnold Air Society, an honorary AFROTC organization, sponsored the new club. A sister squad at the University of Maryland was also very helpful in the formation of this university's branch.

To be eligible for membership, a girl shows interest in joining, has to be in the freshman nursing class, or the sophomore or junior class in any other college, and has to maintain a 2.0 QPR. She is then nominated by either members of the Arnold Air Society or Angel Flight. Since the unit must be kept at the regulation size of seventeen, there is a constant waiting list that the group uses to replace its old members.

The objectives of Angel Flight as stated in their constitution are:

1. To advance and promote interest in the Air Force.
2. To obtain information about the military services.
3. To aid the progress of the Arnold Air Society at the University of Connecticut.

With these objectives in mind, the group holds business meetings every other Wednesday evening at the HUB at which time there are educational lectures given or films shown. It takes field trips to various Air Force bases around this area, and helps the Arnold Air Society with some of their social functions.

The girls also plan to hold an annual coffee for the military personnel and their wives on campus.

Master Sergeant Camptelle of the Army ROTC will train Uconn's first women's drill unit. Members of the Angel Flight have drill practice one hour each week in preparation for marching on Armed Forces Day in Hartford and also on other occasions.

For these special activities and also for all meetings of the club, Angel Flight members will be outfitted in an Air Force blue skirt, weskit, cape which is lined in white satin, hat and heels, with white long sleeve blouses and gloves completing the ensemble. The uniforms will be ready within a few weeks.

Angel flight advisors are Mrs. Schroeck and Mrs. Railway, wives of military personnel officers. Officers of the club for this year are: Flight Leader, Edna Schipke, 2-C; Operation Officer, Lillian Michel, Kappa Alpha Theta; Adjutant Recorder, Elaine Leary, Kappa Alpha Theta; Comptroller, Edna Mae Purcell, 3-B; Public Relations, Lorraine Duval, Kappa Alpha Theta; Publications Officer, Lucille Duva, Kappa Alpha Theta; and Historian, Elberta Moreland, Kappa Alpha Theta.

To the Editor:

Attention Students:

It has come to my attention that a certain group on campus has been distributing literature throughout the various men's dormitories, informing the residents of a proposed panty raid to take place tonight.

Students who participate in this type of mob action do not realize the detriment they incur to the student body as a whole. Today all eyes are on the University of Connecticut. There are several persons in high positions in the state who feel that the students of this university are a very immature lot. Actions such as this only serve to justify such an opinion.

Last year a similar event took place — with serious consequences. Students involved were dismissed from school, received suspended jail sentences, and only as a result of an undertaking which they felt to be an admirable display of school spirit. The publicity which resulted from last year's riot (panty raid) brought disgrace upon the university and the student body. Obviously, if the leaders of this activity could have foreseen its outcome, it would never have taken place.

As intelligent students on the college level, we should profit by the mistakes of those who have preceded us. Those who plan to participate in this event scheduled for tonight — take note of what I have mentioned above and ask yourselves this question, "Do I want to run the risk of jeopardizing my personal reputation as well as the name of the school which I attend?" I feel certain that your answer will be negative.

Therefore, may I encourage you to continue your efforts to increase spirit among the students, BUT, direct your energy toward the constructive and worthwhile areas of university life.

On Thursday night a pep rally will be held prior to the opening of Homecoming Weekend. Here is an opportunity to display the right type of spirit, and in the right manner. Let's take advantage of it!

Sincerely,
John P. Flahive, President
Associated Student Government

To the Editor:

This letter is an invitation to every senior, junior, sophomore and freshman on campus to attend the Booster Section meeting Thursday evening in the Field House.

After the notable display of enthusiasm at the Rutgers game it seems as though every Uconn student would be more than willing to attend the Booster Section meeting. It appears to me that our splash of school spirit was just the incentive the Uconn squad needed to gain their first victory.

Considering the record-breaking defeat of Massachusetts, spirit at Uconn should be at a new high. Next Saturday loyalty and enthusiasm should be at its peak for Uconn will be meeting with the presently undefeated "black bears" of Maine. The boys from "up North" will be in a position to clinch the Yankee Conference title by defeating Connecticut.

As one can see, Saturday's game will be a crucial one. Our boys will need backing and support in great quantities — Don't let them down!

Come to the Booster Section meeting, Thursday evening at 7:30 in the Field House.

Thank you,
Bob Bonitati

Flahive Defends Senate; Cites Growth, Development

"What is the actual function of the Student Senate?" is a question which many students have been asking in the past few days. In a recent interview with the Daily Campus, John Flahive, president of the Student Senate, stated some of the accomplishments of this governing body.

Question: "How is the Student Senate organized?"

Answer: "As directed by the Board of Trustees, the Student Senate is the highest legislative, judicial and executive branch of the Associated Student Government. Because of the growth of the university, the Senate, in order to maintain a workable student government, has formed subsidiary governing bodies known to the students as NCAC, WSCG, CCAC, and all judiciary boards. These groups, whose responsibility is to govern the students, are in turn responsible to the Student Senate."

Question: "Would you please state some of the recent accomplishments of the Senate?"

Answer: "Some of the pieces of legislation which have been initiated and passed by the Student Senate and which affect the overall university policy are (1) the changes in the university calendar, (2) the compulsory attendance at classes for freshmen and sophomores, (3) the establishment of a freshman student counseling program and (4) the exam-free day for voting at national elections on November 6.

"Besides these accomplishments, the Associated Student Government is the financier for all major student organizations, and many minor ones. Every organization is responsible to the Student Senate. If the Senate feels that an organization is being run detrimentally to the student body the Senate has the power to take action to remedy the situation."

SUNDAY JAZZ STAR: Jimmy McPartland and His Dixieland All-Stars will be featured in the first of the Student Union's "Curriculum in Jazz" series Sunday at 2 p.m. in the Student Union Ballroom.

McPartland is one of the veterans of Dixieland jazz. The lyric cornetist received his training under Professor Louis Armstrong and graduated cum laude with Bix Biederbeck from the Chicago "School" in the late twenties.

Heading a Dixieland group behind the bar in New York's Metropole restaurant, McPartland is a few streets away from his wife, Marion, who plays modern piano at the Hickory House.

Cards Display School Scenes In Color Pix

New colored picture post cards are now available at the Student Union control desk.

Printed by the Transcolor Corporation of New York, the post cards comprise a new series offered this year.

Many familiar campus scenes are depicted, stressing the inside views of many of the buildings rather than the outdoor scenes as in the past.

The lower lounge of the auditorium, the music lounge of the HUB, two views of the interior of the auditorium, the inside of a girls' dormitory lounge, the United Nations room at the HUB, the browsing room at the HUB, and Brundage Memorial Pool in the Field House are among the subjects pictured.

Safety List Shows Half State Towns Free Of Fatalities

Almost half of the towns of the state were traffic fatality-free as of October 1, according to the Connecticut Safety Commission's "honor roll" of 81 towns.

In the congested area group, Derby's unbroken record of seven and a half years is notable. Torrington, however, was the largest city to go three-fourths of the year without a traffic death. Other towns with more than 10,000 population with no traffic deaths for the period are Ansonia, Naugatuck, Shelton, East Haven, Water-town, and Winchester.

Putnam Leads

In the group from five to ten thousand population, Putnam leads the list in point of population, followed by Glastonbury, Plainfield, New Canaan, Seymour, Berlin, Newtown, Plymouth, Cheshire, New Milford, Griswold and Thompson. In the group under 5,000 population there were 61 towns on the "honor roll."

Herter States He Might Try 'Intervention'

Boston (UP)—Governor Christian Herter said today he assumed a governor can intervene if the New Haven Railroad drops 39 commuter lines as proposed.

The governor made the remark at a news conference as a special commission opened an inquiry into the New Haven's announced plans to curtail branch lines.

In response to a newsman's query, Herter said he had no authority to intervene under emergency wartime powers because they have expired.

However, Herter, in elaborating, said, "I assume a governor could use emergency powers, but I assume they would be challenged."

Undefeated Maine Footballers Here Saturday

Local Booters Meet Indians

There will be an Indian invasion this afternoon on Gardner Dow Field at 3 o'clock. The Dartmouth soccer squad will provide the opposition for the Uconn booters, who will be looking for their second straight win.

The Big Green, which finished last season with a 6-5 record including a victory over the Huskies, will have eight lettermen from the past year on the team. The visitors, however, will be minus two all star performers, goalie Clem Malin and center half Ethan Weiss who have graduated. Bob Googins and Butch Waid, along with sophomore goalie Randy Malin brother of the graduated star, will be the big men for the Indians.

Local Stars

Billy Wiberg, who has scored two goals so far this season, Captain Doug Allen and Roy Johnson will be the men for the Indians to watch on the Uconn offense, while lackfield men like Pete McDewitt and Ed Harrison can be counted on for a good defensive performance.

FULLBACK GLENN McLELLAN gained his first scores of the present grid campaign when he tallied twice in last Saturday's 71-6 rout of Massachusetts at Amherst.

A sophomore from Winsted, McLellan scored both of his touchdowns during the final period of play in which the Huskies scored 26 points. His first romp into the end zone came as the result of a 35-yard run while his next TD was tallied on a plunge during the closing minutes of play.

The team's other three fullbacks, Paul Whitley, Moe Coury and Norm Chaban also saw action as well as the entire blue and white roster.

By DICK BRUSIE

Last Saturday's 71-6 humiliation of the Umass Redmen left Uconn football rooters with a distinctly different chant from the old, familiar, "Wait 'till next year." It also left head football mentor Bob Ingalls with the first optimistic look to the future that he has had since taking over the reins of the Husky eleven five years ago.

Because of the insurmountable lead which the Nutmeggers piled up as the contest progressed, Ingalls was able to substitute freely, thus giving the starters a well-deserved rest. As a result, the last five Connecticut touchdowns were the work of the second and third stringers.

Subs Perform Well

The Husky coach was very realistic about the one-sidedness of the contest. "It was just one of those days when we got all the breaks and took advantage of them," he stated. Ingalls wasn't out to rub it in either. He substituted early and frequently. The subs, like the starters, did everything to near-perfection.

Substitute halfback Bull Godwin was the visitors' only casualty. He suffered a sprained foot midway through the second half and was removed from the game. Sidelined since the season's opener, quarterback Jerry Dooling, according to Ingalls, did a fine job during his brief appearance. The coach also indicated that there is a possibility that Dooling will start against Maine Saturday. He is planning no further lineup changes for he feels that he "doesn't want to disturb the boys while they're playing so well."

Strong Running Attack

Ingalls again praised the team's running attack. Once more this was centered around Lenny King, the Huskies number one ground-gainer, who continually got off on long, lengthy scoring jaunts. Uconn's 439 total rushing yardage set a new Yankee rushing standard.

The Connecticut forward wall was practically invincible against the inept running and passing plays of a far underexperienced Umass club. The 131 yards which the Redmen picked up created a new Conference defense record. Ingalls believes that the men who had seen little action thus far should take some of the credit for this feat. Jim Rich, Dick Painter, Joe Crisco and Joe Salafia were among those responsible for the low total yardage amassed by the Redmen.

Cooper Leads Bears

The former Michigan star isn't fooling when he says that Maine will pose a serious problem. Their attack is paced by all around end Thurlow Cooper and alternate quarterbacks, Paredy and Costi. Paredy, a service returnee, has been directing the Black Bears for most of the season and is rated as a strong triple threat.

Last year the Bears emerged as the victors in a 13-0 contest played at Orono. A win over the Uconn Saturday would make them Yankee Conference champions for the '56 season. Ingalls and his boys will be out Saturday to make sure this doesn't happen.

Committee Begins Selection Process For 'Who's Who'

The Student-University Relations Committee has begun its annual process of picking campus leaders for Uconn membership to "Who's Who in American Colleges." The major qualification considered by the committee in selecting candidates is leadership ability as expressed through university activities.

The Student-University Relations Committee is composed of six faculty members; two representatives each from the sophomore, junior and senior classes; the WSCG president; the Student Senate president and the editor of the Daily Campus. Nominations for this honor can be made by the Student Senate, the Student-University Relations Committee, deans of schools, and certain activities advisors.

From these nominations as many as 30 students can be picked for "Who's Who" provided that they have shown outstanding ability in organizing and completing undertaken activities.

The selection process will be carried on for several months by the Student-University Relations Committee. Names of those selected will remain secret until sometime in the spring. At that time a coffee will be held to honor all those selected at Uconn for membership in "Who's Who in American Colleges."

Group To Discuss Old Age Problems During Conference

Nutrition among the state's senior citizens will be explored Oct. 24 at the fourth annual Conference on Aging at the university.

The morning program, which includes a general session preceded by a brief business meeting of the Connecticut Society of Gerontology, will get under way at 9 a.m. with registration on the mezzanine floor of the HUB.

At the general session, a message of welcome will be delivered by President Albert N. Jorgensen.

A panel discussion will be conducted on "Food and Thought" during the morning session with Harleigh B. Trecker, dean of the School of Social Work, as moderator. Among the panel members will be Donald P. Kent, assistant professor of sociology.

Ten workshop discussions, will be devoted to nutritional programs, emotional and social dynamics of nutrition, nutrition and dental health, research and weight control and snacks and treats when each group meets.

USA Party Finishes Slate; Campaigns Open Next Week

The United Student Association has completed its slate of candidates for the class elections November 14. USA president Dick Jacobs, Phi Epsilon Pi, stated, "This year the USA has one of the finest and strongest party slates in a number of years. We have been victorious in the past and we can be even more successful this year."

The USA candidates will begin house-to-house campaigns some time near the middle of next week. The party will try also to gain use of WHUS as another campaign medium.

The first USA candidates meeting was held yesterday afternoon in the HUB. All those present began work on USA policy and platform.

Meetings for individual class candidates are planned. Each class will present and support its individual class platform along with overall USA platform.

Tickets For Play Are Selling Fast

Willard Sistare, manager of the Auditorium, reports that the ticket sale for the Canadian Players production of "Peer Gynt" Monday night, October 22 has been very brisk.

According to the manager, many of the students have been buying reserved seats. He suggests that other students planning to buy reserved seats should do so immediately. Student tickets are 50 cents and reserved seats are $1.

Civil Defense Training Course Stresses Group Cooperation

"Everyone is part of Civil Defense," A. A. Morrisette, deputy regional CD defense administration Monday told 40 students at the CD staff college training course here.

"It is all of us working together, within our own areas, and in our own particular lines of endeavor, to prepare for any eventuality," he continued.

The staff college training course of CD workers from throughout the state and New England and is meeting here for week-long sessions. Morrisette was key-note speaker for the program, conducted by State Civil Defense at the Continuing Education Center.

Among the other speakers were Col. Theodore Gahan, chemical officer, First Army; Dr. George Rumney of the department of geography and geology; Maj. Eugene DeLoria, William Hansen and Jonathan L. Johnson, all of the state CD; Willard Whitfield, regional CD administrator; Murton Lyons, CD communications officer; Chief Henry G. Thomas of Hartford, and State Police Capt. Leslie W. Williams.

Colonel Gahan discussed the effects of biological and chemical weapons. He pointed out that "work in these fields has to be continued on a sufficient scale to provide adequate defenses against the intentional use of disease agents."

"Unlike the development of atomic bombs and other secret weapons of devastation it is possible for many countries, large and small, to develop agents of biological warfare without vast expenditures of money or the construction of huge production facilities," he stated.

He pointed out that Russia now has military power more than five times as large as Hitler's was and that "it is a threat to our nation that defies the imagination."
